"He's not the kind of fellow you can pick up in the tram," he said. "He's got a hired car which Baker-guy has. Sometimes he goes in motor-bus. It's on the road near the Crystal Palace. He lives there with his wife—no trouble. He's been married for years, of course, but I don't know if there's any children. Some of Harlow's pals live in the neighborhood, and I've seen him talking to them."

"You are certain that Ellesbury is dealing with Harlow?"

"Working with him?" Hill spat contemptuously. "Not exactly working for him. I'll chuckle say he was. They're the best of friends. I've seen them together—you remember the police station and once Harlow promoted to a grocer. Ellesbury is very friendly with him. I thought the ground and gave the order to his batmen. Ellesbury knew he was a sort of strike breaker, foreign to the company's affairs, but Ellesbury had to be cool back to Hall or Germany, or wherever they came from. That's how Harlow got his men. Ellesbury's got a big interest in the London open cast coal mines, and he won't secure that he was ready to pay a big price for labor."

Mr Ellesbury had his home in a large gauzt house between Norwood and Anerley It was built on even in the days when square, box-shaped dwellings testified to the strange austerity of the Victorian architects and stucco was regarded as an effective and inexpensive covering but brickwork. It was in shape a cube, from the low centre of which the roof rose in a slope to run a long fight of stairs steps connected with a handrail. It was the odd days and odd numbers set at regular intervals on three sides, and was a mansion in the middle of which blinds bent as air of distinction.

Royston House stood somewhere in the centre of two acres of land, and could boast a rosery, a croquet lawn, a kitchen garden, a fruit-walled, some hedges, and a drinking fountain. Display Ancient Art Of Camouflage To Deceive Enemy

Besides black - out precautions against air raids, steps have been taken in Egypt to protect that country's historical treasures from damage. Among the subjects reserved to a place of safety in the first example of the employment of camouflage to deceive an enemy in war time. It consists of an ancient carving of a group of Egyptian soldiers at the time of Ramesses II. Their yellowish-brown uniforms and shields are painted with irregular black stripes that gives the effect of tiger skins. So far from being a modern masonry camouflage is 3,000 years old.

ged to chains through the Awful Arm Harlow rushed at the apothecary of his triumph. And always Ellesbury was there leering thank-ing putting a derisive finger at the man he had ruined, or else he was sitting in the corner of the Tube-train set with a suitcase packed with fabulous sums of money that he had forced from his master

Mr Ellesbury bit at his nails.

Soon money would be coming into Rates he would spend days inquiring checks clerks' details—details.

"About the same — certainly no worse."

"That's fine! Is there anything you want?"

"No, thank you—I have everything."

This exchange varied slightly from day to day but generally it followed on those lines

Ellesbury had come back into from Rates after a thing day Usually he directed the Rain Syndicate from his own office, indeed, he had only approved visitsly in the operations of the company But that accomp of Harlow's was on no ongoing a scale that he must appear in the daylight, and his connection with a concern suspected by every reputable firm in the City must be kept from property And that hurt him. He, who had secretly robbed his clients, who had been in system-ic embezzlement and might now but for Harlow's generosity be in the dock at Stratford Barlow, have been in-mate of Dartmoor, wished to be thought well and respected by his known connection with a firm which was openly known as unscrupulous.

He was the creature of Harlow, his slave The new place in his outfit-ting was the most galling of all. It was his secretaries to brand upon the ignominy of the hated brand which was to him a malignity that nose, seeing his mild, worn face, would suspect.

Mr Ellesbury had known the very incarnation of evil, a devil on earth who had loosed his hate on him and his loved ones. And of late he had certain signs a novel course of dreaming. It was the dream of a child, eagerly warns Lavelier A good laugh is available in the Tube. Open the windows and let the sunshine in.

New York Paper Says Americans Who Fail To Understand

The New York Herald Tribune rapped admirably those Americans who still are not aware that the greatest battle in the history of civilization is under way

Pressing out that Great Britain is the last pin holding together the fragments of the continental world to which we have brought up," the paper said

"It is almost incredible that Americans can still stand unconcernedly wrapped in the illusion that a world already gone partly along with contentment as fast as conventional pedants thought basely will allow nonetheless whether maybe we ought not to do something about speeding those world war destroyers some day taking an intelligent trial quite meritless interest in matters of Canadian and Latin-American defense, wondering whether we ought not to have the British to let us flood continental Europe this winter

JUSTICE

Impartiality is the life of justice no justice is of all good government.

—Justinian.

Justice is to insult the great stand-ing policy of civil society, and any departure from it, under any circumstances, lies under the suspicion of being no policy at all.—Burke

Justice enjoyed, is justice denied.—Chesterton.

Justice and truth make men free, justice and error enslave him.—Henry Ward Beecher

God gives manhood but one clue to success, utter and sheer justice. Upon the square deal He always establishes Woodrow Wilson

People Evacuated From Crowded Areas Settle Down Quite Comfortably

The Germans have taught the people of one country a lesson in "evacuation"—it takes them less than a minute to get into air raid shelters when the sirens give the first warning siren. Such time a raid sirens, shrieking hungry out of the dive-bombers, launch-ches cutes their sate and lodgers and rush for the vault-like shelters. Until the dive-bombers all is a matter of seconds. Even after the raid is over, figures can be seen carrying to the library to await the passing of the country's hit. Of course, the people are not evacuated from their homes, but from crowded areas to safer districts.

What's the Idea?

The charge has been made that one of the hidden ideas behind the Fascist movement in Italy and Germany is the suppression of the trades union among labour and the co-operative system among farmers. The contention is that these two movements jeopardize the prospects of the capitalist class and must be curbed or entirely suppressed. To find color to this viewpoint is the fact that both in Germany and Italy both labor unions and co-operatives have been supressed and also in France, under Petain, a movement is on foot to demonstate labor. It is argued that under democracy labor is allowed to much latitude, and if farmers co-operatives spread themselves over the land the activities of the money bandits will be somewhat restricted and their profits decreased.

There must of necessity in of necessity to some basic idea behind the dictator movements. It cannot be just for the glorification of one man. That is absured. How what is your opinion?

Iron Guards (Fascists) are now in full control in Rumania. King Carol is very unpopular with his people and, after abdicating in favor of his son, fled to Switzerland. During the journey his train was fired on several times. His sojourn in Switzerland is limited to one month according to despatches. As a King, Carol has been a failure. He made his biggest mistake when he broke with the Allies, who offered him assistance against Italy and Germany.

OUR GARDENS

Mrs. Yerwood, Secretary-Treasurer, Alix—I have judged the gardens and this is the result.

There is much improvement in the streets over last year. A one and three have had more attention early this spring, but another moving would make them very trim for fall.

Again Trim's note first. Their location is ideal; lawn beautiful and well kept; not as many perennials or annuals as some but very artistically arranged.

Flemell's come second. Not many flowers, but the lawn and trees are lovely.

Jensing's have more flowers than any of the others, both perennial and annual, but they are too massed together. The lawn was well clipped but had too many dandelions in it.

Allen's and Talbot's gardens are very nice and are beautifully kept.

Ditto's came first under the three year plan. It is wonderful what can be done in one year. The location is not the best, but the arrangement and landscaping are first class.

Hoping this proves satisfactory to all concerned. I am,

Sincerely Yours,
Mrs. C. A. Cockrell.

Fifteen interned officers of the scuttled Graf spee, who were confined on Martin Garcia island, ordered a farewell and made a dash for liberty, last week.

BIG BEN

In The Regular Way

The federal government's decision, announced by Hon. J. G. Gardiner as Minister of War Services, to permit the discussion of industrial matters concerning essential activities "in the regular way while it is away" has been acclaimed with approval generally by the daily press of the country. Labor leaders have recorded a similar reception by their associates.

In accepting advice tendered by D. B. Hanna, Editor of the Toronto Leader-Post, who was called upon by the government to make a survey of this question of distribution of public information, Mr Gardiner announced that there will be no centralization of governmental news, a decision which was based on sound fundamentals.

As more than one newspaper pointed out when the decision was announced, dangers lurk in the centralization of public information. For although there may be occasions when dissemination of information is wisely controlled by a high powered bureau, there is always a temptation to give the news a slant favorable to the authority behind it. Such an organization has the power to, withheld information maliciously or to suppress it entirely, and whether it does so or not, the mere fact that it can do so engenders suspicion. It can become a propaganda agency, and nobody wants that in this enlightened country.

Control is a further disadvantage to centralization. It precludes accountability to the source of news, and this was aptly pointed out by Mr Rogers himself in his report when he said

"Every effort is made by jurisdiction for interference with the normal flow of news in time of war than in times of peace," and "governments which are truly responsible to an informed public are increasingly conscious that best service they can render by increasing the accessibility of news at its source."

* * * *

It's Costly Work

Apart from these aspects of the question there is also the question of the cost of setting up a central publicity bureau. The appointment of press liaison officers at the seat of war broke out is already costing the government nearly $60,000 a year and this expense would be increased with the extension of control. Mr Rogers said at a time, when every penny of the public money is required for other purposes.

"Only a dozen reporters, equipped with a serviceable typewriter apiece, would be under control, and no more effective bureaucracy, and they are trained to know what the public wants to learn and what should be suppressed in the public interest, for the preservation of the war," said the Port Arthur, Times-Journal, commending the government's decision.

The one against centralization of news was aptly summed up by the Manitoba (B.C.) Chronicle whose editor said "Centralization of news would be cumbersome, inefficient and highly suspicious" and added "There are certain criminal wiles for reasons of military secrecy cannot be immediately reported, of course, but less restrictions would be helpful. It should not be necessary for a senior officer to communicate with Ottawa every time he has something newsworthy to relate. If his judgment on what can or cannot be released is unsafe he should not be a senior officer

In support of the principle of the establishment of centralization of news to war time through a bureau of censor officers it has been suggested that such an organization is required to relieve hard pressed cabinet ministers from the necessity of interviewing newspapermen. It is admitted, of course, that the Prime Minister and those cabinet ministers directly in charge of various phases of the war effort are very busy men and are carrying a heavy burden, but arrangements could undoubtedly be made for periodic conferences at stated times with the representatives of the press.

Reason To A Minimum

Approving the suggestions of the Ottawa Journal that the Prime Minister hold a weekly conference with the press and that he summon a similar conference be arranged with Minister of Defence J. L. Ralston accompanied by Minister of Air A. G. Power and Minister of Naval Affairs A. Macdonald, the Winnipeg Tribune said editorially

"If Mr. King and his service ministers were to meet the press weekly for short informative periods the government would be in a better position to tell the story of Canada's war effort. The principle has long been recognized in the United States, where the President, one of the busiest executives in Christendom, meets weekly press conference, even in peace time. In war time they are more necessary than ever.

Direct access to the sources of news, whether in peace or war, is not only advantageous to the newspapers but it is beneficial to the government and above all to the nation. It gives the government opportunity of securing first hand knowledge of public opinion and it enables the press that leadership which is essential to successful prosecution of the war. Moreover, direct contact engenders confidence in the public mind, essential if the country's war effort is to be maintained at the peak of efficiency.

It is admitted that the suggestion of war demand the sacrifice of many liberties, but let the sacrifice of liberty of the press be reduced to the minimum and only to the degree necessary to ensure the safety of the country.

True Patriotic Spirit

Shows By People In Small Fishing Town Of Black Harbor

The Strathroy Age Dispatch says it is doubtful whether many readers have ever heard of Black Harbor N.B. It is a small town, only about half the size of Strathroy. It has a fishing town and like other fishing towns on the east coast has become one of the centers of activity in the manufacture of canned fish. Sardines are packed there in large numbers and quantities of cod, fresh and salted are shipped to the United States and Canada.

Nevertheless generally speaking there is a great willingness to assist in Canada's war effort but no doubt in another town of another county it has been shown as patriotism as that in the village that was the St. Harmon The citizens of that town of 1,500 persons have subscribed a total of $11,000 for investment in Dominion War Issues of Canada beside This is a wonderful spirit and worthy of emulation by residents of other municipalities

The type of education they receive encourages them to make the most of their abilities and the talents for making a living in the north.

There are further calls for recruits to the Canadian air force. That seems queer when you realize that hundreds of young men who have already volunteered are still waiting to enlist.

Christian Science

"Matter" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. One of the Scriptural citations is "If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit" (Gal. 5:25) One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" is "We must destroy the false belief that life and intelligence are in matter, and plant ourselves upon what is pure and perfect. Paul said, 'Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh.' Sooner or later we shall learn that the limitations of man's finite capacity are forged by the illusion that he lives in body instead of in Soul, in matter instead of in Spirit."

War's Moral Obligations

The war — an all-embracing war.

Let no one fail to realize the decision that the effects of this terrible conflict are being waged — Europe, Africa and Asia will not affect this matter but future history, more perhaps than any tradition or battle in what part of the world he may have his domicile.

Even as the ripples spread from a stone cast in the smooth water through the breadth and length of a mighty ocean; the repercussions of a bomb which destroys a house in a village south eastern England are felt in Cape Town and Bermuda, in Durban and Winnipeg. The blood people and kidney spot in the world cannot escape the effects of carnage and destruction.

The greater the forces of destruction, the more widespread and the more intense is the aftermath immediate and in the more distant future. The longer the war lasts the deeper and the more widespread the wounds inflicted physically, economically, socially and politically. The whole of humanity is bended to suffer the effects of this war of destruction. Hence the necessity for so speedy a termination of the war as possible.

[illegible] ning of this war is its preoccupation with the utmost vigor as can be marshalled by all [illegible] energies, capital and material at the command of the Empire and Allied and friendly nations. In Canada, an important step in this direction has just been taken in the registration of the manpower of the nation, recently completed under the direction of the Hon Ministry of War Services.

* * * *

Unity A First Step

Designed for this very purpose the prosecution of the war with the utmost vigor and thereby its speedier termination this national registration is not to be good and highly laudable. It places on record, so far as it is possible to do on paper, the capabilities and capacities of every individual in the nation. The avowed intention is to utilize the services and talents of every individual as revealed by this survey to the best advantage in the one great objective of winning the war and winning it with the greatest possible despatch.

But, it should be pointed out registration is only the first step in this highly desirable end. If the work of demobilization just undertaken is to be of value, it must be utilized to maximum advantage. There is every reason to assume that that is the intention of the government, under whose direction registration has been made but it must not be overlooked that if this intention is to be made effective to the nth degree, the whole-hearted co-operation of every man, woman and child is an absolute essential.

The willingness with which the people of this country went to the booths and gave the information which was sought must be backed up by an equal willingness nay, an enthusiastic desire, to undertake whatever effort may subsequently be assigned to him or her as his or her share of the joint national effort, and to carry out such assignment cheerfully, willingly and with the maximum of one's ability and capacity for efficiency.

To the extent that the individual displays reluctance in carrying out the task assigned, to the extent that he or she permits the labors to slacken, to the extent that any opposition to grumbles is permitted to handicap efficiency, to that degree the nation's war effort will be hampered and to that extent will the day when victory shall crown the country's [illegible] be delayed.

With this truth imprinted indelibly on every mind and with every loin girded up to hasten the time when the great objective of our sacrificed shall be achieved, the loyalty and co-operation of every individual in the country should be assured.

* * * *

Everybody's Job

There are four within us well as from without: and not the least of these is the slacker who may be well meaning enough but who is willing to "let George do it." If the doing of it represents inconvenience to him self or sacrifice on his part

That, however is not the spirit in which this war can be won. The enemy is too powerful too dangerous and too well organized to be overcome by half-hearted efforts His methods of fighting are too insidious to be met by anything less than complete mobilization, not only of such resources things as manpower and material resources, but also of those more intangible resources of the spirit and the mind—courage, determination, loyalty, co-operation and the will to do to the best of one's ability and capacity, regardless of physical discomfort.

It is in those things that the people of Great Britain and of Canada excel and this has been clearly demonstrated in the present war to date but those moral and spiritual resources must be marshalled and mobilized to the maximum degree, as well as those of a physical character, if the war is to be won and won speedily And that is the job of every individual. It is everybody's war

Best Rely On Harvest

Shortage Cannot Impact Public Economy For Six Months

Curtailment of Denmark's exports of foodstuffs due to war stoppage of her fodder imports was foreshadowed in a report of the agricultural committee.

The council estimated that better exports would drop by 100,000 tons, slaughtered pigs from 1,500,000 to 60,000 tons, eggs from 160,000,000 to 15,000,000.

Reports of live pigs will decline from 4,000,000 to 2,000,000, cattle from 3,500,000 to 1,500,000 and chickens from 12,000,000 to 7,000,000.

The report said Denmark must depend exclusively upon her own harvests to feed her livestock.

Britain Will Not Relax Blockade Of Europe To Permit Passage Of Food

The British are willing to do everything in their power to relieve Ehrope from shortages after the war

But until Adolf Hitler is defeated, they say, the British will not relax their blockade of the continent to permit passage of food stuffs whose ultimate might, directly or indirectly, aid Germany in the prosecution of the war.

The British contend that any shortages in France Belgium, Norway Poland and other German occupied areas are Hitler s fault and his problem. They say they will not permit passage through the blockade of foodstuffs which might be diverted to the German army or which might relieve Hitler s responsibility for feeding the peoples he has subjugated.

But after the war things would be different and certain British government quarters have for some time been laying plans under which Britain would participate, in full collaboration with the Americas, would provide large scale food relief for the conti nent as soon as the German armies have been withdrawn to their own boundaries.

Such plans, of course, are predicated upon a British victory and upon their contributions at this time to built up enormous stocks that would last until the Germans had been forced out of Europe.

No one can foretell the course of the war, but the British appear confident that their final position is strong and that, with their navy, they can outlast Germany

Food relief after the war would accomplish two desirable ends, programs of this nature now under consideration say. It would alleviate distress among hungry Europeans and absorb food products of North America and British colonial pro ducts. The program would relieve them because of their lack of European markets during the blockade.

Meanwhile, although official statements have not been forthcoming, the British have made it plain that they do not look with favor upon various continental food relief schemes proposed in the United States.

The London Times, discussing relief plans proposed by Former United States President Herbert Hoover, charged that relief appeals from the European continent are inspired by German propaganda and urged the government to make a definite statement of policy concerning post-war relief.

"Our concern is to see to it in the double sense that it is Hitler who is starving Europe and that it is Britain, and those who support her cause, and not those who are making active preparations to feed Europe as soon as the power and tyranny is overthrown," the Times said.

Similarly, Sir Julian Huxley in a letter to The Times endorsed the suggestion that the British Empire and the American colonies unite in pushing food to Europe "as soon as Nazi domination ceases to be an."

Waiting For The Big

French People Looking Forward To Defeats From Nazi Rule

Walter Kerr, former Paris correspondent for the New York Herald Tribune and sometime broadcaster from Stuttgart, Berlin, Rome and Paris, but telling description of the old French capital under Nazi rule, on radio program "Wh. the People Kerr whom some listeners may have recalled for his graphic pictures of the situation in Czecho Slovakia two years ago, arrived via Clipper after Nazi censor blued six or seven stories he wrote The tale he related was without illusion, keen insight and aired out of Paris

Parisians and French people are not reconciled to German domination, he said. For the present they have to live, but "some day we will find out who betrayed us and we will come back." Kerr stated Paris was plastered with posters showing German soldiers feeding French children. Despite daily penalty for defiance of them, he had not seen one which was not torn half down

French people also give food and money to escaped British prisoners, although this is punishable by death penalty in addition to taking of hostages. Many gestapo agents in hotels sent the town of the Unknown Soldier every afternoon, with French agents ignoring the parade. Eatings Of Nine Banned Lists Be- bonds Fact At Ottawa

You may not think that the owl is very closely related to the parrot but there is a bird which is called the kakapo or owl-parrot As a matter of fact, parrots, owls and cuckoos are grouped together in a restraining. This particular bird is a native of New Zealand. It is the only place it is a talk between the owls and the parrots. Flight is its particular hunting time, and it lives on a mixture of food which includes roots, berries and seed eating. One of its strange features is that although its wings are somewhat fully developed, it has practically lost the power of flight, using its legs even more than its wings in its search for food.

Individuality Of Britons

People All Cubs When Julius Caesar Took Country In 55 B.C.

There has been some talk of the Nazis setting up Boy Scouts as a separate country under their tutelage but Independent of the other parts of France. There has always been an individuality about the Bretons which has made it unpalatable for them to conform wholeheartedly to the rest of the nation, although the separatist movement in recent years has been theoretical and illusory rather than practical.

Brittany, northwest peninsula of France, including the districts of the English Channel, 160 miles from Southampton, in Celtic in origin and in many of its customs and thoughts even to-day Under the name of Armorica, it was a land of Celts when Julius Caesar took it in 56 B.C. After the Romans finally withdrew from Britain in the fourth century, other Celts rushed across from Britain Whence the name, now emer, to get away from the conquering Saxons. No one is swearing that it is true but Bertram Ara thinking over the story credited to the crew of a downeast German boomer that Heinrich Himmler is packing College men in its cribbing pisons just to be sure Nazi laws try hard.

So the poor old lady returned from the depths of her long and quiet days to listen to the radio.

Extension of air facilities in Regina cost upwards of $1,000,000. Buildings and hangars cost more than $300,000 and by September the training of observers will be underway.

Calgary will have a service flying training school, a wireless school and an equipment depot. Fields are being enlarged and new ones built. Lethbridge has a new airport. Lethbridge and Medicine Hat.

Aeroplane and motor vessels for the fighting forces are being constructed in lakehead factories. Hamilton, Ont., has a large assortment of military clothing in urban centres, Montreal has munitions and aeroplane engines to be the packing business, providing food for the troops.

Six fleet are being prepared in Winnipeg for manufacture of munitions and small arms parts. "Bonus" workers in western Ontario's government is sponsoring wartime chemical research and Canadian industries are engaged in manufacture of army purpose supplies such as mustrement and furnishings.

A Peculiar Bird

Eatings Of Nine Banned Lists Be- bonds Fact At Ottawa

You may not think that the owl is very closely related to the parrot but there is a bird which is called the kakapo or owl-parrot As a matter of fact, parrots, owls and cuckoos are grouped together in a restraining. This particular bird is a native of New Zealand. It is the only place it is a talk between the owls and the parrots. Flight is its particular hunting time, and it lives on a mixture of food which includes roots, berries and seed eating. One of its strange features is that although its wings are somewhat fully developed, it has practically lost the power of flight, using its legs even more than its wings in its search for food.

Individuality Of Britons

People All Cubs When Julius Caesar Took Country In 55 B.C.

There has been some talk of the Nazis setting up Boy Scouts as a separate country under their tutelage but Independent of the other parts of France. There has always been an individuality about the Bretons which has made it unpalatable for them to conform wholeheartedly to the rest of the nation, although the separatist movement in recent years has been theoretical and illusory rather than practical.

Brittany, northwest peninsula of France, including the districts of the English Channel, 160 miles from Southampton, in Celtic in origin and in many of its customs and thoughts even to-day Under the name of Armorica, it was a land of Celts when Julius Caesar took it in 56 B.C. After the Romans finally withdrew from Britain in the fourth century, other Celts rushed across from Britain Whence the name, now emer, to get away from the conquering Saxons. Makes A Good Story

Business Chumbling Over Yarn Credited To Gunnison Boomer Crew

No one is swearing that it is true but Bertram Ara thinking over the story credited to the crew of a downeast German boomer that Heinrich Himmler is packing College men in its cribbing pisons just to be sure Nazi laws try hard.

When a raider splashed into the sea three of the crew were observed to have left. They rowed the ship's boat every time he tried to climb in. the story goes.

Recruiting Bottoms called the trio why they tried to down the fourth and were told that he belonged to the Gestapo. We had to bring him back, they said, "we need him to get rid of him. We don't want him."

Enlisted To Live Home

Little Old Lady In San Francisco Determines To Do Something

If I were rich for the $7 000 or that I could get together one hundred men and equip them for service, I would enlist Mark Upton of the commercials, best cigar maker in San Francisco, who finds himself at 65 years old hardly

For I'll enlist one or two July Allendants enlisted at her pitying Ah! sought to guide her to the proper channels to make her contribution. She finished answering letters

"I'm sorry," she said, "but I don't know where you can enlist. I'm not sure that after the age of eighty-four days of my life I'm needed myself for military service."

So the poor old lady returned from the depths of her long and quiet days to listen to the radio.

Then she heard the call and told people about it.

She returned. This time some were moved with alacrity She listened over 40 $,000 bills since it was the first hardly to enlist.

In all she was

It's not important that you know her name. Her address will be needed with finality. It's not important that you know her age. She's not needed with finality. It's not important that some persons may call her old. It's enough that God knows.

And off she went.

Mona Lisa

Famous Painting May Soon Be Hung In Louvre Gallery

Mona Lisa, thinly cased in a wooden crate may soon be on her way back to Italy

There is a childish irrelevance about the performance that freezes the blood. Are more and the bloody death of thousands for no better purpose than this?

More than 400 years ago a man named Leonardo da Vinci lived in Florence. He was a great man, one who was intensely aware of all aspects of life, one who had talents regard the whole gamut of human mentality He was painter engineer politician, writer, inventor builder poet the sort of all-around man which the world doesn't produce any more.

Leonardo painted a picture of a nobleman—Mr So-and-So, it might be—and his impressive at first glance. But on the lips of Mona Lisa and in her eyes there played the ghost of a strange inscrutable half-smile which fascinated those who looked

King Francis I of France bought the painting from Leonardo when the painter came to France to serve him. Thereafter the small eyes served Jim: still-a gravely "Tell you something, sir, I'm Italian myself and might up a new office building in Moorgate Street I forget the name of the fellow who lives in it Jack-and-a-Beanstalk Abbess Elvesbury took over yesterday and I'm a member of the staff He is a fellow you might see"

You need not tell all the truth, nor to those who have a right to know it all. But tell all you tell the truth.—Horace Mann.

The Cost Of War

Some idea of the need for the [illegible] amounts of money with which to carry on a modern war is demonstrated in the picture to-day at Karvill. Here is the box score of the fighting in the northern point, and examine the toll in human lives.

The harbor is filled with wreckage of ships, costing millions of dollars and they include warships and merchant vessels.

In the centre of the town of 5,000 inhabitants, 150 buildings were destroyed, valued at $2,000,000.

Other buildings, valued at additional millions, have had to be torn down because they are too badly wrecked to be repaired.

Guarding Air Bases

Airmen To Replace Men In Khaki For This Work

The Royal Canadian Air Force is now guarding its own stations and men in who have replaced men in khaki in keeping watch night and day against intruders at flying fields and hangars across the country, it was learned

Details from nearby militia regiments were assigned to guard duty there in advance of their being required in the particular trades for which they were skilled or accommodated in the training schools

Air Minister Power said it was better to put those in uniform to work in civilian life rather than have them in civilian life guarding and more important and perhaps boring interior. He said he saw no reason many trained men could not be required to do guard duty.

In carrying out this policy the militia detail assigning guard at air stations have been gradually replaced by airmen.

Very Important Now

Nobody Thinks Much Of Saving Metal In Peace Time

War years bring the importance of scrap metal to the front. Other times we pay little attention to it. We see stores by that other consumer. No more gathering old material here and there. Possibly we term it junk and let it go at that But turn it over to the steel plant and it will pip and bust and then allow the shoppers to work on it and it is once running out again as steel.

THE NEXT STEP

The second great war loan has not been absorbed as rapidly as the first, but the reason is obvious. With the farmers being unable to sell their wheat, it has pegged the stream of dollars to the Federal treasury. One of the first duties of the Minister of Finance is to dynamite, the blocked streams and release the jam at its source—the primary producer—and then the stream will clear itself.

We are told that millions of dollars are being held in savings accounts in Canada. If these accounts are not released voluntary they should be conscripted for the benefit of our war efforts. Absolutely nothing must be allowed to stand in the way of checking Hitlerism. Our liberty is more precious than savings accounts. After idle money has been collected there are other financial institutions that can be tapped on the occasion calls for it.

Canada has a job on her hands, and has undertaken certain responsibilities that must be carried out. These duties call for money, and money we must have, voluntary if possible; involuntarily if necessary. The need is urgent and cannot be held up.

Dictatorial methods are repugnant to our people, but people who are indifferent to the demands of democracy are just repugnant to democracy, and will have to be taught that liberty is one of the pearls of great price and we may have to call all that we have to retain it.

The above was written a few days before the bonds were closed, but there may be many more loans before this war is over, and the main argument still applies.

Notes and Comment

Resentment against Italian efforts to disarm Syria is running high. It is turning the people to the support of Gen. Chas. de Gaulle, the leader of the free Frenchmen in Britain.

A revolution may break out in Mexico any day. A recent election in which both parties claimed victory is the cause. The conservative candidate (Camacho) was chosen by the deputies to the high office. His opponent (Almazan) is now in the States trying to buy arms and ammunition to start a revolution.

Another war on a large scale is brewing in the Far East. Japan resents American interference with her progress in China and Indo China. She (Japan) is doing her best to pin onto Russia and make her an ally, in which event Japan will defy the United States and endeavor to carry out her full program in the far east.

Fruit Shipment Heavy

Shipments of fruit from British Columbia are rolling over the C.N.R. to Edmonton and the east at an average rate of a train load a day. On some days there will be two train loads over Edmonton, and on others one train load. Most of the shipments are of apples and other tender fruits.

Berlin View of Destroyer Deal

"Germany notes with interest, a spokesman said, "that Britain is virtually throwing away the most valuable arms. The extradition of 50 old destroyers for eight military bases makes possible certain deductions.

"This action is the beginning of liquidation of the British Empire."

Italian Turn

"The exchange of American destroyers for British naval bases in the western hemisphere puts the United States still more dangerously into the European war," says Daylin.

Author James Hilton—"When Hitler deserted the new agreement for air bases between the U.S. and Canada and England as the beginning of the liquidation of the British empire he may or may not have sincerely thought it was, but at any rate he was wrong," said Mr. Hilton.

"We know in our hearts, if not on our map, that it is no sign of liquidation but of consolidation—the beginning of a consolidation of a new empire of faith and purpose—an empire not yet aware of its own physical frontiers but only of the boundlessness of its dreams."

CORRESPONDENCE

Free Press, Alix:

Ottawa books of Canada's second war loan will remain open only until noon Saturday. Hon J. L. Ilsley said last night in announcing that subscriptions of $4,535,000 were still required to reach the objective. The total on Thursday night was $230,466,000. Mr. Ilsley appealed to Canadians to give the loan a substantial over-subscription and make it a "smashing success."

Nothing, he said, would more clearly prove to the people of the whole world the resolution of Canadian people. To over subscribe the loan to make it an overwhelming success will sustain our friends and confound our enemies.

ROSS M. BROWN.

Later advices announces that Canada's second war loan was a complete success, the full amount was subscribed before the hours closed last Saturday, proving that Canadians are still on the job of smashing Hitler!

The Kingdom of the Netherlands Helping Britain

A fund has been established in London to purchase planes and other war material for the Netherland Legion which is aiding in the defense of Great Britain.

Prince Bernhard has accepted the regency of the Fund and, acting upon advice of the Netherland Minister of Defence, His Royal Highness will determine how the money will be spent. The initial call for contributions has already brought thousands of pounds from Netherlanders, both in Europe and the overseas Empire.

All free Netherland subjects, many of them whose fathers came from Holland or who feel bonds of friendship for that country, will no doubt wish to contribute. Cheques for money orders should be made payable to His Excellency, H.H. Graeuse, 10 Range Road, Ottawa, the Netherlands Minister at Ottawa.

Those preferring so to do may send contributions to the Vice-Consul of the Netherlands at Edmonton, W. Dixon Craig, McLeod Building.

Eighty-seven children and 225 adults lost their lives in cold-cases when a German submarine torpedoed the vessel Nina Bellcon, from Germany.

In The Regular Way

The federal government's decision, announced by Hon. J. G. Gardiner as Minister of War Services, to permit the dissemination of news concerning departmental activities "in the regular way while it is news" has been received with approval generally by the daily press of the country and should be accorded a similar reception by the general public.

In accepting advice tendered by D. B. Rogers, Editor of the Regular Leader-Post, who was called upon by the government to make a survey of the questions of distribution of public information, Mr. Gardiner announced that there will be no centralization of governmental news, a decision which is based on sound fundamentals.

An outcry than one newspaper pointed out when this decision was announced, dangers lurk in the centralization of public information. For one thing when dissemination of information is solely controlled by a high personnel bureau, there is always a temptation to give the news a slant favourable to the authority behind it. Such an organization has the power to withhold information indefinitely or to suppress it entirely, and whether it does go or not is not the more fact that it can do so engenders suspicion. Such an instrument is purely a propaganda machine, and nobody wants that in this enlightened country.

There is no further danger-vantage to centralization. It precludes accessibility to the source of news, and thus was aptly pointed out by Mr. Rogers himself in his report when he said:

"There is no more justification for interference with the normal flow of news in time of war than in times of peace," and, "governments, which are long accustomed to serving and distributing information, can best serve now by using this talent by increasing the accessibility of news at its source."

* * *

It's Costly Too

Apart from these aspects of the question there is also the question of the cost of setting up a central publicity bureau. The appointment of press liaison officers the war through out is already costing the government nearly $60,000 a year and this expense would be increased with the extension of such a bureau. Why, and at whose, expense, when the present machinery is required for other purposes.

Half a dozen reporters, equipped with a serviceable typewriter apiece, under orders of one chief could do more effective balancing, and they are trained to know what the public wants to learn and what should be suppressed in the public interest, for the prosecution of the war," said Editor Wilson Tinne-Journal, commenting the government's decision.

The same opinion contradiction of news was aptly expressed up by Mr. Hamblin (P.E.I.) Liberals when editor said "Centralization of news would be cumbersome, inefficient and highly suspicious" and added "There are certain events which for reasons of military secrecy cannot be immediately reported, of course but this centralization would be helpful. It should not be necessary for a senior officer to communicate with Ottawa every time he has something noteworthy to relate. If his judgment on what can or cannot be released is unsafe he should not be a senior officer."

In support of the principle of the establishment of centralization of news in war time through a bureau of senior officers it has been suggested that such an organization is required to relieve hard pressed cabinet ministers from the necessity of inter-viewing newspapermen. It is admitted, of course, that the Prime Minister and those cabinet ministers directly in charge of various phases of the war effort are very busy men and not carrying a heavy burden, but consequently could undoubtedly be made for periodic conferences at stated times with the representatives of the press.

Reduce To A Unit

Approving the suggestion of the Ottawa Journal that the Prime Minister hold a weekly conference with the press and that similar weekly conferences be arranged with Minister of Defence J. L. Ralston, Ambassador to Washington Hon. Vincent Massey and Minister of Naval Affairs A. Macdonald, the Winnipeg Tribune said editorially

"If Mr King and his service ministers were to meet the press weekly for short conferences, the government would be in a position to reduce to the story of Canada's war effort This principle has long been recognized in the United States, where the President, one of his Cabinet colleagues, Christchurch, holds weekly press conferences, even in press time. In war time, they are more necessary than ever."

Direct access to the sources of news, whether in peace or war, is not only advantageous to the newspapers but it is beneficial to the government and above all to the nation It gives the government opportunity first hand knowledge of public opinion and a better chance to estimate that leadership which is essential to successful prosecution of the war. Moreover, direct contact engenders confidence between the public and, also vital if the country's war effort is to be maintained at the peak of efficiency

It is admitted that the suppression of vital information is necessary in wartime, but let the sacrifice of liberty of the press be reduced to the minimum and only to the degree necessary to ensure the safety of the country.

Has Permanent Cure

Like a walking registration card was a Summerside lass took out his national registration at St. Catharines. When asked questions about all duties of his birth, marriage, when he came to Canada, when he was naturalized, etc., he simply consulted the chart tattooed on his arm, where he had all his own vital statistics.

Marlow never interfered. He gave smart instructions as to how the money was to be dealt with, into which accounts it must be paid, and that was all. At the end of a transaction he lunched a gentleman and set his contestant, as a base to a day.

Elmsbury had never been so rich in his life as he was now. He could meet his bank manager without a blushing flush on the get of his nose. He could drop the sight of a stranger now walking up the drive in the house. He was with a sense of foreboding. Yet once he had seen his Sheriff's officer in every car he met.

But he had grown accustomed to prosperity, it had become a normal condition of life and fresh he mind to take the source of his affluence

A three—at least a Predicate. If Marlow crashed his finger he must run to him; if Marlow on a motor bay swept "Mr. Elmsbury" say to accessible spot, he must drop his work and fly. His Friday night visit to the office of the High Court of Justice, a graduate of a grey university, a member of many clubs, a man of affairs, a man of the world, he offered at the Old Bailey, and he came to make inquiries."

Marlow was not startled. He had a few facts ferret were made public." Elmsbury Jim Carlton, and again he was dissatisfied when he never agreed.

"If you destroyed—not stopped," he said, "and it was only by accident that the money was not sent at the time, you'd be in a very awkward position, unfortunately, I happened to be rather ill when you destroyed the letter, and was not out. The day I returned to the office and discovered what you had done I was horrified. I was in consternation. I could not get in touch with you, and I had to have buckets of water in their homes, and to keep stirrup pumps used to tackle incendiary bombs.

Workers by Women's Voluntary Services, under the direction of the Duvegar Marchioness of Reading, are enrolling housewives willing to help A. R. P. workers in rescuing people, digging out of bombed shelters, and in first aid and light rescue duties.

The Marquess housewives were encouraged to lend skilled hands in the London Lend, which has large scale raids. Others have been asked to have buckets of water in their homes, and to keep stirrup pumps used to tackle incendiary bombs.

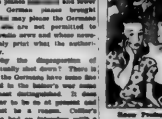
KEEPING YOUR GIRL CLEAN
A MATTER OF MOST CARE



Home Professional Methods

"If only something could be done about my skin blemishes." The girl clerk sighed wistfully as she looked in the mirror at her face.

Indeed, as most men know, blackheads frequently wings on their chemises or shirts, and pimples are among the favorite hiding places for dust and dirt.

If you have this type of skin trouble, there's a first advice it to be experimented with. Cleanse your face and hands your face vigorously every night with soap and warm water, using a coarse face cloth or complexion brush.

To remove a stubborn blackhead, first soften with warm water, then, covering your fingertips with tissue paper, press firmly around it. Repeat the spot with an astringent lotion. Pimples should be touched with medicated ointment or pure vaseline after washing, but not rubbed in.

There are no simple professional treatments for skin blemishes, which, such as oily hair, wrinkles, a doctor must treat.

Our 32-page booklet tells in detail how to overcome such troubles as dry or oily skin, blackheads, pimples, eczema, etc. Daily routine care of the scalp, hair and hands.

A CORRECTION

An error appeared in our report of Lumerton Council, in our last issue, in which the Council appeared as paying $775.31 for telephone rentals and tolls. In the copy the space for figures was left blank but the amount really should have been $6.00. The figure $775.31 represents the cost of labor for the month.

Rumors that wedding bells will soon be ringing in this district. True or false?

It appears German fliers do not want their mates rescued from the sea after being out. It was recently reported by the captain of a British ship that when he attempted to rescue four men who fell into the sea from a German bomber, other Germans attacked him from the air and prevented him from picking up the men in the water, and four of his own sailors were wounded by bullets.

There are further calls for recruits to the Canadian air force. That seems queer when you realize that hundreds of young men who have already volunteered are still waiting to enlist.

"Matter" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. One of the Scriptural citations is "If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit" (Gal. 5:25) One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" is "We must destroy the false belief that life and intelligence are in matter, and plant ourselves upon what is pure and perfect. Paul said, 'Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh.' Sooner or later we shall learn that the fetters of man's finite capacity are forged by the illusion that he lives in body instead of in Soul, in matter instead of in Spirit."

A Mutual Defence Line

The air raids and air threats in Europe this spring and summer has no thoroughly aroused and alarmed the people of the United States that they are now prepared to undergo great sacrifices to put their defences in order to maintain the integrity of their land and to preserve intviolate what is commonly referred to as the American way of life and the American standard of living.

The people of the United States are now fully alive to the fact that if Britain should be defeated, an eventuality which we do not for one moment entertain, the United States would immediately find itself and every commercial tie which this country are used to maintain thousands of the United States of the World and in a grave situation. Thousands of Americans people would then know that subjugation of Britain would spell for them economic destruction by a Nazified eastern hemisphere.

There is now concern too, in doubt the assertion of some statesmen that the United States would be immune from physical damage by the Nazi war machine. Not only May it a report of the Naval Affairs Committee of the U.S. Senate, said:

From all the evidence available it appears that the United States can be conquered without military conquest of continental United States its effective blockade against our foreign commerce can be maintained at practical distance of miles From our coasts and were it not beyond serious range Our outlying possessions will be captured and used against us as advanced bases. There is nothing to prevent the establishment of bases, by force if necessary, in this hemisphere From which as well as from aircraft carriers repeated bombing raids can be despatched against our highly in flammable cities.

Their Fired Line

The foregoing extract from the Naval Affairs Committee report is highly illuminating but that does not take into account the assistance that might be undoubtedly would be given to Hitler and his satellites in the enemy within the gates as was the case in Norway, Belgium and other victims of the Nazi machine. There is plenty of evidence that the United States is honeycombed with Nazi agents who are working their propaganda to the utmost and only await the time and opportunity to indulge in sabotage and other overt acts.

That the people of the United States have become alarmed at the situation and are fully aware of the potential dangers that threaten them is evidenced in many ways, including the fact that Congress has been prepared to vote two billion dollars to strengthen the defences of the country in the interests of May boosted the appropriation for the month of July to ten billion dollars and on, with alacrity and eagerness.

The substantial sum provided, among other things for a two-ocean navy but, it is pointed out, it will require the passage of many years before this adequate navy can be built and completed. In the meantime, the United States is enjoying upon and not the least important advantage of the navy to enjoy the security of the British navy to protect its ocean-borne commerce.

The conclusion is obvious and that is that the United States first line of defence is the European waters which are being defended by the British navy and until such time as the new American naval program is completed it would appear to be a vital necessity for the people of the United States to assist the British in every possible way and with every means at their disposal.

6. Further Opportunity.

The situation was aptly summarized by Robert E. Sherwood in an article in the Reader's Digest in what he said. The chief point to be borne in mind the world revolution in Britain's navy As a matter of cold, calculating self-preservation we must keep that navy fighting at our side by providing Britain with every needed ship, gun, plane implement of war pound of steel and shred of hope that we can give.

Here we have the vital necessity for building powerful defences against any and all dangers and the American conscience no doubt is that Europe is the first line of defence in rapidly gaining ground for the Western Hemisphere boundary. Only recently, the political leaders of the United States and Canada agreed to set up a joint defence board and to co-operate in the defence of this hemisphere. It is hoped one result of this co-operation will be to give a greater measure of aid to Britain's war effort and particularly the supply of war materials.

It is gratifying to note that an important step in that direction is now being made taken in the form of an agreement between Canada Great Britain with the use of the storage destroyers to the United States of America in exchange for leasehold rights of British territory in the West Indies and Newfoundland, which are sites for United States naval and air force bases.

Thus the bases of British-American solidarity so vitally essential for mutual protection is already working and may be expected to grow materially augmented as the war progresses to the dominance of the United States.

India's Contribution

Quantities Of War Material Used To Combat Nazis

India has made new move since the war started to aid the cause of democracy over the ranged international questions. but all the time she has been making a tremendous contribution to the war effort Figures released in Simla showed that since the outbreak of the war India has despatched to overseas centres 75,000,000 rounds of small arms ammunition, 300,000 shells of all categories 1,500,000 sandbags, 10,000 sets of web equipment, 600,000 blankets, 5,000,000 yards of khaki drill, and large quantities of other materials.

Ancient Weapons

Combination Shot Gun And Axe Used By Highlanders

The new regulations governing the carrying of weapons have resulted in some queer specimens of weapons being submitted to the RCMP for registration.

Perhaps the prize goes to the man who brought in a muzzle-loading combination rifle and shot gun. 1847 model The rifle barrel is in perfectly triple action. Besides firing a double discharge from the muzzle it must have had the kick of the proverbial mule.

Another citizen brought in an old German machine-gun that he had brought back as a souvenir from the last war The gun was air-cooled and had a gun carrying 48 cartridges. If weighed 56 pounds, and had to be fired to the perseverance of its owner carrying it back all the way from Europe.

Hitler's Own Bank

Hitler's own bank now purchased a few British balloons, but sooner or later the balloons of his own inflated ambition will be punctured and he will collapse.

Mechanical Bird Dog

Pointer I used By British Helps Locate German Air Bunkers

The defenders of Britain are using a mechanical bird dog to locate German night raiders.

The British censor permitted this story to be told. The bird dog is a pointer not only by searchlights but by an ingenious large aircraft detector operators called a steam age machine and by other equipment of a similar nature, to end of the war.

It works like this

Two or three searchlights perhaps listening devices, anti-aircraft gun crews determine the presence and direction of approaching raiders. They feed this data into the "mind age machine" which turns out a series of positions for the pointer of the immediate spirit-second Pointer. Every one minute, or every half minute, according to the speed of the raider, the machine turns out a new position for the pointer. The pointer is actually a long beam of light. Its movements are relayed to anti-aircraft guns (searchlights) and fighter planes.

Military critics credit the anti-aircraft guns in 1916 of the British and German planes shot down in August a record much better than in the First Great War.

A Sensible Idea

Winston Churchill Wants Public Officials To Use Public Conveyances

As if one war were not enough, Prime Minister Churchill has started another and he is going to force public officials to stop using high-falutin, round-about ways of getting about their farm industry. A few weeks ago pickers began to move into Chilliwack valley to pick the early fruit harvest hampering altogether about the Mennonites.

Growers report that the effects of the long dry spell in June and July were beaten by intensive cultivation and by new ways in irrigation and by irrigation.

The prescribed easier picking conditions for harvesters, however as the dry weather increased the amount of pulage on the vines.

Chinese Students

Come To Canada Under The Boxer Indemnity Fund

A group of 27 more graduates of Canadian universities have left the McGill University where the youths will study.

The group has arrived from China coming under the Boxer indemnity fund, established in 1908, when China was compelled to pay an indemnity to foreign nations suffering in the rebellion.

Britain and the United States allotted their share to be used for education of Chinese youths at British and United States institutions in Britain and the United States the money going to Canada and Australia.

New Brunswick Goes Again Thrice Of Nova Canada

The question of confederation with Canada has cropped up again in New-brunswick as the result of the establishment of her defence with Canada and the current visit of Canadian experts there.

Newfoundlanders do not mistake the present move as a political confederation, but such opinion as a Canadian Press correspondent could get on the brief visit of the Canadian officials shows that the question has arisen in the minds of the people.

The correspondent was told the only objection in Newfoundland now to confederation would be on economic grounds. Certain business people in St. John's fear that union with Canada would place Newfoundland industries in competition with pulp, wood and iron ore on a much more favorable basis with those of the Maritime Provinces. There is also the feeling that terms might be increased.

At the corner of Bedford place a young man was sitting on the edge of the sidewalk, and as deep was he in thought that he would have passed, but Jim made a sharp sitting of the wheel removed the long eight inches to touch and called him by name. Jim turned with a start. The last person he expected to meet at this hour was Mr. Harlow, the genius environment of Thornhill's Bond.

"I thought it was you," Mr. Harlow's voice was cheerful, his manner lacking in gravity. "What's a fortunate meeting."

"The same to you, sir," smiled Jim leaning his elbow on the window opening and hooking into the face of the house.

For both, I hope. Come inside and I'll drive you anywhere you are going. I have an invitation to offer and a suggestion to make."

Jim opened the door and stepped in. Harlow was a skilful driver He slipped in and out of the traffic into Bedford Square and then

"Do you mind if I drive you to my house? Perhaps you can spare the time?"

Jim nodded wondering what was this proposition But thoughtful he drive Mr Harlow kept up a flow of unimportant small talk, and he said nothing important until he showed his visitor into the beautiful library of Harlow House. "Now, Mr. Carstone you have," he said. "I saw him out of the tail of my eye. A detective? I bet most likely more than you are very prominent in the law." He chuckled at this. Farmers In A Saskatchewan District Working Together To Aid Canada In Struggle

Paving the hardships that the lack of storage space for this year's immense crop has brought them Reeve Dunning Lister and 20 farmers from the municipality of Great Bend in the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association and McGill University Under the terms of this agreement the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association undertakes to provide greatly increased support for the extension of studies aimed at the improvement of production methods and the reduction of manufacturing costs. The first agreement for such co-operative research work was signed 15 years ago at which time the Association erected a special research building on a site provided by McGill University.

The Dominion Government has a very definite interest in the pulp and paper industry as in addition to encouraging a leading place in the country's export trade the industry provides employment for thousands of Canadians as well as many skilled workers. Likewise the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association is fully aware of the necessity of research in order to maintain and improve the industry's position in the highly competitive markets of the world, and has manifested this interest by substantially increasing its appropriation for the operation of the Pulp and Paper Research Institute of Canada and Canadian Universities. Results through the pulp and paper industries a broad field of employment for chemical engineering chemistry and other research workers.

Thus the Pulp and Paper Institute is an outstanding example of the Dominion Government's farsighted policy of encouraging industry and educational institutions in co-operating material and human resources to advance the country's industrial and social welfare.

Christian Science

"Unreality" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. The Golden Text is Deuteronomy 4:35. One of the Scriptural citations is "Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations" (Psalms 145:13). One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "From beginning to ending, whatever is mortal is unreal; of material human beings and of material thinking also. That only is real which reflects God" (p. 468).

Rule By a "Chosen Race"

Adolf Hitler's conceptions of a new order are inferior to those of others. He does not offer a Roman Catholic order, nor an order of established law, nor an order of "holy" justice as was evised by a mystical Russian emperor, nor an order of French enlightenment. The order he offers is of force, to be imposed by a chosen race, by a privileged group, by an autocratic chief. It is to be directed by one Nation for the benefit of that Nation. It is, as expressed in a hundred German appeals, a no-rial gain and political power for one people.

The juridical basis for this order, as dramatically expressed by its inventor, before the world, is: All people are inferior to Germans.

The exclusive moral noun in this order is: What benefits the German people, as represented in the Nazi Party, is right.

The spiritual ideal of this order is: Artificially is a coward's religion, so must give way to heroic German gods.

Is educational ideal is: German anthropologists show that Nordic Blonds have created everything good in history, Enlightenment is propaganda.

There are no basic civil rights, no international neighborliness, no respect for others, no love for retarded peoples, no generous sentiments. The champions of the order have exalted brutality, excited hate and fomented unrest, as the leaders of no other major movement in European history.

It might build new cement roads, establish new markets, manufacture more automobiles, but the Berlin peasants to produce more pork. But Europe doesn't live by pork alone.

There are almost 10 million Germans and 330 million non-Germans in Europe, not counting the Russians. Most of that 330 million people, though, have rather simple and timid — almost of the best of us — are not pathological, they have fewer spirits than their fathers, who rejected tyrants. They will not permanently accept a subordinate, continental prison, for the sake of selling soy beans or the privilege of marching in goose rank. Instead of bringing the desired unity, Herr Hitler's "new order" would only cause all Europe to beat its plowshares into swords.

Alberta Pensions Association, a nation-wide organization for the betterment of old age pensions, will have an Edmonton branch formed this week, said by R. C. Fisher. The movement is still in the growing stages, but is well established in British Columbia, said the local vice chairman. He said also that the Alberta organization will operate on a broader basis than the parent body, but the main objective will be pensions for all at 65, with a minimum of $30 a month.

Federal relief grant of $260,000 will be sought by the provincial government per transmission to municipal authorities, Premier Aberhart said this week. The province seeks the grant to match a similar amount which the municipalities will contribute equally, the premier said.

Information For Recruits

The men reporting for training at Militia Training Centres, will be issued with complete Battle Dress the same as issued to units of the C.A.S.F. In addition, they will be issued with: — Great coats, vests, gloves, mitts, cardigans, underwear, boots, shirts.

When the men has completed his period of training, he will be allowed to retain his underwear, socks and boots, but will be required to produce his boots if he should be called back for a further period of training at a later date.

Small articles of kit, will not be issued by the Training Centres. It will therefore be necessary for the recruit to bring with him the following articles: — Brasso, hair brush, hair brush, towels, tooth brush, shaving kit, sewing, and say other articles of this nature that he may require.

Blankets will be the only bedding issued at the Training Centres.

Sports will also be engaged in extensively during the training period, and it is suggested that running shoes, and depending on the season, any sports equipment that the men may have no brought, such as skates.

Men who can play musical instruments should bring them along, as that they may take part in concerts.

The Week in Edmonton

Edmonton, September 30. — Claiming that all interested persons and groups except packing house labor protested against new hog carcass grading regulations which become effective Sept. 30, Hon D. R. Mullen has so reported to Ottawa. "If this action is not cancelled it will discourage hog production and will result in a better distrust which producers have in being compelled to place their hogs on the packer's dead-stop," he informed Hon. J. G. Gardiner.

What amounts to free title on the first five bushels of wheat has been granted the farmer by the previous under terms of an order-in-council issued this week. The order gives priority of claim to harvest and threshing liens, including labor charges, and it will be validated at the next session of the legislature. All statutory claims are given second priority, the order said, which has won approval from various trade bodies and from Hon. Alexander Ross, federal agriculture minister.

Edmonton Chamber of Commerce, according to John Blue, secretary manager is opposed to the observance of Remembrance Day, November, and is seeking the views of boards of trade across Canada to the hope of having that customary observance cancelled. All energies should be concentrated on winning the war, said Mr. Blue, who pointed out that Thanksgiving is close to the armistice celebrations in any case.

Alberta created new health records during the present year, according to Dr. M. E. Bow, deputy minister of health. Only three cases of typhoid and two of paratyphoid were recorded, compared with 60 in 1,895 yearly 52 years ago. In three days deaths range from 60 to 100 annually from three diseases. In 1938 infantile paralysis were recorded, and infantile deaths dropped to a new low both for the seven month and under class and three twelve months and under. Alberta had the second lowest infantile death rate, British Columbia having the lowest.

Reduce The Ash Heap

Waste which can be prevented or [illegible] at its [illegible]. In time of war waste that can be avoided is more than unfortunate, it becomes nothing less than unpatriotic and vile.

The importance of preventing loss and of reclaiming waste material which can be put to useful purposes is recognized by all the belligerents in this war. Savory countries as well as those of the Allied Appeals are constantly being made and organizations are being set up to prevent loss of materials which can be converted into weapons of offence and defence or which can be used to replace other materials [illegible] for government and to prevent a waste of all kinds.

Every article and every commodity which in ordinary times, in regard to its manufacture and use passed out into the rubbish heap, but can now be reused and made to do duty in some form or another — or paying a part at least to that objective. Will of treasuring the war. To the citizen this statement which can be made of value are not contended to that extent the winning of the war is being retarded. Every step the world campaign in Great Britain Canada and other lands of the Empire plays a role in the overthrow of Hitler and Mussolini and their Nazi and Fascist hordes.

It is because we are at war that the conservation week in Canada, scheduled for next October assumes greater importance than ever. For conservation free every year in this country there is an enormous [illegible] of resources in human life and property resources which could be of great value if the conflict which is being waged to conserve our lives and our property and these more intangible but none less precious possessions — our liberties.

• • •

Loses Its Value

Without even considering the loss of life and the suffering it entailed, unestimated fire in Canada last year resulted in loss of property to the value of over $24,000,000, and this is a loss which handicapped Canada a war effort to an even greater extent than that figure represents.

Property lost by fire produces the employment of money for replacement which should have been available for ordinary commercial channels to far greater effort. It means the use of materials and energy which [illegible] would have been available, directly or indirectly for the prosecution of the war. Every dollar in coin or credit, every piece of material and every hour of energy, utilized in replacing loss which could have been prevented, represents that much drag on the country's war effort.

There is another aspect to the question which should not be overlooked, and that is the fact that where insurance is carried, the loss represents a the community at large. Once is lost it is gone and the community [illegible] after a disastrous conflagration. Oh, well, that's all right. It was covered by insurance." Those who blithely dismiss the matter in this happy-go-lucky manner overlook the fact that the loss and dividing the loss by the lucky manner, forget that they themselves are sharing part of the burden of the loss, for every loss is reflected in the insurance rates which all must seek that protection must pay. Fire insurance does not prevent loss. It is greater will be the tax on the community for protection, for fire insurance rates are based on experience

Education

An analysis of the figures of fire losses throughout the Dominion in 1939 shows that the people of the prairies are not altogether guiltless in the matter of waste by fire. The three prairie provinces last year are shown to have totalled $7,965,153 in property values to the fire demon That may not appear to be high in proportion to the remainder of the Dominion, yet much of it could have been prevented, as a survey of the causes demonstrates.

In the three provinces and, in fact, throughout the Dominion, rivalings head the list as the monetary loss and the careless use of matches for the greatest toll In Saskatchewan, typical of the sister prairie provinces agencies responsible for property by fire last year are listed as follows: 1, The careless smoker. 2, Defective stoves and furnaces. 3, Defective chimneys and flues. 4, Children playing with matches; 5, Careless handling of gasoline and petroleum products.

It does not require much reflection to determine that all fires attributable to these four major causes could not have occurred. Many of them could have been prevented with the exercise of reasonable care. If smokers would only use their cigarette butts and tobacco ashes properly extinguished, if people would periodically inspect stoves, furnaces, chimneys and flues and remedy defects, if matches were placed beyond the reach of children, if folks exercised common-sense precautions in handling gasoline and similar inflammable liquids, stores of tragic losses would be cut to the minimum.

It is important, therefore, that fire prevention week be observed, that its lessons be taken to heart, not only when they are fresh in the mind but throughout the year If this is done, then not only will the fire loss be substantially reduced and the tragedies of uncontrolled fire be almost eliminated but all will be a valuable contribution towards winning the war—the greatest and most costly of all wars.

Birmingham Gloried Employer But Not Wife Who Was Too Economical

He had found fault with his short-tempered wife, who was too economical.

"I don't want you to think," replied the great man, sharply. "I want you to take down my words accurately and then put them into type as I have dictated them without altering or putting a word in."

Story Is Ended

Wetmouth Mouth Of Gas-Light Has Its Nose A Bolo

News that the Wetmouth Company, of Gloucester City, N.J., has gone out of business is barring not because the making of gas light has become antiquated but because the company was able to hold on for so long The Wetmouth machine, very much for lighting in millions of homes and public places throughout the world, was the visible symbol of the gas light era." They supplied the illuminations for the City Fathers when the police were haloed, when the rich had champagne and lobster suppers, when baseball players were monstrous and when life moved with a quiet pedestrianity. The odd part of the whole Wetmouth story is that the gadget was foredoomed to extinction when it was invented in 1884 by Carl Auer Freiherr von Welsbach, an Austrian for one over Thomas A. Edison, five years earlier had demonstrated the electric light bulb and it was not until 1901 that Auer started the trick of making his mantles give off a white light. Edison had been engaged in rubbing on a relatively repeating that to end the Wetmouth business would it had spread over the whole globe wherever gas could be obtained. The story is end now The Welsbach mantle is a relic, a reminder of grandfather's heyday when heroes rolling a lad to the new governor on New York Herald Tribune

Music Lessons In War Time

Mainland Education Should Be Continued In Time Of Stress

Education in the arts should not cease moment in war time Sir Ernest MacMillan, principal of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, strongly had [illegible] to say. "In this war to preserve civilization, we must try to have it [illegible] taught to value it at state, no sacrifice is too great to assure a victory. The war is being fought to make that our children will live in a better world It would be a tragedy if we in defending the civilization we treasure are failed to hand on the torch to those who follow. Music is surely [illegible] essential side of our children's education, and should be taught in all ranks.

"A child whose interests are interrupted at the age of seven in learning to play and sing will have more trouble in picking up his musical studies than in most other subjects music calls for a certain amount of skill and more exacting than most subjects and every year it remains a private enjoyment is some cases it may be that [illegible] begun as a hobby and amateur may turn into a permanent loss

Music may never be strictly a war because by its very nature it rails for the development of individual distinction, but no educational subject has proved more universally of value than music The late President Eliot of Harvard University declared that 'the best mind-trainer in the curriculum was music' and one of the chief claims of experienced educationists is that, broadly speaking, those who study music are likely to be better in all other at their general studies."

Hudson Battalion Army Band Joins Battalion In Scotland

Most picturesque group of volunteers who have yet presented themselves for enlistment in the A.I.F. is the Hudson Battalion Army Band which marched to the drill hall of the Royal Mediterranean Regiment, the band leader proudly announced. It offered his 35 players as a body and within an hour they were the band of the 2-22nd Battalion, having exchanged the Salvation Army navy blue uniforms for the scarlet of the Australian "digger" felt hat.

Note and Comment

Some people profess great indignation over the Government permitting the export of scrap metal to Japan, but do these people realize that they are helping Japan finance the war at the expense of Great Britain by buying Japanese fabrics on sale in stores. Take handkerchiefs, shoes, pillowcases, towels, etc., these are imported from Japan in enormous quantities. Britain can supply all these things but Canada is taking more from Japan than they do from England. Let us be consistently patriotic and make our purchases fight for England as well as our sons. Every dollar sent Japan helps them in their war of aggression. And every dollar spent in England helps them to defend the Empire against aggression.

Some writers are predicting an early invasion of England by Germans. Mr. Churchill, always courteous, has arranged a Reception Committee. We feel sure Jerry won't complain about lack of cordiality. If Fritz and Adolph decide on the visit and to bring the family, some consideration should be given to the poor fish in the channel in case the visitors should run out of "victuals" on the way over.

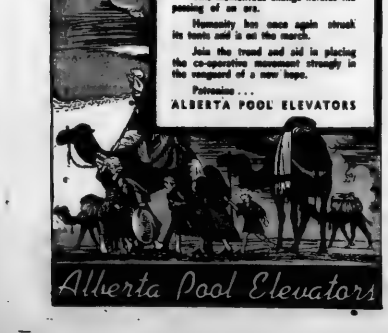
"HUMANITY HAS STRUCK ITS TENTS"



At one stroke the thousand-year-old British Constitution was abolished by the British House of Commons...

It was done by the passage of an act that could be placed on a sheet of notepaper.

In a few hours the capitalistic organization of society was undermined.

Profit as a motive in human association was suspended.

Labor relinquished cherished rights and privileges as its contribution.

This momentous change heralds the passing of an era.

Humanity has once again struck its tents and is on the march.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Are Sin, Disease and Death Real" will be the subject of the Lesson Sermon at Christian Science Churches on Sunday. One of the Scriptural citations is "Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand." (Eph. 6:13). One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, is, "Sin should become unreal to everyone. It is in itself inconsistent - a divided kingdom. Its supposed realism has no divine authority, and I rejoice in the approbation of this grand verity."

Winnipeg, Oct. 10th.—Sergeant D. MacRae, 13th. Field Battery, a former professional battler, defeated Reg Siddons, of the same unit. The bout was a friendly contested affair with Siddons dropping a close decision. The fighting soldiers held the tradition of the Sid-Burney, A.T.A., in an open ring, Saturday night, when Siddons, the aggressor from the start, won handily. Ken Siddons also a scrapper, was not entered in this contest. More than 1,500 soldiers on active service from Western Canada enjoyed 10 contests. The 13th. Field Battery appears to be filled with leather constabularies with 2 fighting trio's namely Bill, Dennis and Angus MacRae — Ken, Reg and Frank Siddons. The Siddons boys are a really young family, their ages being 19-20-21 years.

Agriculture's Future

The future welfare of agriculture in Western Canada is a topic which affects minds as few other matters do. How is it going to fit into the Canadian, the Empire and world economy for the next few years if the war proves to be a long one and what trend will it follow to be most useful and valuable after the fight has been won and the world gradually settles down to a more normal permanent stabilization?

These are questions which are being asked by a good many people and which are causing a good deal of concerning of issues for answers which may or may not be settled. Various theories are being advanced, some of which may be the key to the future some of which undoubtedly are not. It is one of those problems in which the old adage, "Hindsight is better than Foresight" applies with strong impact.

Unfortunately the solution is dismissed by obscurity. We can through a glass darkly but when this question is approached. There are so many unknown factors that at present no clear cut answer can be given. The problem bristles with imponderables and it is then very fact that gives considerable to the question a good deal of glamour for the theorists

* * * * *

The Paramount Objective

When this problem is resolved in the mind, however, one thing is immediately clear and definite. It stands out like a beacon light. And that is the playing its full part in the winning of the war as the immediate and imperative objective of Western Canadian agriculture which means the ample provision of foodstuffs to meet the needs of Great Britain and of those who again become the active Allies of the Empire as and when they are released from the yoke of the oppressor

That is one of the duties which has been assigned to and cheerfully and gladly accepted by this country It is the paramount job in hand for Western Canada, for as has been very appropriately stated as an unmistakable verity there is no future for Western Canadian agriculture unless Britain and Canada win the war

Not only must this war be won but it must be pushed to such a decisive finality as to preclude the possibility of any recurrence of the invasion of human and material interests on a hundred years. Those objectives lengthens the period of service which Western Canada can render the final cause of humanity and democracy

It is conceded that at the moment the problem of the storage and disposition of a big wheat surplus appears to be an acute one, but it is one which will be obviated on the war runs the course which has been mapped out for it, and the time will come when every bushel of this apparently huge surplus will be required

Vast stores of foodstuffs which had been warehoused in Britain from other available sources will disappear and have to be replaced, to feed the civilian population as well as the fighting forces. When this area is transferred to continental Europe and Britain troops press towards Berlin, it will become Canada's responsibility to feed the troops of Allied countries as well as their civilians and the number of these Canadian wards may be expected to increase with rapidity after the offensive gets well under way

Even after the war is over and peace terms are imposed on the enemy it is reasonable to expect that there will be great need on continental Europe for large quantities of Canadian agricultural produce and perhaps for some considerable time In many of the countries now under Hitler's heel agriculture has been stripped and ruined, and further enemy devastation may be expected as the grim stepping harden fall back to their own country Fields have been laid waste, livestock destroyed and labor conscripted and more of this kind of thing may be expected while the enemy is in retreat.

The only thing that will prevent further serious damage to agriculture in War-laid continental Europe will be sudden, wholesale collapse of the German arms, and it is possible that this may be brought about by the predicament of European agriculture itself combined with successful blockade and increased punishing by the R.A.F Even in that event it will be some time before agriculture can be fully reinstated in the Nazi-conquered countries.

* * * * *

When It's All Over

When the war is happily won and when the Nazi-conquered nations are once again able to fend for themselves in greater or less degree, then perhaps Western Canada will face the necessity of making some changes in its agricultural economy

It is not unwise to give some thought to the future and to provide for some insurance policy against that day as and when circumstances and conditions permit and provided that it is not allowed to impede the first and major objective

If some of the lost markets will never be returned, it may be that in future greater diversification will be the answer to the question which will then arise It may be necessary to provide for more domestic markets for more diverse agricultural products and perhaps the solution of domestic markets will be in greater industrialization of the west. That may necessitate greater development of power from billions of tons of lignite in southern Saskatchewan, from the oil fields of northern Alberta and the waters north of the 49th parallel. Means may be found to produce power cheaply enough to more than offset the freight cost of sending raw materials east and bringing them back in manufactured form, as for instance, lumber and sheets.

Britain Has Tremendous Problem In Control And Distribution Of Food

The reason that the British Ministry of Food asks to deal with a central agency when buying food supplies is because it must buy in large and assured volume Dr William Alex Mackintosh, Commissioner Marketing Service Dominion Department of Agriculture stated at the Dominion Provincial Agricultural Conference called by the Agricultural Supplies Board which met here on October 19 to 20.

This policy is necessary because the control and distribution of food both imported and home produced is tremendously complex and the tendency is for that control to become ever more intensified The has meant a vast reorganization of the means of handling all food products

The difficulties of the British Ministry have been increased by the problem of shopping under war conditions when supplies are not made known to the public nor to the trade. Of necessity arrivals are irregular. Often ships sailed under convoys or reports where seaborne facilities are inadequate and remote from points of consumption This increases the task of taking the produce to the depots for general distribution.

Dr Alley referred to the great strain in population which have been made. these have been lightened by the work of distributing food supplies Transportation of the United Kingdom is handicapped by the black-outs Many of the work of handling food has to be carried on and to visitors darkness This interferes with the free flow of goods in a manner which cannot be realized here in Canada

While the British Ministry of Food has control over bulk imported and home produced foods, it, in turn, is subject to the rigid requisitions of the Treasury The Treasury rules with an iron hand.

He pointed out that paying for goods is a comparatively simple matter but when it is remembered the country for there is no problem of foreign exchange. As far as Canada is concerned, there is no adverse balance of trade against Britain to an amount of about $600,000,000 for the

4 PRAIRIE SAILOR

Many of the youths now serving Canada or the war were drawn from the inland. The lure-bestowed young sailor shown emerging from the depths between the war Dr Allen and Standard-ards have been modified and will continue to be modified from time to time as war. We will be misled if we compare conditions there now with those existing before the war" If it is possible to obtain food products cheaply and with little trouble that these products will be considered. But if they are too difficult to obtain they will not be considered. The idea is to provide a diet which is adequate and although nutritious, is somewhat restricted. The Ministry of Food is getting away with it. The diet is not palatable and there is no malnutrition. Dairy beef and sheep production is being stimulated, but hogs and poultry are being restricted. By the fall of 1940 both will be down to one-third of their numbers at the United Kingdom of a year ago.

Dr Allen told the people of Canada should try to see the reasonableness of the British effort to keep up home production in the country products. There is no defeatism there and the people are confident they are up against They know the job they are facing in a stiff one but they are willing to face it.

The Discomforts Of War

Are One Thing Sailors Prefer To Civilian Occupation

W L. Clark in the Windsor Star, says:

It's the same old England. Miss Wilson W Hamilton, wife of Captain Hamilton of the Canadian, has just returned from England, where she was with her soldier husband for six years.

"The English people assume me mood and they never seem to get used to it. And it is cold. I've never been cold in my life and for the on the first time I had to wear woollen clothing I've been all winter hovering over a brazier with the rest of the house Freezing They grumble about the heating equipment, or lack of it, though they do nothing about it. But about the discomforts and dangers and anxieties of war they have nothing but the most cheerful outlook. I never heard a Cockney of complaint about the war or its accompanying difficulties. They do amuse me I love England. The people are so very brave. And they are without any fear whatever regarding the final result of the war."

Miss Hamilton found complaint complaining about the cold and making no effort to improve on the little discomforts. Most complained about the war When they think of that, they are more determined to see it through to victory.

Bank Gets Grain

Large Percentage Of Remaining Crop In Provisional Elevators

Wheat, barley and rye crops large enough to cover almost all of Canada's import needs are now in storage there the Nazis may reach by Soviet Russia a grab of new territories in the form of Bessarabia and northern Bucovina, the Rumanian hotbeds of business research and statistical survey

The Russian territorial haul more than wipes out Rumania's usual export surpluses of these three grains but it will be well on at least one of these items ordinarily could supply half the German needs, the ports are closed.

Simultaneously with this report, the German press announced that harvest prospects in Germany seemed an adequate winter food supply for Germany and that Balkan crops "while not record breakers," are more than adequate.

The institute's figures gave the nations crops loss from the Russian move as 91 per cent. of barley, 74 per cent of rye and 32 per cent. of corn.

Proven Incinator Effective

Captain Stevenson-Reid Tells Audience How Ship Was Destroyed

That story tells how effective the "engineering" equipment is in incinerating ships from the magnetic mines Germany strews around Britain's coasts.

A neutral ship several weeks ago was heading for Southend and was due to anchor outside the port. Thinking it a waste of electricity to keep the "degaussing" gear in operation while the ship was at anchor, the captain ordered it switched off.

As soon as the engineer turned the switch, the ship blew up. It had been anchored over a magnetic mine.

British Building Program

Factories Being Designed With View To Save Precious Supplies

Following investigations by the building materials section of the department of scientific and industrial research, Britain's building code has been prepared for the building of factories with very little steel to conserve supplies for war work of all, and a minimum of glass—as an A.R.P. measure.

Strength and safety of the structure will be preserved, the sponsors have stated, but with the material obtained by a more uniform distribution of windows and roof lights.

The investigations, it was explained by Dr E. V. Appleton secretary of the department, were set up by the government scheme to spend over $5,000,000 on building in 1940.

With the exception of steel and timber there is no shortage of building materials The main shortages of which is being offered in the roofs of the new buildings.

Pestilence May Have To Be Reckoned With In Europe

If Belgium were to be the only part of Europe suffering in the coming pestilence would be pitiful enough But Belgium will not be the only victim. Pestilence must try to lose out-fish in the dark winter months Denmark has already scored a new fresh livestock slaughtered for lack of fodder At Northern Rhine the golden wheat stands high in the fields with no one to harvest it No one is keeping it from going to seed. The starvation-mad men of Europe are busy harvesting other crops that year The Fifth Horseman is master of famine and death rids high through the Balkan skies and a Fifth Horseman pestilence may yet ride alongside them, across a continent ribbon-lighted by the cold in need hungry as vulnerable to disease germs as they were to the lice-bombers and tanks of the German army—New York Times.

Modern Dive-Bombers

Germany Relying On New Type With Nazis In Mind

Observers in Britain declare that Germany has placed the greatest reliance in two principal dive-bombers the Junkers Ju-87 and the Ju-88

The Ju-87 is one of the first machines ever to be designed wholly as a dive-bomber, although the American Curtis "Hell-Diver" and the British Hawker "Hurricane" are adapted for dive-bombing before the Germans built their first good dive machines.

In appearance the Ju-87 is a conventional stressed-skin monoplane. Its wings are well fastened to the centre section of the wings are set at a decreasing angle of 12 degrees on each side of the fuselage The outer sections have an upward angle of eight degrees. The gives the wings of the Ju-87 a characteristic kink.

Some Forage Crops Can Be Successfully Grown Where Soil Is Alkaline

Alkaline soils are very common in the semi-arid region of Western Canada. In Southern-brown areas, the Swift Current area mapped 200,000 acres as alkaline soils. The dense not the only area in which alkali is found on the soils of marshes, used, but does it include the Yorkton, areas Assiniboia with local soil areas. Many of the irrigation areas are also affected by alkali. Alkali is a serious menace of parts of the country and may be sufficient to make the growing of alfalfa impossible.

The remedy unquestionably is to get rid of the salts, usually by means of drainage. Such projects often involve considerable work and require considerable skill.

It is evaporation which causes the appearance of alkali at or near the surface. Where a high water table exists frequent cultivation checks evaporation and may be sufficient where the alkali is light. A root or hoed crop is quite satisfactory where the water table is kept in the condition of a loose dry mulch. Cover crops such as sweet clover and alfalfa where alkali and are satisfactory where the concentrations are very light. Deep ploughing is not recommended as it usually concentrated near the surface.

Where the alkaline areas are small the condition may be corrected by heavy applications of barnyard manure. This method has proven successful especially where several applications have been made over a period of two or three years.

Plants differ markedly in their tolerance of alkaline salts. Western crops there-se soils no unprogated with alkali that the majority of crops could not survive.

Sugar beets are remarkably tolerant of alkali. While it may not be possible to use the crop for the manufacture of sugar it can be fed profitably to live stock.

Mangels are also quite tolerant of alkali and, since they are a root crop, can be fed the cow-ness a good crop to advantage on saline soils

Among the grasses which can be successfully grown on alkali soils are barn to strong salinity are western wheatgrass or bluegrass, slender wheatgrass and bromegrass Crested wheatgrass, sarpo and fortail millet will grow on soils of medium salinity

With the exceptions of sweet clover, alfalfa, and strawberry clover, legumes crops appear to be sensitive to small quantities of alkali. In many cases a good stand of alfalfa is necessary that the hay-per-bushel be reasonably free of coarse salts a light application of manure frequently aids in establishing a stand, but it is suggested the necessary land requirements and checks northern experience with the resultant up-take of alkali salts.

Sweet clover ranks fairly high in the degree of alkali. It will grow well on soils containing as much as 0.3 per cent of soluble salts. In addition to providing feed for live stock, it has considerable merit in the improvement of certain soils for the production of other crops.

Of the cereal crops, barley is more resistant than oats or wheat. If the crop is grown for hay rather than grain, however, the greens on the soils with higher salt concentrations.

Ballot Proof Vest

Invented Chiefly To Will Stop Machine Gun Bullets

A protective vest, designed by Major H. I. Cron Churchill, with which he claims will stop even machine-gun bullets was tested by inspectors of the British Army Ordnance Board at the Woolwich Arsenal, London, recently.

Major Cron, a former imperial staff officer and research petrologist, says his vest is light enough to be worn without difficulty The material is made from a rock found only in Canada.

Inspector Bolton tested the vest by firing 6 rubber-mounted rifles and 45 rubber sub-machine-gun bullets at it The bullets struck the material but not through it," he reported "I saw the bullets after-wards and they looked as if they had been turned inside out."

Ottawa's Big Bus

Suggestion Made That Clock Should Be Placed On Vehicles

It's a very pretty scene from the room of Parliament Hill at night when the lights are on in the House. Members looked on one another in the commencement and remeteration

There does exist between His Britannic Majesty's Government and the Government of France a treaty in which I can only describe as sexual. So serious is fact that I have felt it necessary to advise the Prime Minister that all naval and military operations have shall be stopped Britain shall be remitted and that all hostilities shall be immediately mobilized."

A moment of deadly silence Then a roar of protest There was hooting at the Government benches a burst of cries of indignant questions From gently the Speaker secured silence and the Joseph went on in his grave hushed tone:

"I am not prepared to answer any further questions tonight and I must ask honorable members to suspend judgment until Monday when I hope to make a statement on behalf of His Majesty's Government

And with that unheeding the cries, he turned and walked through the Speaker's chair and out of sight

"Good God!"

Jim was white to the lips

"That means war"

Ah, who had fallen into a doze woke with a start in time to see his companion getting out of the House. He followed him along the corridors to Sir Joseph's room and knocked. "It is I, sir," he said, and hastily he turned the handle and walked in.

The room was in darkness save for a single lamp on the desk, and Sir Joseph sat in the chair with his head in his hands.

By the time he got back Jim found the lobby crowded with excited members. The Prime Minister was in the West of England, the First Lord of the Admiralty and the Secretary for War had left that afternoon to address a series of public meetings in the North; and always the Parliamentary buzz seeking the other members of the Cabinet. He found no trace of them, however Sir Joseph after he left the House until became upset and disappeared. Nobody knew. The foreground the Foreign Minister was rushing out into Palace Yard. Jim hailed him, and had a word with him. Grand Sir Joseph had come out of the House, but he had gone back. No one was waiting; a few minutes before. The detective showed the Minister to his car, and here they had a further shock. The Minister had not arrived at his home.

"Are you sure?" asked Jim incredulously, thinking the matter had become a matter for the police.

"Positive, sir. Why, is anything the matter?" asked the man in the uniform.

Jim did not wait to reply. They found a taxi, and he set off again beyond legal speed to Park Lane. They found Sir Joseph there. The Foreign Minister had returned to Morton's. When they reached Grosvenor House they came to within the stretch of a 'bus ho'; dancing was in full swing, but in the library and in the large drawing room overlooking Park Lane. They found Morton, and a moment's look at his face showed most astonished man of all.

"Of course, I haven't come back here," he said, and up the wide stairs to the Queen and then home to bed. What has happened?"

"You'll see it in the newspapers in the morning," said Jim curtly, and then back to Parliament in time to find the members streaming out of the House, which had been adjourned.

Whilst he was talking with a member he knew, a car drove up and he saw Sir Joseph come hastily and landed. It was the Chancellor of the Exchequer, looked-chamberlain with a cheap, the most brilliant member of the Cabinet.

"They have heard all about it," he said, in his thin, rasping voice. "Where is Sir Joseph?"

He looked round, who was known to him, and, pushing his way through the crowd of members, went hand in hand with him along the corridor to his room

"Were you at the House when Sir Joseph spoke" he asked

"I'm not," said Jim

"Just tell me what happened."

Briefly almost word for word, Jim Crofton repeated the astounding speech

"He must be mad," said the Chancellor emphatically. "There is not a word of truth in the whole story unless very well something may have happened since I saw him last"

"Can't you frame a denial?" suggested Jim, who looked bit his lip

In the absence of the Prime Minister it was impossible to do that until I have seen Sir Joseph."

A thought struck Jim

"Sir Joseph has evidently been to make as a souvenir man, is he?"

"Yes, I believe so," the Chancellor emphatically. "He is the smartest person I've ever met. In his senility he is wonderful."

He rang a bell and sent a message to the effect that while he understood to get into touch on the long-distance phone with the absent Ministers

The secretary of Downing Street were evidently engaged in a similar quest, with the result that until 1 in the morning neither had communication to make to the head of the Government

"I'll go," said Jim, getting hold of the newspapers, I suppose—"

"It is 1 in the morning," the Chancellor irritably. "I've just had a copy of the first editions Why he did it I cannot imagine. Your friend has smashed the Government. What other results will follow I dare not think of."

"What do you think will be the result?" asked Jim, rising to his feet

The Minister spread out his hands.

"The markets, of course will go to pieces, but that doesn't interest us so much as the feeling it may create in France. Germany views nothing as serious in France on a short visit."

Jim left him talking, vainly on the Paris wire, and at 8 o'clock in the morning was reading a verbatim report of Sir Joseph Layton's remarkable speech. The later editions carried a leading article type.

"We are informed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer that the Queen incident has never been mentioned in the Cabinet Chamber, and it is not regarded as being of the slightest importance. The Chancellor informs us that he knows nothing of Sir Joseph Layton's extraordinary statement in the House of Commons."

All night long Jim literally sat on the doorstep of Whitehall Gardens waiting for any great hope for Sir Joseph's return. He learned that the Chancellor had received a message from the West by special train and that a statement had already been issued by the Government to the Foreign Minister.

Ottawa's Big Bus

Suggestion Made That Clock Should Be Placed On Vehicles

It's a very pretty scene from the room of Parliament Hill at night when the lights are on in the House. Members looked on one another in the commencement and remeteration

There does exist between His Britannic Majesty's Government and the Government of France a treaty in which I can only describe as sexual. So serious is fact that I have felt it necessary to advise the Prime Minister that all naval and military operations have shall be stopped Britain shall be remitted and that all hostilities shall be immediately mobilized."

A moment of deadly silence Then a roar of protest There was hooting at the Government benches a burst of cries of indignant questions From gently the Speaker secured silence and the Joseph went on in his grave hushed tone:

"I am not prepared to answer any further questions tonight and I must ask honorable members to suspend judgment until Monday when I hope to make a statement on behalf of His Majesty's Government

And with that unheeding the cries, he turned and walked through the Speaker's chair and out of sight

"Good God!"

Jim was white to the lips

"That means war"

Ah, who had fallen into a doze woke with a start in time to see his companion getting out of the House. He followed him along the corridors to Sir Joseph's room and knocked. "It is I, sir," he said, and hastily he turned the handle and walked in.

The room was in darkness save for a single lamp on the desk, and Sir Joseph sat in the chair with his head in his hands.

By the time he got back Jim found the lobby crowded with excited members. The Prime Minister was in the West of England, the First Lord of the Admiralty and the Secretary for War had left that afternoon to address a series of public meetings in the North; and always the Parliamentary buzz seeking the other members of the Cabinet. He found no trace of them, however Sir Joseph after he left the House until became upset and disappeared. Nobody knew. The foreground the Foreign Minister was rushing out into Palace Yard. Jim hailed him, and had a word with him. Grand Sir Joseph had come out of the House, but he had gone back. No one was waiting; a few minutes before. The detective showed the Minister to his car, and here they had a further shock. The Minister had not arrived at his home.

"Are you sure?" asked Jim incredulously, thinking the matter had become a matter for the police.

"Positive, sir. Why, is anything the matter?" asked the man in the uniform.

Jim did not wait to reply. They found a taxi, and he set off again beyond legal speed to Park Lane. They found Sir Joseph there. The Foreign Minister had returned to Morton's. When they reached Grosvenor House they came to within the stretch of a 'bus ho'; dancing was in full swing, but in the library and in the large drawing room overlooking Park Lane. They found Morton, and a moment's look at his face showed most astonished man of all.

"Of course, I haven't come back here," he said, and up the wide stairs to the Queen and then home to bed. What has happened?"

"You'll see it in the newspapers in the morning," said Jim curtly, and then back to Parliament in time to find the members streaming out of the House, which had been adjourned.

Whilst he was talking with a member he knew, a car drove up and he saw Sir Joseph come hastily and landed. It was the Chancellor of the Exchequer, looked-chamberlain with a cheap, the most brilliant member of the Cabinet.

"They have heard all about it," he said, in his thin, rasping voice. "Where is Sir Joseph?"

He looked round, who was known to him, and, pushing his way through the crowd of members, went hand in hand with him along the corridor to his room

"Were you at the House when Sir Joseph spoke" he asked

"I'm not," said Jim

"Just tell me what happened."

Briefly almost word for word, Jim Crofton repeated the astounding speech

"He must be mad," said the Chancellor emphatically. "There is not a word of truth in the whole story unless very well something may have happened since I saw him last"

"Can't you frame a denial?" suggested Jim, who looked bit his lip

In the absence of the Prime Minister it was impossible to do that until I have seen Sir Joseph."

A thought struck Jim

"Sir Joseph has evidently been to make as a souvenir man, is he?"

"Yes, I believe so," the Chancellor emphatically. "He is the smartest person I've ever met. In his senility he is wonderful."

He rang a bell and sent a message to the effect that while he understood to get into touch on the long-distance phone with the absent Ministers

The secretaries of Downing Street were evidently engaged in a similar quest, with the result that until 1 in the morning neither had communication to make to the head of the Government

"I'll go," said Jim, getting hold of the newspapers, I suppose—"

"It is 1 in the morning," the Chancellor irritably. "I've just had a copy of the first editions Why he did it I cannot imagine. Your friend has smashed the Government. What other results will follow I dare not think of."

"What do you think will be the result?" asked Jim, rising to his feet

The Minister spread out his hands.

"The markets, of course will go to pieces, but that doesn't interest us so much as the feeling it may create in France. Germany views nothing as serious in France on a short visit."

Jim left him talking, vainly on the Paris wire, and at 8 o'clock in the morning was reading a verbatim report of Sir Joseph Layton's remarkable speech. The later editions carried a leading article type.

"We are informed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer that the Queen incident has never been mentioned in the Cabinet Chamber, and it is not regarded as being of the slightest importance. The Chancellor informs us that he knows nothing of Sir Joseph Layton's extraordinary statement in the House of Commons."

All night long Jim literally sat on the doorstep of Whitehall Gardens waiting for any great hope for Sir Joseph's return. He learned that the Chancellor had received a message from the West by special train and that a statement had already been issued by the Government to the Foreign Minister.

Has Become Real Science

Gunsmith Studying Power Of Bullet In Its Unplanned Job

Among laymen there appears to be a popular misconception that bombing from the air is a sort of hit-or-miss process, with human element largely responsible for success and failure, and that the machine is a thing apart from the upper story of a building. The truth is that bombing like many other phases of modern warfare, is highly scientific. Men of assault based on precision of a fine art. Bombs and the sights determined by extremely sensitive instruments

Where a plane is to level flight, and a bomb release, the course, how-ever, is not determined by the pilot, but by the bomb-sight operator, who rather does it from the same horizontal position as the plane and the speed at which the plane is moving is the plane is travelling. This bomb-sight is a contraption until the bomb begins to lose its forward spee d and then it gradually slopes more and more toward the earth. The first hits, but it never as rudders and fins to keep it from tail-spinning.

Wind drift speed of the plane and its attitude are all important factors in working out the bomb-sight and must be taken if it is to reach its mark. A bomb is a projectile and the navigator watches the bombing sight which is in the nerve centre of a bomber a Royal Air Force bomber and can be manipulated to resolve all of the various calculations of the several elements that precede the release of the missile The plane's attitude relative to the earth is considered first its speed two hundred miles an hour, but it actually seems to stretch your income

Then bombs like that look like monstrous are just the result of rule-of-thumb sighting and planning. Ingenious marksmanship you may have to prove a gunner's mate can't go over the amount your budget admits.

For a family of three on $120 a month there is no choice with economical accuracy is perhaps hardest to impress to understand, but much as aerial warfare, as young Britain Revs are demonstrating it every night, the science of bombing and timing of bombs are based on laws of and bombardiers are trained to reduce open to produce an unfailing result. All things being equal, the most accurate bomber is the one that gets the most hits.—Hamilton Spectator.

Theory Declared Wrong

Abandoning From Heat In Summer Does Not Affect Body Hair

The old advice to cut less meat in hot weather was shown to be exactly wrong in experiments reported to the American Chemical Society at Detroit.

The right way, said Dr H B Parlow, director of the institute of animal nutrition at Pennsylvania State College, is to eat lean meat and other protein food as usual and be careful about consumption of starch or sugar and fat

The old theory rested on experiments in which lack of food was followed by itself and meat or protein, caused the rapid growth of body hair. Dr Parlow found that starch and sugar, fed protein, fats and sugars all together and showed that under these circumstances the coats don't come so much heat production

Wilson, trying to hold the tar paper on the side of Robt. Wilson's house, or Fred Haun trying to catch up with his wash tub, or seeing Geo. Blair standing outside his elevator, watching it kind of lift off the foundation, or Axel Skaga standing outside the garage looking towards the "White Lunch. If one was to look up the back alleys one would think that it was the first of November after the hallowe'en pranksters had departed.

A Healthful Sign

One of the most heartening and unpretentious stories appearing recently in the daily press is that of the organization and operation of the Farmstead Fruit and Vegetable Growers' Co-operative Association, the first of its kind in Saskatchewan, perhaps the first on the prairies.

The story is heartening because it demonstrates that it is possible for whole communities to organize a practical effort to place themselves on a self-sustaining or more nearly self-sustaining basis, and is unpretentious because it may pave the way for other communities to improve their lot, either in the same manner as the people of the Farmstead district, or in some other direction.

While the scope of this experiment, for it is yet hardly beyond the experimental stage, is not large in its first year, it is said in northwestern Saskatchewan near the Alberta boundary, it could have been staged in many parts of Alberta or Manitoba, indeed, anywhere that vegetables and fruit will grow.

Finding the raising of cereal a precarious business for a great number, the people of the Farmstead district organized to set up a co-operative among plant in May of this year. Capitalizing on the fact that the district could grow vegetables and small fruits to perfection and that such fruits also grew in profusion, a canning factory was set up to can the produce of the gardens and the land.

What is finer proposition, the people of the Farmstead district sought all the information they could before launching their experiment. They secured the assistance of the provincial department of agriculture as to the best methods of organizing and called on their nearest Dominion experimental farm staff for demonstrations of the canning process. The necessary equipment was purchased and in the fall quantities of produce were processed, canned and marketed.

Helping Themselves.

Of particular interest in the matter personally, as outlined by R. N. Arnason, of the Co-operation and Markets Branch of the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture. The association furnishes the seed, the salt, sugar, syrup and supplies. The growers take their fruit and vegetables to the factory, the canning plant, can their produce under supervision and take one half of the canned produce home with them. The association retains the other half for rental for most operating expenses and to pay for the equipment. Any surplus will be distributed on a patronage basis. There will be some variation from the above procedure depending on the locality in which the grower takes to the plant, but in general the 50-50 basis is used.

"The object is to observe all standard requirements as to quality canning and methods so that no difficulty will be experienced with regard to sale. In this case all the products have been disposed of to nearby towns. The products carried have been chiefly corn, peas, beans, cauliflower, carrots and several varieties of wild fruits."

A Practical Project

A self-help project of this nature will serve to confer many benefits upon those who participate in it, perhaps to an even greater extent than those who sponsored it may be aware at the present time These advantages are both material and moral.

One of the material benefits of such an undertaking and the one immediately obvious, of course, is the financial return which the sale of the processed produce brings to the co-operators. But in addition to the direct cash return but there is also to indirect cash benefit, inasmuch as the canned commodities consumed by the participants serve a cash outlay for vegetables and fruits if during the long winter and spring months when their time unprocessed home-canned products would have perished.

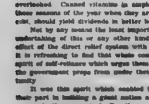
Another material advantage is the fact that factory canning with proper equipment enables large quantities of produce to be preserved under ideal conditions, resulting in less loss than if it were done at home with more or less primitive equipment. Moreover it is more economical because that more products will be conserved in this manner than would be the case if each individual were to undertake the preserving at home. Then, with the abundance of fruit and vegetables ideally to be found in most farm gardens, under the method, there should be no ample supply for every participant a home canned fruit, next year's crops are available, and a surplus for sale

Then, too, the health value of a project of this kind, should not be overlooked. Canned vitamins in ample quantity for the household during those seasons of the year when they are not available, except at prohibitive cost, should yield dividends in better health.

Not by any means the least important is the moral value of a self-help undertaking of this or any other kind. After a decade of the persistent and futile effort of the direct relief system with its tendency to sap the moral fiber, it is refreshing to find that whole communities are still imbued with that spirit of self-reliance which urges them to fend for themselves and to bequeath the government props from under their feet at the earliest possible opportunity

It was this spirit which enabled the pioneers of this country to play their part in building a great nation and it is the spirit which will enable us to win the war. And after the war is over, it is this spirit which will enable the people of the province to adjust themselves to the great changes which must inevitably come.

One of the English radio jests is that if you see an airplane flying backwards it's an Indian powwow. Others listen then just don't know.



Canada Has Good Bands

Conductors Too Can Furnish Music Equal To The Best

Such is the prediction of Canadians for bands and dance orchestras from the United States, according to the Toronto Daily Star that time. Bands will go in large and dance in one of those who would not be interested in a Canadian band or orchestra. This can hardly be regarded as fair to the achievements of an active musical force occurred in the summer of Canadian approval.

If Bobby Burns, conductor of imported bands and orchestras, there is plenty of distance in Canada. From Halifax to Victoria the country can supply musical organizations with just as much talent to their credit as any from across the border. And from what we hear over the radio big in their musical development.

Canada's Contribution

Sending Canadian money out of the country to bring in United States bands and orchestras is all right when the Exchange Control Board is stressing the importance of limiting expenditures in the United States is essentials to facilitate Canada's purchases there of the materials of war. Therefore, if the same condition exists between Canada and the United States considering whether representative Canadian bands and orchestras can be found to fill the requirements

WORLD OF WHEAT

By H.G.L. Stevens, Director "The Crop Testing Plan

Over many parts of the West rain unfortunately has fallen in untimely fashion. This condition brings in its train a difficult problem, and particular care will have to be taken if the farmer is not to suffer serious money losses.

Owing to the congesting in terminal elevators, grain from many country elevators can not only be moved forward as space develops in the terminals. This space only becomes available as grain is milled in Canada or is shipped Overseas.

All this means that grain now being taken in by country elevators is likely to stay there for considerable time before it can be moved forward to terminals. Grain that is tough cannot remain in any bin either on the farm or in country elevators without incurring the risk of going out of condition, of becoming heated, and so of being seriously damaged. Indeed tough and damp grain has been known to become heated to the extent that thousands of bushels had to be thrown on the rubbish pile.

In the past tough grain taken in at country elevators moved quickly to the terminals where it was dried by special machinery. This year, however, it is evident that tough grain can not possibly be moved with the same speed as in the past.

Under these circumstances farmers whose grain is therefore considered when it is tough will almost certainly find that no country elevator will be able to accept it, because of the fear of it going out of condition, and even though the farmer should store this tough grain in a bin on his own farm, there will still be the same high probability of heating and so of severe money loss to the farmer.

Considering all this what can be done? The answer is obvious. It is that this year at least farmers should not thresh any wheat that is said it is absolutely dry, at least dry to the extent that it is no longer damp nor tough. If the farmers will take particular care to watch their grain, and to thresh or combine only when the grain is in a dry condition, then it can safely be accepted by country elevators, or it can safely be stored on the farm without fear of it going out of condition

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Probation after Death" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. The Golden Text is Galatians 6:9 One of the Scriptural citations is "And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away" (1 Peter 5:4). One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "Blessed is the man that endureth (overcometh) temptation: for when he is tried, (proved faithful), he shall receive the crown of life, which the lord hath promised to them that love him." (p. 207).

By
Dr. K. W. Neatby
Director, Agricultural Department
North-West Line Elevators Association

Short articles will appear under the above heading in this and other weekly papers once every two weeks. The agricultural publication, "Seedtime and Harvest," is already familiar to many farmers and others in the prairie provinces. These fortnightly articles will, we hope, serve as a useful supplement to the larger publication which appears only twice each year.

Our purpose is to stimulate interest in, and discussion of, various problems involved in the production of field crops not only among farmers but also the public in general. The problems are manifold, and they vary not only from one district to another, but from year to year.

Naturally many readers will disagree with views expressed in this column. We believe that it will be wise to plunge recklessly into controversial problems concerning field crop production but our courage will fail when economic questions arise. We shall hope to hear from readers who disagree or who may have suggestions to offer.

Two weeks from today a discussion of black point and kernel smudge in wheat will appear. Later, articles will deal with dormancy in seeds, seed treatment problems, fibre flax, etc. We shall also consider the belief that early fall frosts are more likely to occur when the moon is "full" than at other times.

Our address is Agricultural Department, [illegible] Association, Winnipeg.

Street Wheat Cut By Line Elevators

In face of the emergency situation brought about through the quota on deliveries of farmers' wheat at country elevators, all line elevators have issued instructions to their agents to increase the price for all grades of Board street wheat by one-half of one cent per bushel, effective immediately, according to a statement issued today by A. C. Reid, president of the North-West Line Elevators Association.

In addition to increasing the price by one-half cent per bushel the line elevator companies will refund one half cent per bushel to all farmers who have delivered Board street wheat to line elevators since August 1st.

This decision was made in an effort to meet the emergency situation brought about by the shortage of storage space and the consequent quota system.

In spite of the fact that the earlier quantity was reduced to 750 bushels, some producers were unable on account of the quota to deliver that amount and secure track price. It is to compensate such cases that the street list price is advanced ½ cent per bushel.

Scottler Health District

Quarterly Report July 1st to Sept. 30th. By Dr. McCallum, M. D.

This is what may be termed an interm report. The yearly Report will correspond with the calender year.

The staff began their duties with the beginning of the school year.

The Board functions on clearly defined subjects, including education, adult hygiene, child hygiene, mental hygiene, communicable diseases, immunization tuberculoses control, sanitation, and laboratory work.

Educational work includes distribution of literature, talks on various health subjects, a movie projector machine is proving very satisfactory and is being made use of.

In child hygiene, during the summer, four pre school and baby clinics were held in four of the town. Of these two were successful and the other two were indifferent. The nurses did some follow-up home work with the children and were appreciated. The nurses, with the beginning of the fall terms, are checking up in the schools where the doctor examined last year. The purpose is to have children examined each year by either doctor or nurse.

The data on fresh meat, eggs and milk were the most satisfactory, especially that on milk.

Exclusion from school due to communicable diseases numbered 18, due largely to measles and chicken pox.

Under tuberculosis head, there were 20 tuberculin tests, and 28 patients examined.

Bovine tuberculosis, 570 cattle were tested. Of these were two positive cases and these animals will be eliminated.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. I. Mawer, of Stettler, at high noon, Saturday, October 26th, when Miss Nancy Helen Mawer elder daughter of Mrs. I. Mawer, became the bride of Mr. Alfred William Kinson, only son of Mrs. J. Bell, of Delia. Rev. Dr. Hart, of Stettler, officiating.

The bride entered the tastefully decorated living room on the arm of her step-father, Mr. I. Mawer, to the strains of the wedding march, played by miss Florence Lynch, of Stettler. The bride looked lovely in a steel blue tailored suit, with a corsage of talisman roses.

The mother of the bride was dressed in violet printed sheer, with pink carnations, while the groom mother wore black sheer, also with pink carnations.

After the ceremony which was attended by over twenty immediate friends and relatives the beautiful wedding gifts were presented to the bride and groom followed by the serving of a delicious buffet luncheon. Presiding at the tea table, which was centered by a three tier wedding cake was Mrs. I. Clement, of Donalda, aunt of the bride.

The bride chose as her going away costume, a silver fox trimmed coat with black accessories.

The happy couple left on their honeymoon; after which they will make their home in Calgary.

Why the Red Cross is in urgent need of funds

Here are a few tasks the Canadian Red Cross must tackle at once:

1. At the request of the British Red Cross, it has undertaken to provide 70,000 parcels of food each week from Canada to the British Isles. Many of these parcels are for individuals and thus help to relieve the strain on British food supplies.
2. The Canadian Red Cross will provide help and co-operation with the Department of Veterans Affairs in maintaining a number of convalescent hospitals in various parts of Canada for new Canadian Forces veterans and from overseas, who are sick or wounded.
3. The Canadian Red Cross will help to provide clothing and other necessities to the more than 10,000 European children in Britain, and the 100,000 refugees in the British countries who have sought shelter under the United Nations. Many articles of relief have been sent and a still greater but another half million articles will be needed from the Canadian Red Cross organization.
4. The Canadian Red Cross is sending an increasing flow of supplies for the alleviation of suffering in the countries by enemy bombing of Britain.
5. As Canada's own armed forces grow, on land, on sea and in the air, the need for Red Cross services increases.
6. The Red Cross must be ready and fully equipped to meet any emergency at the moment it arises.

These are tasks you must not leave undone. Support the Red Cross with all your heart.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Everlasting Punishment" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. One of the Scriptural citations is: "Again, when the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness that he hath committed, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive" (Ezekiel 18:27).

One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" is: "The way to escape the misery of sin is to cease sinning. There is no other way."

WORLD OF WHEAT

By H.G.L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan"

"There'll always be an England", we fervently sing, as we watch with breathless admiration the unyielding Londoners resisting the Nazis' ruthless daily bombings.

But it will take more than singing and admiration and British courage to preserve England; it will take greatly increased quantities of that wheat and copper, lead and nickle, of those aeroplanes and tanks, guns and shells which England now is buying from Canada and paying for in Canadian dollars. England badly needs more of these muni[illegible] and would buy more if she had Canadian dollars, but her supply of Canadian dollars is curtailed because we in Canada do not buy more British goods. (Canada buys from Britain each year only one third as much as Britain buys from us.) Our purchases of British goods, however, too are curtailed, because of Canadian tariffs, custom duties and other restrictions set up by Canada against the importation of British goods into this country.

Britain now stands desperate, almost alone, as a fighting defender of Canada's and the World's freedom. Britain needs all the help Canada and others can give. Let us, therefore, sweep away these tariffs, duties and other restrictions which now hamper Britian's war efforts; and then there will be a better chance of the song coming true — "There'll always be an England" —.

Worth Preserving

The fall the prairie provinces of Western Canada have played host to an increasingly large number of American hunters and sportsmen who have come into this country to enjoy a few days or a few weeks of the magnificent sport which these broad spaces afford for those who enjoy hunting the game birds.

These hunters from south of the international boundary have been welcomed with open arms. Government officials and officials of local game preservation and hunting organizations have extended invitation due to the wide-open game with kindred sympathies and common interests. These visitors have been advised where the best hunting is obtainable guides have been found for them and everything possible has been done to make their visit a happy one and to ensure good hunting for them.

The gates of hospitality have been flung wide open for these visiting hunters and they have been grateful for the consideration which has been shown them in the matter of advice to Canada's new efforts and that the good will of these visitors will continue to pay its bonds long after the war is over.

But apart from the economic aspect of the development of this form of the hunter's ardent hobby is so recognized that there are enough game birds in this country to afford good hunting for visitors as well, as for our own people provided all who participate in this form of sport are governed by the principles of good sportsmanship and are willing to abide by the regulations which have been laid down by the governing bodies to ensure the preservation of this great heritage in perpetuity for our enjoyment and for their enjoyment. We are willing to share our pleasures with neighbors for whom we have high regard and who in actuality are our fellows in a great sense

Matter Of Concern

The open season for ducks and upland game birds was nicely under way this fall when there appeared in one of the Western dailies announcement that it had been reported to officials of a provincial sports organization that "in some cases American hunters have been visiting rules of sportsmanship by shooting in the summit of their bag limits, but which they have no legitimate use."

The statement is one which should be of considerable concern to the governments of the prairie provinces, to officials and membership of all organizations devoted to the conservation of game and wild life to all lovers of wild life and the great outdoors and to the public generally.

The reason why the concern should be dissipated is briefly summarized in the report made by an official of one of the game conservation organizations in the unused paragraph of the article to which reference is made in which he states that "if sportsmen generally adopted such practices the province would soon be as devoid of game as were those of the northern states."

The spokesman for the organization in question put his finger on the crux of the situation when he inferred that if more sportsmen were selected to go unchecked, the time would come when large numbers of hunters would be tempted to flout the game laws and indulge in indiscriminate slaughter and it would not be very long when the game would be gone. We try would follow the passenger pigeon into oblivion and one of the greatest resources of the country would be dissipated. There would be no longer be any sport for our own people or for our American cousins. It is unthinkable that, in this enlightened day mark a denouement would be permissible

* * *

Bon Mot Is Timely

One moment for a moment collected the belief that more than a very few of the many hunters who have come to this country in enjoy sport would violate Canadian hospitality by indulging in indiscriminate and wanton slaughter, and it is inconceivable that the unsportsmanlike attitude would be condemned by the great majority of their own countrymen. Indeed, the game laws and regulations of this country are based on principles which have been given the seal of approval of the American people as well as those of Canada. That is itself is proof that the people of the United States as well as those of this country are conscious that their heritage should be preserved for the benefit of both for all time to come.

The observance of this great natural resource must not be sacrificed on the altar of temporary pleasure of a few selfish or thoughtless individuals, whether they be resident north or south of the international boundary. By mutual agreement the American and Canadian people have come to look upon it as their heritage and to cherish and preserve it. Neither must the goodwill and cordial relations which exist between the people of the two countries be jeopardized by heedless action of a few unsavory representatives of either. It would be penny wise and pound foolish to permit the game which lays the golden eggs to be killed.

Stories About Poland

South Endeavoring To Stamp Out Every Spark Of Nationality

The hand of Hitler falls heavily on occupied Poland. By harsh decree and prison camp Germany is endeavoring to stamp out the still glowing sparks of Polish nationality. By force and fear she is endeavoring to repair her own dwindling supplies of food.

Polish-language newspapers published in the United States reveal some of the story.

Americus Echo of Toledo, Ohio tells how on the anniversary of the day when German troops first crossed the Polish frontier German authorities held celebrations throughout all German-held territories. Every Pole in town had to name one of his most distinguished sons after Adolf Hitler.

A Nazi government decree makes every Polish landowner responsible for preparing all of his land for spring sowing. Any land going fallow will be confiscated by the German authorities and rented to persons of their choosing.

Hundreds of thousands of Polish men have been sent to work in Germany. Some German farms and city factories are employing Poles for 12 hours a day. Wages are taken from them and as interest on their work has been declared usury. Polish men are forbidden to ride in railroad cars and gather garnage in the streets.

Polish children are forbidden to attend recently declared in a radio speech that Germans who have not had at least four children by the age of 35 must remain on their newly acquired lands forever. Every German who has not married by that age must remain on their farms until they have married.

Where farm-girls sign social service forms, they are forced to join the Nazi women's organization. Every girl in the country control unit in future be directed from one country signal box to another.

An ingenious method of relief is forthcoming producer a respectable economy of working, as the poor and aged "comfort" lovers are no longer directly linked. At the hour of a week or lever not only are all the necessary points operated and the signals cleared over the complete route but at the same time any conflicting move is automatically prevented.

The principal advantage of the system is that the new signal boxes are small and can actually be mounted on the track diagram which tells the signalman at a glance exactly what is happening in the area under his control. He knows from lights on the chart before him whether sections of the railway track are occupied or not, the indications of the points, and what routes have been set up.

The control panel covers 600 routes, 770 sets of points, 320 signals 43 route indicators, and 18 indicators in sidings. More than 1,300 train movements a day will be directed from it.

United States Prepared To Take 10,000 Head Of Canadian Cattle

Canada's quota in the United States of 10 per cent of the total of cattle which may be imported under the trade agreement between the two countries, may be filled completely this fall, it was stated in Ottawa this afternoon. Department of agriculture officials announced

That the United States Department of Agriculture has announced that cattle may be imported duty free into the United States during the remainder of 1940 and the first quarter of 1941 from countries which have not exceeded their quota for the year. Canada's quota is 10 per cent of the total of cattle which may be imported into the United States from countries which have not exceeded their quota for the year. Figures Show Mere Manufacturing In Ontario Than On Prairies

The assumption that Canada's prairies are almost exclusively agricultural in their production is not borne out by the latest figures available at Ottawa concerning manufacturing in Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan. These point to a manufacturing production worth $378,478,-000 furnishing employment for 61,-816 people receiving salaries and wages amounting to $46,351,000. Western Canada may be one of the great granaries of the world, but it is also, apparently, developing from the standpoint of manufacturing.

Not Enough For Two

If Hitler Won War Mussolini Would Get Very Little

It would be readily interesting to hear if Mussolini has read Hitler's "Main Kampf." Have in a paragraph or so of some 1,000 words "I must never be forgotten that nothing really great in the world has been achieved without a fight, although that fact has been accomplished by a single violent act, but by successive, by their very origin, near within them the seeds of future attrition, indeed of loss of what is already achieved. The Wheat Situation

According to Pioneer Grain the quantity of wheat available for export and carry over at the 31, 1940, amounts to 700,000,000 bu. And the big question is: What are we going to with it? European markets are closed. Canada won't sell to belligerents. No where!

Yet there is another way of looking at it. Since August 1st, the Canadian Government more for their grain this year than any year since 1928, with the one exception of 1939 the for 100 millions have been paid out. Last year 170 millions were paid out, covering the same period. Whether we can do better than the 1940 period We still have nine months to go before the end of the crop year, and a lot can happen in nine months.

The talk had been of hard ships endured by Canadian farmers, when a member of the group drew from his pocket a letter and read it aloud. It was written by a relative of one and known to all present and unfolded a tale of suffering indeed. How one powerful house in Prance were rendered fearful by the decent of frantic, famishing refugees and then dispelled and shelled by the army of invasion. It told of flight northward, miles of trudging with not respite except when taking cover in ditches or open fields and bullets from the skies, then of the discovery that the enemy owned the way ahead and of moving to retrace their weary steps toward what had once been home. But the enemy had destroyed that, and could not be carried away was smashed Gone were all the trinkets and treasures of generations. Seldier still, gone was freedom. There remained only the instinct and quest for food. That, said the reader, folding the letter, night cause Canadians to consider the inestimable values of liberty which is worth some sacrifice to retain.

—Leslie Emlin in Farm News Letter.

The discussion on the germ and [illegible] called "black point" or "black tip," is unusually common in this year's crop. The term "kernel smudge" has been adopted by plant pathologists for this disease to avoid confusion with a less conspicuous and less common disease which they call black point. Kernel smudge is a fungous disease and may be caused by at least two different [illegible] of them Helminthosporium [illegible] is a dangerous parasite, being a very common cause of seedling blight and rust-rot of wheat. Incidentally, it is capable of attacking roots, leaves and grains of barley.

The fungi which cause kernel smudge are probably present in all wheat fields in western Canada, and [illegible] contains an abundance of [illegible] especially in late summer [illegible] in the fall. Outbreaks of the disease such as that which occurred this year must, however, be due largely to favourable weather conditions. It appears that the new rust resistant varieties are more susceptible than were the old standard varieties such as Marquis.

There is, at present, no way of controlling or preventing kernel smudge. Diseased seed may produce a crop free from kernel smudge, and the crop produced from disease-free seed may contain many discoloured kernels. Since, however, one of the fungi involved may cause seedling blight, if "smudged" grain is used for seed it should be treated with an organic mercury dust.

Dr F J Greaney, Associate Plant Pathologist at the Dominion Rust Research Laboratory, has consented to prepare a more complete discussion of this problem for publication in the next issue of the now well known, semi-annual "Seedtime and Harvest."

In A Common Cause

With the greatest interest I the next to the Conference of the Dominions, the supreme ... complete unity of the people of Canada, the perfect accord ... between the ... of governments and ... and all classes and ... in the common ... and ... becoming ... more apparent.

This is very essential ... the country is not to face a serious ... for the ... form of aggression of the Nazi ... propaganda is designed to undermine morale and to create dissension ... fear and a feeling of hopelessness and inspire ... Defeatism. This is the most dangerous of all the weapons employed by Hitler as the result ... of events in Europe has demonstrated only too well.

In every country which has been so far subjugated by the Hitler hordes, the arch-enemy of democracy has utilized propaganda for his first onslaught against his potential victims. In his book Mein Kampf he has openly told the world that that was to be his strategy and that is one promise that he has carried out to the letter, with dire results to those who might have believed his legions, had they not handled this weapon.

The Hitlerian program is set forth ... with intended victims from within, thereby to encourage and assist them with poisoned propaganda to pave the way for an easy walk over with bombers, tanks and all the other weapons of the Nazi war machine. To date the Britons alone have taken the sting out of this insidious lethal weapon and have ridded their Hitler-beset Canadians too, are made of sterner stuff than others ... have succumbed to the poisoned wells of German propaganda and can be relied upon to halt the foe at this slippery battlefield. If the people of this country unite to resist these first advances and rout the enemy at that ground there can be no doubt of the ultimate outcome of the more tangible phases of the conflict.

East-West Unity

There are those who, because of the complexity of the population of this country feared that Hitler's agents might find Canada a fertile soil in which to sow the seeds of discord, fear and distrust, but the month ... four which might have been harbored by a few has been completely dispelled.

Perhaps never in the history of this country have the people of the Dominion been so united in a common cause as they are today determined to rout out all those who would espouse even a semblance of the horrible Nazi-inspired creed and to preserve intact for themselves and their posterity the great heritage of freedom and liberty which many Canadians inherited as these birthright and which was the great majority of the others came here to make sure of.

In Western Canada ... and as it is of ... in the ... many creeds, many races and many tongues, we find nothing but complete unity of purpose, an intense desire to unite all party differences and an earnestness to bend every energy to the winning of the war to the end that those things which we value so highly may be preserved to us ... our children and our children's children.

We have strong evidence that the same unity of purpose binds the Anglo-Saxon and the French constituents in Eastern Canada, as ... soil that common bond of sympathy and understanding. Here is the testimony of Le Jour, powerful French language newspaper published in Montreal, the citadel of French-Canadian Quebec.

"About the war and the need to win it French-language Canadians think just like all the rest of the country. About 85 per cent are pro-British in the present crisis and about 95 per cent are passionately anti-Nazi. Just give me a chance to put public opinion ... says the editor ... and I am sure that I could prove that these figures are not exaggerated.

In the comforting editorial the editor of Le Jour cites "four striking statements which ... the attitude of most of French-language Canadians: 1. The complete failure of the theatrical Goudist threat ... 2. Duplessis defeat. 3.—The complete victory of the men responsible for our participation in the war. 4.—The perfect order which marked the three days of national registration.

"Isn't this enough proof for you?" continues Le Jour ... "If not, go amongst the people and ask them reasonable questions ... that ... the people and you will see how the green ... of war are ... shared by nearly three millions French-language Canadians, who sense the downfall of France more ... than ever ... be forgot their children ... brothers ... of the past. ... so ... for their ... themselves ... what all the other defenders of our country ... in ... danger, ... in that ... unity which has never ... respected our language and our traditions for the past 150 years and along with whom we hope to develop a free prosperous and happy life."

Strong evidence, surely, that all Canadians are prepared to sink ... our differences and partisan strife. Let this spirit prevail from the Atlantic to the Pacific and Canada will give a good account of herself in this great fight whether the struggle is brought to these shores or whether it is confined to the other side of the ocean.

Not 'n Chamberlain

The church on Saturday, of Neville Chamberlain was a church for the whole British Empire. He invoked his career because of his intense desire for peace and his hatred of war. The German claim that Hitler land wanted war and asked for it is far from the truth. The real truth is that England in mind war through trying to evade it, and Hitler was not wise enough to interpret the English love of war and detested them decadent and flabby. The Germans have never been able to understand the English. Neville Chamberlain worked and prayed for peace. He also was misunderstood and many of his own people felt then his horror of war was going to far and would ultimately end in disaster. After the retreat at Norway, Chamberlain was forced to resign as premier, Mr. Churchill taking his place. His fury will doubtless give Mr. Chamberlain his rightful place, and when full facts are placed before the historians they will no better able to judge the man than his own generation. As a peace time premier he had ability of the highest order, and the pity of it is that war interfered with his career as a peace time leader.

Another great enemy of aggressors passed away at Ronoke on Sunday. He was senator Key Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, at the age of 69. He dubbed Hitler a mercenary and was the leading advocate in the Senate to clap an embargo on shipping war supplies to Japan. He was an opponent of the method and carry system in war supplies. Pittman and British controlled the Atlantic.

BUILDER OF HALIFAX

By H.G.L. Strange, Director "The Crop Thief"

It seems fitting indeed that Great Britain and the Greeks should be standing side by side defending democracy against a common enemy.

Democracy, or those principles of freedom and liberty which insist that the individual citizen is superior to the State, and shall not be merely the pawn of a dictator or of a dictator, was first invented by/in the Greek in the year 500 B.C., and was actually put into practice as a system of Government in Athens—with a deliberative assembly which sat continuously throughout the year to design laws and to govern the country—in 462 B.C.

The system of Democracy was eventually lost by the Greeks, but the English won it back for the common people when King John was obliged to sign the great Magna Carta at Runnymede in 1215.

Today liberty, every man rights and liberties are again in danger, and it seems more than a mere coincidence that the Greeks, who originally discovered democracy and put it practically to work, and the English who restored it to the world, should be fighting side by side to maintain these precious rights of the individual; and fighting moreover on the very same Grecian soil and sea where Democracy was once originally, 2,441 years ago.

MINUTES OF THE STETTLER HEALTH DISTRICT

The fourth meeting of the Board of the Stettler Health District was held in the Court House in Stettler on Oct. 15th. Dr. Dye, deputy minister of health, was present.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted.

Dr. McMillan reported on the purchase of a Projector and a Slit-lamp for Action approved.

The secretary was ordered to write to the Provincial Health Officer regarding cash per capita, same as other units within the area, and why children from a whole would not be entitled to free services. They were pushed to consider schools in the Health Units established in the matter of issuing the Public Health Nursing, and to the next annual meeting.

Dr. McMillan brought up the matter of de-infestation. This was discussed also at some length by Dr. Dye. After some discussion it was decided that a fee of $5.00 be charged for each case requiring other than ordinary attention.

In the matter of salaries the Secretary was asked to get samples from Hargrave-Dyer on Nov. 1st. Miss Inwood, of Calgary, was added to the staff at certain times at $60.00 per month. Miss Campbell was stopped up to twelve years of age. Secretary Lagerquist will do so $125 per day.

The Board at statement was empty at an end.

Dr. McCallum presented his fourth quarterly report, which was adopted as read.

Collecting Scrap Records for Victory

The R. C. A. Victor Co. Ltd., are prepared to purchase old Victor or Bluebird records that may be sent to them. The offer is for November only. Lionel Edwards, Victor dealer, says to do the collecting and mark them "Red Cross Supplies", shipping them to the Alberta Division of the Red Cross and will be given Free Transportation. Records will be shipped by the Alberta Division to National headquarters.

The circular mailing lists appearing in country newspapers are to date line, simply calling it circular No. 62, so we do not know the point to which the records may be shipped, but it is signed by D. H. Tomlinson, commissioner. The circular will be kept on file at the Free Press office for the use of the local branch of the Red Cross should it have any wish to use it. The envelope carries a Calgary R. C. stamp.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"God and Body" is the subject of the Lesson Sermon at all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. One of the Scriptural citations is: "By your words you will be justified, and by your words you will be condemned." (Psalm 69:5) One of the correlative passages from Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures is: "God and Spirit bring one, God and Soul are one and the one never localized in a limited mind or a limited body."

The earthquake in Roumania, on Sunday and Monday, has taken a terrible death toll! Many are buried in collapsed buildings and the number will not be known for days and weeks to-come. The oil fields, for the possessions of which Hitler took over Roumania, are on fire, causing thousands more homeless.

The dance put on the Town Hall Nov. 12th, in Alix, was not well patronized considering the cause for which it was given. It was organized for the purpose of providing comforts for our soldier boys, but the Alix people preferred to patronize a dance in a neighboring village.

The Armistice service in the Legion Hall was a success. Simple but impressive. Never the less we intended had the number been more numerous. The service lasted one interesting and inspiring.

Have One Big Advantage

British People Have Every Day What Is Going On

Malcolm W Bingay, in Detroit Free Press, says

If it is nervous agitant nervous the English have an advantage. Not because they may be any braver than the average German citizen but because they have been through the bapteem of fire. They were bombed in the World War bombed spasmy A whole generation has grown up in Great Britain learning to tell time from the bombardiers' watches and the sound of bursting roofs over our heads.

They take Hitler raw. Almost every home has a speaker of one of those rods in the way of a piece of shell or a hole from an overflying bullet.

On the other hand the German civilians never had to withstand such punishment. Berlin for example, was never touched. Now they are getting it and are beginning to realize what it tastes like.

They take Hitler raw to dictator they have been fed on stories of his magic powers to win every even without fighting them. Victory has been dinned into their ears until the thought of defeat is impossible to endeavor. From the very beginning the British have been told the most dismal facts. Churchill never has offered us anything but toil and sweat, tears and blood.

No matter how tough the going gets they have been prepared for even worse.

The people of Germany have not been so inoculated.

So now when [illegible] Britain at night and hears the Nazi government, in fear of its own medicine there is something like consternation. For as many years as the citizen has been allowed newspapers to tell him what has been going on. They have given him only that which Hitler ordains. Unlike the British citizen, he knows what is happening from 1 o'clock to edition, the victims of totalitarian government are unprepared.

What does this mean, they ask. Most familiar is the one which

And as the propaganda department has to get busy and present an explanation. Every English born civilian, ruling the lives of German women and children. The German people know nothing about the women and children of Great British.

But here is the rub very here:

Ah! Invisible siege! Ghost planes! Devilishly cunning these British! Paint their heels so that we can't see on Cain't shoot what you can't see.

The British high command scoff at this and say that it is the Nazi alibi for poor marksmanship. They deny that they have any such magic as invisible paint. But, then, they would be very foolish to admit it even if they have it.

A true Briton is not afraid of dying. He knows he will have to do it that some day anyway

But he is afraid of living, desperately afraid unless he can live as he pleases. He is no slave of not being allowed to live the kind of a life he desires. He would much rather face death.

That is something the Hitlers of the world will never understand. Regimes prove cruel, but he grudgingly admitted that he did not know about when it was the Briton had, whatever it was, it was an admirable quality.

The Netherlanders

The People Of Holland Object To Being Called "Dutch"

One thing English people are learning from their new allies, is that many Netherlanders object to the term "Dutch" as applied to their nation.

Dutch is too much like "Deutsche," a name which in its original form meant "popular" and could be applied in the Middle Ages to any popular tongue, as opposed to Latin, but which the Germans have appropriated as their own language and to themselves. The Netherlander has no wish to be confused with the Schweiz of Hitler.

Consequently, the word has gradually disappeared from the English vocabulary, at least so far as those districts in which Netherlanders have settled temporarily are concerned. It is hoped that the distinction term will be dropped permanently as a tribute to the brave Netherlands people and the moral they have taken by the side of Britain.—North-erlands Legation in Ottawa.

Quaint Story Of A Colored Porter

Such a couple of generals as age when W C Van Horne was president of the Canadian Pacific Railroad and Queen Victoria was on Britain's throne a number of distinguished visitors came to take a ride on the C.P.R. Among others was the Princess Louise, daughter of the Queen

On the train which took them across Canada were President Van Horne himself and his personal porter, a colored man with an outstanding personality who answered to the name of Sandy.

Sandy's duties as he ministered to the needs of the distinguished party included the making up of beds. Other and more strenuous tasks are almost more to Sandy Germany's air force, being considerably, have materially reduced the strength of her aviation. She still has vast reserves, and, when an opportune moment arrives, can be expected to throw them into the balance with utter disregard for planes and men as she has done in Poland and Norway.

But, at the same time, there can be no doubt as to the importance of the R.A.F.'s contribution to the war at Dunkirk, British planes and British pilots showed a superiority over their superiority—a superiority which should become more and more marked as the war progresses.

Not only have they rendered invaluable service in restoring British prestige in the eyes of the world, they have also dealt another blow to German morale. The German people, nearly all the 1917 level, is likely to be one of the deciding factors in the present war.

Another sentiment of war is not a pleasing prospect to the German people. Memories of the last winter are still too fresh. Germany is now entering upon the second winter of war, and, having to contend with a continuous blockade, the German people are faced with the prospect of even greater hardships than they endured in the last war.

Here, as regards the future the odds are all in Britain's favour. Britain's normal production is rising steadily and [illegible] the production of the United States which is now making aggressive strides to help Britain. Hence the question is [illegible] a question of time. Britain's production is rising, Germany's is falling. Britain's is growing stronger, Germany's weaker. Britain is in the war for good, Germany is not. Britain is supported by a powerful Empire, Germany is supported by a few satellites.

Not these are matters that cannot be altered. Britain is suffering in the present. I have already said that I regard the most important result of the recent raids as the effect upon German plans and have pointed out that it is hardly to influence the German morale.

The object of the [illegible] is to [illegible] the British defences; to find, if possible, a weak spot, which could be made the basis of attack. If such a spot has been detected, mass assault, with thousands of bombers dropping by Clifford Taylor at Christie Street hospital. No vote, will expand into an [illegible] of the war. But the battle is on one or two assistants who will [illegible] of the R.A.F.

The Murder-Dipper family at Leeches, Thuringia, Germany, made the eyes from which they are kept, of which was known only in Germany. It is a remarkable superior to all other glass for the purpose.

When the present war started the supply of parts manufactured glass-eyes was cut off and, while Mr. Tigwhich was able to supply them from stock, he had no way of getting soda glass.

Major C. A. Bell, B.C., director of the ethnopedic and surgical appliances branch, Ottawa, has undertaken to relieve the aid of Prof Robert Montgomery, head of the ceramics division of the University of Toronto, and a program of research was started.

For a time it was thought the German glass contained tin but it was found it contained cryolite, a mineral found in quantity in Greenland and used extensively in the manufacture of aluminum.

Eventually Prof. Montgomery found a soda glass which met Tigwhich was approached but time was the war, are somewhere in the neighborhood of Toronto.

While waiting for the nurse, Tingling heard his wife cut a long list of names. "Are these the friends you want notified in case things don't go right?" inquired the doctor.

Raids On Britain Have Revealed Some Unexpected Problems Facing Germany

—By Warren Irwin

Mr Irvin, noted American writer and broadcaster and for 13 years a staff correspondent on the New York Times, spent the first eight months of the war in Berlin as an observer.

The amazing success of the Royal Air Force in smashing the route on Britain should not be permitted to engender over-confidence. The war is in the air now and, as Winston Churchill warns us, extraordinary efforts will be made by Germany to achieve victory in the air before the end of the year. Hitler must overcome Britain's air defences or he will be forced to withdraw his armies from Europe to defend the Reich itself.

Hence as regards the future the odds are all in Britain's favour. Britain's normal production is rising steadily and [illegible] the production of the United States which is now making aggressive strides to help Britain. Hence the question is [illegible] a question of time. Britain's production is rising, Germany's falling. Britain is growing stronger, Germany weaker. Britain is in the war for good, Germany is not. A NEW RACKET

Hanging pressure to lower the Dominion's standard, the big packers have succeeded in their efforts to have hogs graded without how they want beef graded.

Packers and butchers are protesting against the grading of beef. They claim it is just another racket on the part of the big packing plants and they are opposing it.

A meeting of producers was held in Edmonton recently and strongly worded protest was sent to the Dominion livestock branch. Producers want a return to optional grading of hogs.

The Market Examiner of Calgary, is leader of the fight against the grading of Beef. It published an opinion from a Vancouver butcher, discussing the possibility of beef grading in Alberta:

"Grading in B.C. has become the laughing stock of the whole coast industry. The point I am to make is this: Has beef grading in fact decreased the consumption of beef, confused the buying public and hurt the cattle producer, and will like wise injure and handicap the prairie grower if they allow any such legislation to become law."

WORLD OF WHEAT

By HGL. Strange, Director "The Crop Young Plan

Many farmers have noticed a black spot or smudge on their wheat kernels and they are wondering whether it is safe to use such grain for seed.

This problem has been worrying the Canadian Seed Growers' Association and Plant Pathologists ever since 1923, when grain was badly affected with the same trouble. The black spot is caused by one of several fungous diseases, most probably by the one which rejoices in the name of Helminthosporium sativum.

Plant Pathologists tell us that this disease may or may not carry over from the affected seed into the next crop, but that if it does carry over, then the next crop may be severely damaged. It is found, however, that mercurial dusts sometimes partially or completely control the disease.

It is recommended, therefore, that farmers should treat a good sample of the grain they expect to use for seed with either Leytosan or Ceresan, and then should send about six ounces of this treated grain to the Dominion Seed Laboratory either at Winnipeg, Saskatoon or Calgary, for a germination test. If the germination is found to be less than 75 per cent, my own advice would be that the grain should not be used to sow a crop, but that disease-free seed should be procured.

Spain is not so anxious to help either Italy or Germany. She has two main objectives. The first is to regain the possession of Gibraltor, and the second to push the United States out of Latin America. Spain is too weak to gain either point. It is, at present, just a pipe dream.

THIS MAN USED HIS HEAD

When the steel pen super-seded the quill pen a French manufacturer stood to lose everything he had on earth. He started to make quill tooth picks and made fortunes instead Until quite recently his factory turned out upwards of $2,000,000 of those toothpicks per year. C.N.R. hotels still supply them.

CHARACTER SCIENCE

"Mortals and Immortals" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. One of the Scriptural citations is "I, therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation where-with ye are called" (Eph. 4:1). One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, is "Being is holiness, harmony, immortality. It is already proved that knowledge of this, even in small degree, will uplift the physical and moral standard of mortals, will increase longevity, will purify and elevate character. These progressive will finally destroy all error and bring immortality to light."

WEDDING
Ogilvie-Sim

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in the United Church at Tees on Monday, Nov. 16th, when Marion Ruth, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Ogilvie, became the bride of Alexander Campbell, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexan Sim, Forestburg district.

The bride looked in a floor length dress of white satin and net with sheer to match and carrying a bouquet of sweet heart roses, entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Mrs. G. Stacey, bridal.

During the signing of the register Mrs. Forster sang "I Love You Truly."

The bridesmaid, Miss Eunice Ogilvie was attired in a floor length dress of net over yellow taffeta with shoes to match, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations, while the groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Don Sim. The ushers were Messrs. Keith Sim and Darfield Ogilvie.

The church was artistically decorated for the occasion, with white and yellow streamers and flowers of various kinds.

After the ceremony the bridal party left by motor for Lacombe, where a reception was held and a sumptuous wedding supper was served in the Empress Hotel for relatives and friends of the bridal couple.

Following the reception the happy couple left by motor for Edmonton, amid confetti and best wishes, where they expect to reside.

Out of town guests were Mr. Wm. Ogilvie, Hardisty, Alta., and Mrs. J. W. Street, of Wainwright, and Mr. and Mrs. E. Pitsenbarger, of Hanna.

Trickery, Treachery, Terrorism

By the time the causes of the war in which we are presently engaged and the issues involved should be reasonably well understood, sufficiently to enable us to determine why we are fighting, what the objective is and the degree of intensity necessary to ensure ultimate victory.

Not much time nor space need be devoted to the causes of the greatest war known to history, destructive conflict that the world has ever known. A handful has run amok in Europe and after enslaving helpless people with ruthless promises that they are to become the dominant entity in a new world order has set out to conquer the world. It was a well determined program. By tricks, treachery and terrorism he has enslaved his own people who at first willingly surrendered their liberties on the false promise that by so doing they should bend others to their bidding. This accomplished the German people at Hitler's behest, by treachery, terror and terrorism unleashed by the meekness gun and the bomb, have succeeded in over running the greater part of continental Europe and have enslaved millions of liberty loving people.

The tide was running strongly in Hitler's favor and it appeared as if his ultimate objective world domination might be within his grasp. Then he made his abortive attempt to enslave the British people by the direct route of invasion. The British and Empire people refused to be enslaved and even of partial world domination is now impossible until Britain has been vanquished. He has turned aside for the time being and is attempting to achieve this objective in other directions and indirectly again by the employment of those weapons of which he has proved himself a past master trickery, treachery and terrorism.

A Simple Issue

As for the issues in this gigantic conflict, they can be reduced to a single simple statement. It is this. Is the world to be allowed to revert to the enslaving and barbarism of the dark ages or, are the peoples of the world to be allowed to continue to emerge into the broad light of the present day. Is the world to be subjected to all the brutalities and tyrannies that held sway throughout the dark ages or shall we have been struggling upward and onward for a thousand years?

If the doctrine of Nazidom is to be allowed universal sway, it simply means that there is to be enquiries in all the brutalities and tyrannies that held sway throughout the dark ages of history. It means the loss of all purse-mal liberties for the rank and file of humanity. It will be left, to arrogant dictators in any what shall be worshipped how and when, what views may be expressed on all or any subjects and by whom and when, what shall be listened to and what shall not be heard. Farmers will be told what to produce and how much of it. Business men will be told what they may sell and people what they may buy. Women will be told when they may marry and how many children they shall bear. People will even be told what they may eat and what they may not eat. Education will be restricted, twisted and perverted for the individual abrogated.

And who betide the individual who offends the slavish code in which he will become enmeshed. A mercenary against his hard bet will spell torture and imprisonment. Death will lurk around the corner for him who dares to breathe a word against his despotic masters. It will be too late to fight against the pitfalls. All human desires for betterment, for enlightenment, for spiritual nourishment will be sternly suppressed and ground by dust beneath the iron heel of Nazidom.

* * * *

To The Finish

These are the facts which have to be faced. They must be recognized as irrefutable and must be met squarely, if civilization is not to be overwhelmed and the world plunged into a black night which might last a thousand years. Great Britain has recognized the issue fully and is now waging a global fight against these forces of darkness. Fortunately Churchill is now awakening to a realization of the seriousness of the struggle and the last to realize she as being subjected. There are growing signs that the United States is becoming more and more keenly aware of the peril which is threatening from all sides.

The day of wishful thinking is long past. Hitler is supplementing his promise to wage an "all out" war. The end justifies the means" in his doctrine. As Adam W. Dafoe in an admirable contribution to the radio series "Let's Face the Facts" said: "Hitler and Mussolini, in their own personal human nature at its most ingrown level. They content nothing to barre the light of human freedom shining anywhere in the world. For them at least the world cannot continue half free and half slave. Therefore they wage war, world war in its purpose, and by a law of true necessity this war must go on until it destroys every vestige of freedom in the world, or life determines are themselves consumed in the fires which they have ignited."

With such a desperate issue facing them, there is only one thing facing the yet unconquered democracies, and that is to put everything they possess into the fight and to wage it to a finish.

Women Legal Right

Now On Legal Staff Of The Department Of Finance

Henriette Bourque who says she really studied law as training for the mind and its natural value in then choosing the department of justice now said that a woman can be a good lawyer.

Already, Miss Bourque has given a great deal of valuable advice to the film but she wanted to get her an actual start in the department. She was the only woman among 18 or 20 applicants for the position and the last out on the note ground that her qualifications were the best.

It was decided not to go for a wife whether Miss Bourque would be a success as a constant puzzle. She was but the second woman after graduation from the University of Ottawa Faculty, to establish in the law school of the University of Montreal. Previously in the class, both she and the second woman graduate, after the girl came it they became more uncomfortable that ever when she outstripped them at times and so topped the examination list and her male opponents had to shout it's all right don't-good girl had a pleasing personality as well.

Finally Miss Bourque graduated with the highest honors and prizes but Bachelor law still and several other varieties she entered the firm of Monsieur Bourque, well known Montreal lawyer, under Quebec laws she couldn't call herself a lawyer in that province but could call herself a barrister and solicitor which were when she attempted them at times can be topped the examination list and her male opponents had to shout it's all right don't-good girl had a pleasing personality as well.

Despite this hospitality informed motives and 19 others and the names have emerged from information in Argentine quarters, Consul Gen. Enrique Corominas.

Although and no public enquiries running necessarily for more guards and security duties have added to the Vichyite Argentine under the rules of international law a neutral must not be war.

The Nazi seizure continued huge stocks of Argentine beefs alleged, owned, ostensibly supposed to Nazi and officials there. Argentine has protested in arguments with her and the most recent with Argentine liberals. She still plays the game and is a keen neutralist as well usually her people are with a sufficient number of nature being friendly hiking through Hitler's world.

Of her work at Ottawa, Miss Bourque says little, but she seems to like it. In the legal element if a her opinions that counts, but her non-legal duties are more than small. Since 20 years ago against a woman lawyer has disappeared she says

The Spirit In Britain

Commons Brydbuilder Heeft In Suffering The Worst

Perhaps the following may serve to illustrate the spirit in which those who have so terribly suffered in recent air raids take their sufferings. I was visiting a large hospital in which many air raid casualties from Southeast London have been received. I was with a father, a man about 40 whose child had just died. Another seriously injured, was also in the hospital. While I was with him he received the news that his wife and remaining three children were also dead. When, a little later, before I left him, I asked what he was going to do, this was his reply—

Do? Why, join up to-morrow—to mount it. I do not think, Sir, that this is an isolated case, but is rather typical of the spirit which the German brutalities are arousing, increasingly, in all classes of the community. Sidney Gosling-Bird in the London Times.

By Hugh Stewart, Director "The Crop Turning Plan"

The Dominion Government has decided to consider implementing the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Dominion Provincial Relations.

There was one recommendation made, however, which even the Commission itself did not appear to be quite satisfied with. The recommendation was that the Dominion Experimental Farms should either be done away with, or turned over to the Provincial Government.

During the past twenty years I have tried to make myself familiar with the Dominion Provincial Farms, and I have come to hold in high esteem the work those farms have done in the past, are still doing, and can do in the future for our farmers.

The work of the Dominion Experimental Farms has great value, and certainly is more efficient, because it is all co-ordinated and directed by one head.

Good as is the work done by Provincial organizations, I for one feel we could not possibly give the same service to farmers as is being rendered by the Dominion Experimental Farms under one Dominion Head. I for one, therefore, trust that our Farms will remain just as they are at present, under the immediate control and direction of the Dominion Government. I would, however, like to see their appropriations increased, for then I know they can render a much better service to our farmers.

SEEDTIME AND HARVEST

By H. V. Hesketh
Agricultural Supervisor
Canadian Pacific Railway

Farmers often have occasion to call at the railway station to see the agent in a granary or bin. It is also the duty of the agent to call on farmers in the district. The purpose of this monthly information is to help the agent in his relations with the farmers in this part of the paper and keep it.

The first step is to find the correct estimate of the bin. For square or rectangular bins, the number of cubic feet can be found by multiplying the length by the width by the depth. For example, if the bin is 8 feet long, 6 feet wide and 4 feet deep, the number of cubic feet in the bin is 8 x 6 x 4 = 192 cubic feet.

To find the number of bushels in the bin, divide the number of cubic feet by 1.25. For example, 192 cubic feet divided by 1.25 = 153.6 bushels.

If the bin is round, the number of cubic feet can be found by multiplying the square of the diameter by .7854 and then by the depth. For example, if the bin is 10 feet in diameter and 6 feet deep, the number of cubic feet in the bin is 10 x 10 x .7854 x 6 = 471.24 cubic feet. To find the number of bushels in the bin, divide the number of cubic feet by 1.25. For example, 471.24 cubic feet divided by 1.25 = 376.992 bushels.

If it is desired to determine the number of bushels in a bin without measuring the bin, it can be done by weighing the grain in the bin. For example, if the bin is 8 feet long, 6 feet wide and 4 feet deep, the number of cubic feet in the bin is 8 x 6 x 4 = 192 cubic feet. To find the number of bushels in the bin, divide the number of cubic feet by 1.25. For example, 192 cubic feet divided by 1.25 = 153.6 bushels.

"I wonder if you know why I sent for you?"

The question took her shock for the moment.

"Don't say to write a letter," he said. "I really wanted no letter written. It was an excuse to get you here alone for a little talk. And the fact that you have not gone quite a mile from your lodging on visible errand of negotiation, is very pleasing to me. If you had, I should have expected that you and he you are a very good sight."

"I—wished for her to crush.

"I don't quite understand what you mean, Mr. Harlow."

"It—why? I was afraid that you were—" and undervalued strength."

He strode up and down the library. His hands under his coat-tails, his head bent. He seemed to be unconsciously interested in the curious

"I want a view—an angle I can't get that from any correspondence you see. You are not commonplace. You are not brilliant, either forgive my frankness. You are a woman, perhaps in love, perhaps not. I don't know had a chance to find out. You have no interest to serve."

He stopped abruptly looked at her, getting up to the point.

"That door is locked, he said. "There is nobody in the house but myself and my housekeeper. The burglaries—are your right hand in the circumstance. I only want find out you."

He paused and then resumed apologetically

"A little rebuke that is anonymous like trembling that may come later. Will you be so good as to press the bell you will find it ? " you, that he is."

Mechanically she had obeyed, and almost immediately the door opened and a tall mannerless came in.

"I want you to wait in the servants' hall until this young lady has gone, Thomas—I have a letter I wish to post."

The man bowed and went out. Mr Harlow smiled.

"That deprives you statements I made to you. Now the door is locked and that we were alone in the house. Now I think I know you! I mean I certainly do. And, of course, I'm not fond of you like you though I'm not going to call up Assistant Carlton, the telephone is through to the exchange."

"You are a mean tall me," she said quietly "what all this means?"

He raised his chin now, his white fingered beating a notebook into one—

"I know you, that is the point," he said. "I can now speak to you very plainly. You are a very ingenious consideration, marry a man in whom I am greatly interested?"

She shook her head and in the proved even of the refusal.

"That is foolish! You did not say I was insulting you, or that you could not marry a man for money—none of the children of his or the novelists' You would have disappointed me if you had."

Alison made a discovery that half her clothing her own vanity. She liked this man. She believed in his sincerity. A crooked dealer he might be, but upon a phase which was beyond her comprehension. In the best baby regress in the levels of human intercourse he was beyond enough. She felt currently safe with him he was reserved, as one who was in the process of changing a settled opinion in the face of a prejudiced habit: a thought.

He had the face of a materialist, the blue of her jaw and chin. Then he said her, common to great generals and great murderers. The thick lip and fleshy nose were repellent to her that was spiritual in her. Yet she lived emotionally in a world of men and women—she did not look for god or hate to any man. Some was not enough in the most artificial of dramas.

I wonder if I know what you are thinking about?"

She moved and saw now, having a sense of his uncanny power of mind-reading.

You are saying I wonder if he is as great a scoundrel as people like Carlton say? How shall you name are me? It is very difficult not be cause I represent myself, but because the course on which I work is immense Miss Rivers, I hoped that you were not afraid."

I think I am," she said

He leaned forward over the desk and his voice sank.

"Shall I tell you something?"

And though she made no sign, he read her answer.

If you had said 'yes,' my dear would have been the most astonished followed that you declined. But if it had been 'yes,' all the world have crumpled about me. I should have done of the splendid Morton! Dust and immaterial ashes!"

For a moment she thought he had been drinking and that she had not noticed it. Then realised he seemed the absolutely interested in the curious

On How To Keep Love — Suit Looking Clean And Fresh

Nothing is so attractive on a man in summer as a nice, clean, fresh suit. Here are a few suggestions as how to keep the suit in that condition.

"Do not recline in a comfortable chair. For if you do, the suit will soon get wrinkles if you do not put it on the edge of an upright chair."

If a grasshopper or other insect chances up your way do not squash it, as this will leave a stain. Let it climb.

Do not smoke a pipe, for the ashes will fall on the front of the suit and when you try to brush them off, they will make smudges.

Do not permit yourself to become overheated or your linen suit will be a rag. Stay in the shade and fanning yourself if from 72b to 75o is about the

Avoid energetic exercises such as stooping down to pick things up or walking quickly when a bus line for catching.

On no account attempt to take a flying leap over the top of a fence when a bull is after you.

By all means keep out of gardens, otherwise the bull may get after you.

Keep away from all persons who might run at cripples and cut or thrust at you.

Do not loiter at the first evidence of rain.

If you must use an automobile in dangerous city, do not attempt to cross the street in front of it. Wait for a wide pedestrian to open it once and I manifest your appreciation of the act.

In reading a newspaper, hold it at arms' length.

Do not go before these instructions carefully. It is not possible that you will get a wrinkle in your suit, even a speck, unless it will be your own fault.

Just a breezy thought: "Ah" says Mrs. Flimp when the hostess offers a tempting dish.

Poor Mrs Flimp thinks that by using the interjection of endearment in her she will get some. But that is not the way it works. Its value is not cut down on endearer, not purloined by endearment. It is entirely endured.

The Vimy Memorial in France has not suffered any damage since it can be seen from the air, Prime Minister King announced in the House of Commons.

He read a brief cable from the Prime Minister conveying the aerial photograph of the monument recently taken "does not show any damage."

British Tommies returning to England in a plane from France with the Canadian Press war correspondent: in the English Channel, Sidney Smith in Johnson, that the Vimy Ridge Memorial had been shattered by German bombers.

They said they saw the wreckage of the monument on its twin shafts that towered 140 feet over the plain of Douai. They said also the bombers dropped their explosives when British and French countries near-by.

The Germans subsequently denied the stories and said the memorial was undamaged.

DEMOCRACY

"The possession which you have inherited from your ancestors earn them in order truly to own them. Goethe.

Democracy means to me to day much more than a desirable set of principles. In mercy in this country is in peace, not only because of external danger but because of internal failure. We cannot inherit democracy and leave the matter there. It depends on spiritual qualities of life and character that must be reborn in each new generation in the hearts of its citizens. —Harry Emerson Fosdick.

Trends In Tourist Traffic

Official figures are now being published making it possible to get some approximate idea of trends of tourist traffic from the United States into Canada and to place some idea of the influence exerted by the war on this important industry.

Despite the assault of regulations promulgated by the Dominion government the last month's flow of Canadian pleasure seekers into the United States during the months of the past three or four years was out in a more leisurely manner during the summer just past. Then, a matter of gasoline rations, the marked reduction in the southward movement of automobiles had been anticipated and retaining in this country large sums of money, which are required for the prosecution of Canada's war effort, is some from, somewhat.

Unfortunately on the other hand, the inward flow of American tourist traffic over the Dominion as a whole is not as great as might have been expected under existing conditions. During the past few years American tourist traffic into this country has been on refining footing, and it is not likely that until it has assumed the rank of one of the foremost industries of Canada.

There were a number of reasons why the annual movement of this traffic should not only have been maintained but should have shown a substantial increase during the year of the war. In the first place holiday seekers in the United States were practically confined to this continent for their pleasure trips this summer on account of the war and in the second place their dollar being worth $1.10 in this country would have given them a cheaper holiday than they could enjoy by remaining in their own country. These two factors alone should have resulted in a record north bound traffic across the international boundary during the summer just past.

A Serious Slump

Instead of this anticipated increase materializing however the reverse was the case and a very pronounced slump in the movement resulted. The further issue of the National Revenue Review issued by the Minister of National Revenue reveals that as July the latest month for which figures for the entire country are reported at that time, only 1,000,000 persons motorists entered Canada under short or long term permits as compared with 1,764,000 in the corresponding month of last year a decline of nearly 41 per cent.

Unfortunately figures for August for the entire Dominion were not apparently compiled at that time but in the same issue of the National Revenue Review it is reported that in August 1940 94,536 cars originating in the U.S. passed through the Port of Niagara Falls compared with 109,470 in August 1939 a decrease of 14,583 cars or over 13 per cent Since this is one of the heaviest ports of entry in the Dominion, it can be assumed that for the entire country some improvement was registered in August as compared with the previous month, but still a substantial loss.

In another article in the same issue of the National Revenue Review figures are given showing a substantial increase in the number of visitors to Canada's national parks in the Rockies and prairie provinces during the five months of this year ending Aug 31. In most cases the figures for these Canadian and foreign visitors but the mountain parks of Banff Jasper Waterton Lakes Kootenay and Yoho were under the figures for 1939 by 11,047a foreign visitors compared with 20,263 last year a gain of more than 22 per cent. This increased movement of visitors from other countries to the parks is attributed in part by the Review to the "the opening to traffic this year of the Big Bend and Banff-Jasper Highways and to the fact that many Americans who have been accustomed to holidaying in Europe spent their vacations in the Canadian Rockies."

Good Result Important

The importance of good roads in fostering the tourist stream into Canada is further emphasized in the statement appearing in the Canadian National Revenue Review's announcement that An all time record was created at Jasper National Park when the attendance for the five month period ending Sept 30 for an increase of 40 000 over the previous year. This astonishing increase is more the publication, was largely due to the opening of the new Banff-Jasper Highway, which shortens the distance between the resorts of Banff and Jasper to 186 miles from the 313-mile route required by previous motor routes.

The foregoing facts and figures, taken in combination, reveal two or three important things which might profitably be noted for future guidance Ons of these is evidence that publicity undertaken by the British government in the United States this summer to counteract adverse propaganda circulated in the late was too late to remove Americans that they could safely visit this country while at war without being penalized on account of several stoppa. This propaganda on the other side of the international boundary have inserted fruit during July, one of the best of the holiday months and was not been fully exposed by the end of August, by which time the season was near its close

Another is the importance of the construction and maintenance of good roads if Canada is not only not to lose this vital and important industry, but is to reap increasing annual benefits from it.

People Of Old London

Addicted to Daily Stroll Pays Tribute To Their Portfolio

The London Daily Mail in a recent editorial voices homage to the mind of the rest of the Empire t. the people of London. It says. Touchy on quietness and humility in the face of thankful praise to the people of London For they are enduring the fire and the torture for us. Upon their resolute and business like acts bearing such honorific as our citizens to them bring. Words have better before

Thus they are saying their faith full with sublime fatalism that we must win our war of life that the dignity of man's freedom and law of tolerance and good, sweet, simple things shall not perish from the earth

In one sense, statesmen further than back years young old they are facing the modern issue from the dawn of history. Their problem is the same as that of the Athenian mother

Their commandable wailings suffer even more death but we sorry to say before or tyranny, social shock

They will not falter

There is no danger of the best of London's failing. There are many who people have not been prepared but as long as walks of danger alone There is the will the pulse of its strong to sport and the brave to attend.

Where Traitors Triumph

Belgian Workers Have Heard Their Leader Speak

Belgian workers have now to endure the usual additional unemployment and working for the Nazis against their own country. It does almost seem as though the Belgian people have been prepared by their leaders for the role they are now playing. Long before the war Belgium was the home of the secret society Ons Moet Niet Leet Lijden (We must not suffer).

Not What He Expected

H.A.R. Mallet, British Minister to Rumania, is enjoying even a cool reception from the Iron Guard. He is on leave and bought a motor-car He arranged for it to be carried on the train but when he got to the station he found that the car had been left behind. He was told that it would be sent on by the next train. He asked when that would be and was told that there was no next train. The way was always clear before.

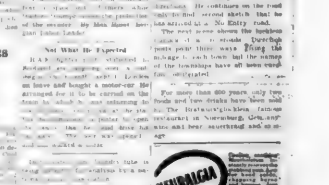
A drawing shows a cartoon showing a nobleman in the act of presenting a medal for bravery to a humble soldier. Another rough sketch that he has entitled is "An Entry road. The artist's name shows the Bombardier Vancouver, R.A. and his address is given as "Somewhere in England."

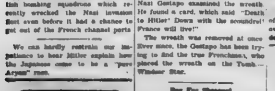


Great Help To Britain

British Fleet Now Valuable Investment than Almost Ever Known

Of great assistance to the British belligerent service in learning the facts about the German invasion fleet are the Dutch Navy At the close of night they fly to their own country, land at a secret airdrome, then greet around the coast for submarine ion about enemy activities. Their knowledge of the German language has made it fairly easy for them to supply invaluable facts to the British bombing squadrons which recently wrecked the Nazi invasion fleet even before it had a chance to get out of the French channel ports

We can hardly restrain our impatience to hear Hitler explain how the Japanese came to be a "pure Aryan" race.



Hard To Find

Nazi Generals Are Constantly Being Sent Guards

While a Nazi guard stood by, a group of French officers placed a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at the Arch of Triumph in Paris For the next three days thousands of French people visited the Tomb The Nazis took no chance that so many should come so suddenly, but changed the observance as a coincidence

On the third day a member of the Nazi Gestapo examined the wreath He found a card, which said "Death to Hitler" Down with the scoundrel! France will live!"

The wreath was removed at once Five days later, the Gestapo came to find the two Frenchmen, who placed the wreath on the Tomb.—Windsor Star.

A girl stood on the threshold She wore a long blue coat; there were beads of rain on the shoulders and on the little fur hat that she had worn a strikingly umbrella Mr Bleibtrugs had noticed it was missing.

She was staring at the open suitcase, all the bundles of money, the lumped envelopes. Aileen Rivers had never seen so much money.

What Ellenbury was there was a harsh squeak.

"I tried to find your clerk," she said. "The door was open—"

Open? In his haste to continue his search Bleibtrugs had left closed the outer door—had not even shut the door behind the hairs.

"I tried to find—"

"Yes, Bleibtrugs girl," he said breathlessly. "I'm glad you came. You took from her bag a folded envelope. Single pieces of the bills were in that envelope. Mr Ellenbury, I'm sure, will be glad to be told by some oversight, as Mr Stebbings found, they are still been included in the legacy He tried to read the letter; tried hard to put out of his mind the old merchant, the while he passing " " two green eyes quickly through a green eye " " quickly. Aileen Rivers, a money in notes, in envelopes. " "

"Oh," he said, blankly. "I see " " something about leases. I'll attend to that tomorrow."

"Mr Harlow Preston," she said, "We telephoned to him early this afternoon, and he agree us to notify you and bring the particulars to his house to-night."

At this he forked up his head.

"You're going to Harlow—now?" he stammered.

It was rather remarkable that she had been looking forward to the all afternoon. A remarkable The desire might seem incredible (and was to Mr Bleibtrugs) but it was when Sir Stebbings had said in his " computer way I wonder if you would kind " " promptly. No, too promptly she thought.

Reduced to its simple elements, the lure of Stratford Harlow was a conversation that could never be satisfied, the lure that brought timid people to the edge of a volcano to shudder and wonder at the molten pool that hissed and bubbled below And something more than that, for he was less terrible than terribly interesting.

"Yes, I am going to Park Lane now," she said.

The maid of Mr Ellenbury was numb; he could not direct the working, it was without mennonsense.

"You are going to him now."

Harlow had been one of his way to meet this girl at Pritwetown; had made inquiries about her where she was born, where she lived. He gave, as an excuse, his interest in her father, Ellenbury's friend, his common experience, And another. Those kinds of friendship develop very quickly. Stratford Harlow's interests on the Monday may be pleasing Pritwetown by the Saturday. A very pretty girl " " the wheels of Mr Ellenbury's mind began to revolve, and he was interested in this girl.

"The first thing she would tell Harlow.

"Did you see Mr Ellenbury?"

"Yes, he had an enormous safe-deposit in two suitcases on his desk. " "

He could imagine the swift conversation. The taxi, the journey.

"My wife is very ill—the wheels started a little—very ill. She hasn't been out of the house for months. His weak mouth dropped pathetically Yet is strange " " your coming like this. She asked about you this morning.

"About me?" Aileen could hardly believe her ears. "But I don't know her!"

She knows you—knew you when you were a child—knew your mother in your father. I've met, sure which. He was on safe ground here, though he was not sure of this. "Curious " " " I pleaded calling at Bleibtrugs to ask you " " " the car would bring you back."

"To see Mrs. Ellenbury—tonight!" She was incredulous. Mr. Bleibtrugs had not heard.

"And—I've promised to go to Mr. Harlow's lunch."

There was no time it is an old much request unreasonable — I request that

He looked very old and meek and unhappy.

"I—I—for the way I position of a client—I never heard the name Mrs. What would happen after he had been known Thats would be time to consider that. Something dreadful for very few years from Harlow's point of view perhaps That was the first consideration. His souls were tensed, the vision reserved, his left in the morning by the early train. Why had he listened? There was no telephone in Mr Bleibtrugs' office.

"I—I—I telephone to Mr Bleibtrugs—"

He was almost panting. "I—I—I'm very sorry, but I help me pay's there two cents A lot of money ah" Ah Harlow Mr Harlow? A clever man." She—he—it has she gathered up the bundles. "

A great " "

He was sure of that he of Harlow's standing a new addition. Obviously she was fond of Harlow. Since she was not invited to a large friend of Jim Chilton she was a Bleibtrugs. He a very good friend, he's expert a very real danger

She had forgotten that he had been in the room until the taxi was wending all this time in the making Harlow was a man of the world. He would have a phone at my house " he said.

It is clear that he had a telephone a private wife like Mr Harlow's house. He he was hardly likely to use it.

Crouched up in a corner of the taxi she pondered on the strangeness of his knees as the machine swung round a corner. Mr Bleibtrugs' sister had a wife that thought of the girl by her side. And he reached " " " " " she was the one person in the world who could betray Harlow. The one person in the world who knew that he had two large banknotes fixed with rubber It

This Letter is Worth Reading

Dear Mr Editor:—

At the monthly meeting of the Alix Red Cross Society, last Monday Nov 18th some of the ladies were very discouraged at the refusal of a certain people to contribute towards the Red Cross National Appeal Fund, to carry on the great humanitarian work and helping to relieve some of the misery, and unnecessary suffering caused by this worst of all wars that the people of the world have had to face.

Why have these people refused to make what small sacrifice for humanity's sake? Various reasons have been given for the refusals the most common one seems to be that they have heard from a source that the Red Cross is just run by a bunch of cranks who get the women to knit socks for the soldiers and then sell them to the soldiers instead of giving them. Personally I have heard one man say that he saw a Red Cross article charged up to a soldier on his pay sheet. I did not call the man a DAMNED LIAR, although at the time I felt like doing so, for in fact that very thing could easily have happened in this manner. The soldiers may have received Red Cross sweaters, socks, etc. gratis, but the added comfort during the winter, owing to the many conveniences available being for behind what was necessary for the number of soldiers in training at that time.

Those soldier men in Iceland with clothing or equipment is responsible for the proper care of same, and through carelessness in others can be in short any time. Kit inspection by is charged on his pay sheet with such loss, and he is sued and mulcted for the Quartermaster to replace it.

Those soldier men whose pay sheet a Red Cross counter was charged more than likely lost his overcoat at the last kit inspection, thus was charged with same, and rightly so, surely no one thinks he should be issued with another free overcoat to lose again? Why blame the Red Cross?

Another very prevalent lie being circulated is that certain Vets from the last war maintain that they got snaked out badly in the Red Cross Canteens that they will not give the Red Cross a nickle. This excuse is absurd, because the Red Cross never has entered the Canteen business. Any Vet. that can state that he was inside a Canteen in Canada, England or France during the last war that was run by the Red Cross has something wrong with his head. Canteen work was carried on by the Y.M.C.A., Salvation Army, Queen's Army, and many local voluntary canteen organizations. Canteen work is out of the sphere of Red Cross altogether. The Red Cross is a voluntary organization whose aim is to help relieve misery and suffering caused through war or any major disaster. Please remember that every man and woman in the Red Cross Society from top to bottom give their time freely for this work, with the exception of the Medical and Nursing staffs, and a certain number of paid office workers. Also remember the Red Cross is bringing help and relief to the men, women and children who daily and nightly are not only facing death, but are being bombed out of their homes and losing all their worldly possessions so that you and I can carry on our daily tasks in peace and security.

To you who say I will not support the Red Cross, a day may come "we pray God it won't," when with this war spreading all over the world you may find yourself without a home and fleeing for your lives before the barbarians, then it would be too late to help Canada's war effort and the Red Cross. Do you want our soldiers, sailors and airmen to come home and become as of falling down on the job of helping them win through to victory. Give till it not only hurts but till it becomes really painful for that is the only way we can show our appreciation to those who are fighting our battles.

To the wives, mothers, fathers sisters, brothers who have been in the active service forces, I say help the Red Cross in every possible way you can because next to day your sons may be losing the Red Cross and its workers, who in they come into real contact with the hell of war and get a knock out. It is then the hand of the Red Cross reaches out in human understanding and sympathy.

The only time the Army Navy and Air Force come into direct contact with the Red Cross is when seriously ill or wounded, and believe me then at the time you bless the men and women who give their time and energies to this work.

Before summons an reads on London began the Canadian Red Cross sent us with in two hours 3,000 more blankets, several tons of soups, tomatoes, biscuits and milk and more than 80,000 new garments. GERMINATION TESTS

Farmers in the prairie provinces will be interested to learn that this Department has decided to offer germination tests of field crop seeds as a free service. In order that the tests may be thoroughly reliable modern thermostatically controlled germinators are being installed. The equipment has been designed in consultation with officials of the Production Service Plant Products Division, of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Reports on samples submitted for testing will include remarks on the presence of weed seeds and general "soundness."

Samples of seed should be taken to the nearest country elevator belonging to any of the line elevator companies associated with the work of this Department. These companies are listed on most of the publications issued from this office.

Sufficient material will be provided by 2-ounce samples, but these must be delivered at the earliest possible date. It is necessary that our laboratory be in full operation by January 1st in order to avoid congestion in March.

In addition to the germination tests, we shall be glad to make growing tests and to report on the purity and suitability of the variety for the district concerned. If the growing test is desired in addition to germination, it is only necessary to inform the local grain buyer.

Looking At The Future

The recent announcement that the development of navigation, as well as that of power in connection with the agreement between the United States and Canada providing for the completion of the St Lawrence seaway project in the Great Lakes, is to be given attention in one which will have additional interest to the project in Western Canada.

The navigational aspect of the project which had been overlooked in the publicity surrounding the heated agreement and its potential efforts on the industrial life of this country is to fact of greate interest and importance to the west than the further development of hydro-electric power to the international rapids section of the St Lawrence river.

For this reason it is to be hoped that there is authenticity in the statement that President Roosevelt takes no intention of a distracting navigation by pushing power development on the project alone and that no time will be lost in completing the necessary preliminary surveys and getting actual construction work underway.

There is considerable interest on the declaration attributed to Washington officials that Read the seaway with its 8 foot miles of navigable waters been constructed every great lakes port in the United States and Canada would have participated in both American and Canadian shipping programs

The interest in this statement does not consist in what might have been but rather in what it could mean to Western Canada. The realization of the project is brought to fruition, and more particularly if it can be completed in time to ensure its early use after the war is over

At The Back Door

The completion of the seaway project in effect will bring the ocean to the back door of the prairie provinces It will mean that the largest ocean going commercial vessels will be able to tie-up at docks at the head of the great lakes. Had the seaway with its 8

RIPLEY

OBITUARY

The funeral of the late Donald Cherr, which took place from Alix United Church, on Wednesday, Dec. 4th., was largely attended. The floral tributes, only eight in all of the extent in which Donald was held, were beautiful.

Born at Clairmont, S. Dakota, 44 years ago, he came to Alberta when just a young boy with his parents, and settled on a farm in the Ripley district where he resided up till the time of his untimely death.

When the call came in 1914 for volunteer to serve the King and Country, Donald was among the first to enlist, going overseas with the 50th Battalion and earning three medals via the M. M., The Service and Victory.

The funeral arrangements were in charge of the Legion, six of his comrades Messrs. Rolet, Hoose, Ed. Marryatt, both of whom belonged to the same battalion, Geo. Wilson, W. A. Hallett, Martin Anderson, Sturgeon, the flag draped casket to its last resting place beside his dear mother, followed by other friends who had seen active service in the last Great War.

The Rev. Mr. Thompson, of the United Church, who officiated at the service, paid a glowing tribute to the memory of one, whom we all knew to be a loving son and brother, a good soldier, a loyal citizen, and a better friend no one ever had, quiet, unassuming, one who will be sorely missed.

He leaves to mourn his passing his father, Mr. E. B. Cherr, six brothers and eight sisters. The sympathy of the entire community goes out to the bereaved family.

Without comment, commending to the work.

Leave whatever thou canst not understand.

Fleecewalking & flee were in casual discourse.

We were sorry to learn of the death at Beaver Harbor, N.S., of Bride Hamilton, infant, on Dec. 10th, at the age of nine years, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Holmes.

Mr. and Mrs. Holmes were one time residents of Ripley and Bride's being born at Birchlea From babyhood she had been a great favorite of that devoted local melody cothen.

In 1938 her parents went east in hope that the change would prove beneficial. All that care and loving hands could do was rendered to of no avail, on Nov. 10th, she passed on to another Jewel in His Crown.

The sympathy of the community goes out to the newly bereaved parents and sister Ruth.

The Ripley Community Club held its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Dye. The usual business was conducted, at the close of which a delightful lunch was served by Mrs. Dye.

With regard to one's work the dandelion teaches us always to expect to succeed and never to think we have succeeded.

Compromise Required

A keen interest throughout the Dominion will be affected if not even in the enactments of The Rehabilitation regarding Dominion-provincial conferences are implemented in legislation at an approaching sitting of the House of Commons early in the New Year. A spirit of give and take will have to prevail at the forthcoming conference of provincial premiers at Ottawa in January, otherwise there will be little chance of any benefits being derived, a feeling of disappointment and disillusionment will be engendered.

Some of the proposals of the Commission, as for instance those suggesting that the Federal government assume the whole responsibility of the provinces and the full burden of unemployment relief are far-reaching ones that it is the duty of all public corporate bodies, such as municipal councils, as well as citizens generally to study in this regard and the implications, so that they will be well informed on the issues involved and be able to give direction to their representatives in time to ensure that all interests are protected as far as possible.

It is doubtful if any document of such great importance has been submitted for the consideration of the people of the Dominion since that of the Rowell-Sirois report. It proposes drastic changes in the entire financial set-up of the Dominion and provincial governments, and while such changes as are suggested in the matter of a national income tax which is designed to solve the land income tax problem and control will no doubt be welcomed by all, some of the provinces

As the vexed problem which implementation of the report is intended to solve is that of succession duties. When the Dominion has had an overdose of succession duties to devise revenues from this source, having left that field intact to the provinces to date it is generally admitted in legal circles that Ottawa could do so if it desired.

Even though the Dominion has not encroached on succession duties existing provinces all legislation is unfair to the western provinces inasmuch as it enables the provinces of Ontario and Quebec to tap a great deal of revenue which properly should belong to the western provinces and the maritimes, largely because head offices of most corporations are located in those two eastern provinces. This is one of the problems referred to in the report, which probably can only be settled by appealing the question in a spirit of fairness and reasonableness.

* * *

Widened Influence

Taxes and other proposals in the report are not so far-reaching important as to deal with such fundamental and all-embracing questions of public finance that their influence is bound to extend to every municipality every corporation and every individual throughout the Dominion. Hence the importance that the proposals in the forthcoming conference be dealt with by those directly engaged in municipalities but by everybody.

Municipal financing, which has in recent years undergone a tremendous burden present and future, upon the taxpayers as outlined in the recommendations contained in the report, even though not dealt with directly. It is, therefore, important that municipal authorities study and understand the report, its proposals and its probable effects upon their future ability to finance and take care of the requirements of the local taxpayers.

During the past few years much of the provincial debt has been incurred as a result of the necessity for furnishing relief to the needy and by the depression. If the federal government should assume the financial obligations involved on that account the municipalities would support that more measures of relief will soon be forthcoming than have been forthcoming before payments from their taxpayers for the same reason and the particularly applies to settlement municipalities through the rural municipalities have had to carry obligations on the same account.

* * *

To The Provinces

By reason of their readiness to the provincial government which set them up. The municipalities will look to them to help them in their financial undertakings and it will be as well for them to make this requirement known before the pending federal conference so that the provincial premiers will be properly posted on the matter and be better able to undertake the issues at the capital.

It has been suggested that these problems of internal finance should be taken up and dealt with without waiting for the consideration of the war in the interests of unity at this. It is to be hoped that the discussions that will be precipitated before representatives of practically all the provinces will be conducted in a manner that will not promote disharmony but will bring about a better understanding of the problems faced by sufficient unity of the Dominion. If there is no renewal of unity as shown by the several provinces to bring about a quick turn in a spirit of compromise.

It seems to be of scrap would be a poor excuse for not washing if you're on the army and a navy. Ottawa hundred tons of pre-war requirement to more than 3,250,000 three-quarter pounds bars have been released for the armed forces in the last three months, the department of munitions and supply reported at Ottawa.

Wool Grading

Do Be Compulsory In Canada, After January 1st

Compulsory grading of all Canadian unwashed fleece wool will, after December next January 1st, be effected of the agriculture department said. Grading will show exactly what quantities of various types of wool are available for military and civilian purposes, he said, and show the quantities under David C. Duch exactly what quantities are required.

No innovation in the wool industry grading has been in effect for many years, but the new regulations will show more than ever before. Wool has been graded by Canadian cooperative Wool Growers Association which has maintained the grading system now being used by packers.

All wool will be graded with it dates after it leaves the producers premises and identity of each producer's clip maintained, even after it has been graded. Then a representative will be sent to the producer's grading the grades into which the wool has been placed and the amount in each grade.

Grading will be done by the marketing service of the agriculture department and in some large producing points by graders employed on the basis that their work will be supervised regularly by the department.

Visitors Ask For Exhibit

Believe Prisoners' Crafts Would Boost U. S. Fund For Refugees

Numerous visitors from the United States who have visited the internment camp for enemy aliens at Ottawa have asked that the handicraft articles made by the internees be displayed in the United States, it was announced by Col. Ralston, minister of national defence.

Col. Ralston, who is in charge of the internment camps, said that these articles would bring huge sums to the United States Red Cross Fund for War Prisoners, New York, some visitors said, they.

Whether or not the requests can be complied with is a question which the department of national defence has not yet decided, Col. Ralston said. The articles are mostly carved from bone and wood.

Scientists Have Theory About Changes In Earth's Ozone Ring

A theory that storms may be caused by changes in a 60,000-foot ring of ozone around the earth will be tested soon at the University of Chicago's newly established Institute of Meteorology.

Dr H R. Byers, acting director, said he recently in the course of experiments on weather will be aided by an agreement with the agriculture marketing service of the United States Department of Agriculture, which added $11,000 to the institute's funds for work in determining the scientific basis for long range weather forecasts.

On Friday, December 13th, the funeral of Mrs. W. H. Price took place from the United Church, in Alix. Rev. Cyril A Warren, B.A., of Bashaw, officiated by Mr. Kent officiating. Assisting in the ceremony were members of the Order of the Eastern Star, of which Mrs. Price was a valued member, being an Associate Grand Matron. Sickness alone prevented her from attaining the highest office.

Mrs. Price was born at Walkerton, Ont., on Dec. 22nd, 1868. She was a telegraph operator in Toronto, came West in 1903, lived in B.C. till 1913 when she came to Alberta. The family came to Alix in 1922 and have resided here ever since.

She is survived by her mother, two sisters and two brothers, all of Ontario. She was an active church member, leadership in Sunday School and participating in all the activities of the Ladies Aid and also a member of the Business of the United Church.

The funeral was one of the largest ever held in the local church. Many who attended were unable to get seats inside. At Mrs. Prices own request flowers were omitted. Many flowers, however, were sent from distant points.

The pall bearers were:—Messrs. Jons Fallenta, C. H. Pinnell, F. Wilton, Joseph Johnson, W. D. Clarke, and Hoy Beattie.

Interment Alix Cemetery. Members of Wainwright, Post Grand Matron of the Order of the Eastern Star, performed the funeral ceremony of the Order for the departed. She was accompanied by Mrs. James Colleau, of Edmonton, Past Grand Matron and officer of the General Grand Chapter of the O. E. S. of Washington, D.C.

Best of all, Mrs. Price will live in the memory of her many friends for her thoughtful kindness, her many acts of charity and consideration for others. She was a woman of outstanding character and ability and a born leader.

She leaves behind her to mourn her passing her loving husband, two sons, Ted, Harry and Ronald, and a wide circle of friends who had known her for many years.

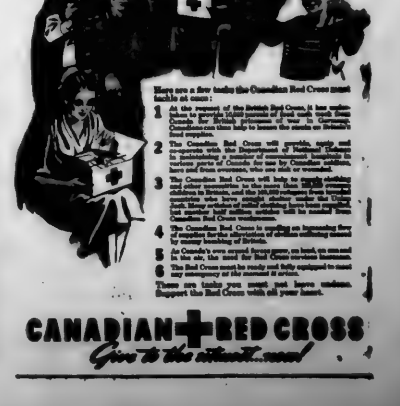
Why the Red Cross is in urgent need of funds



Here are a few tasks the Canadian Red Cross must tackle at once:

1. Aid the wounded of the British Red Cross, it has called upon to provide 12,000 pounds of food each week from Canada for British prisoners of war in Germany. Canadians can thus help to lessen the anxieties of Canadian mothers.
2. The Canadian Red Cross will provide, quick and generous relief to the dependents of Canadian soldiers in consideration of a number of cases in which the dependents of soldiers have not been promptly helped because of technicalities. Canadians will see that no dependent of a soldier shall suffer through lack of funds.
3. The Canadian Red Cross will provide comforts for Canadian soldiers overseas. Many soldiers have not received their Christmas parcels because they were not addressed correctly. Under the Canadian Red Cross system of distribution all soldiers will be assured of receiving their Christmas parcels.
4. The Canadian Red Cross is carrying on increasing duty of supplying comforts to Canadian prisoners of war in enemy hands.
5. As Canada's own armed forces grow, so must the care and comfort of the men of the Canadian Red Cross.
6. The Red Cross must be ready and fully equipped to meet any emergency that may arise at home.

These are tasks you must not leave undone. Support the Red Cross with all your heart.

I am in hospital with the mumps day is only a misnomer as he can see who knew Rev. Theodosius in Edwinton.

His wife Captain Peter, of the Anglican Church there, and is now the Padre in No. 16 General Hospital here, those where is England.

Thanks a million for the Alix papers. I think everyone in our depot read them, although they are not local boys, but all seem to read news from Canada. Thanking you,

Mrs. Thos. Semple.

He heard a clock strike 11. What should he do? It mess—" that there was no other course but to return to the waiting Ella and confess his failure, and he had decided to take this action when he heard above his wind the snap of a lock being turned, and then the voice of Mortimer. The man was coming to the road, and Jim crouched down in the shadow of the little door.

" " " yes, it is raining, of course it is raining my dear man It is always raining in London But I have been out in it and you haven't! Gosh, how it rained "

Thank The words, intermixed had a querulous tone, Mr. Harlow's voice was good-natured it was as though they were sparkling in a while.

"Have you got your pearl? That's right. And button your overcoat The wall—you've no gloves, either What a land you are "

"I really don't want gloves," said another voice. "I am not a bit cold, Mr. Harlow, may I ask you again " "

The voice became indistinct. They were walking away from the lookout and he guessed they were pretending by the side of the parapet. Then Harlow carried a light he would see the ladder Jim went climbing to the bank of the road and peered round the corner. Presently he discerned the figures of the two men they were walking slowly toward him, their backs to the wind and quickly he drew back again.

"I you can't have it. You are needing too much and I won't have your mind overtaxed by writing too much! Be reasonable, my dear Marling " "

Marling! Jim held his breath. They were so near to him now that by taking a step and stretching out his hand he could have touched the nearest man.

The lamps in the street below gave him a slighter against the parapet, and he saw that Harlow's companion was almost as tall as himself, save for a stoop. He caught a glimpse of a bated down all traps by the gate " " " The voices came to him again as they returned, and then a sudden scraping sound, and an exclamation from the financier

"What the devil was that?"

From far below came a faint crash. Jim's heart sank Harlow must have brushed against the bank ladder and knocked it from the parapet.

"You pushed something over," said the stranger's voice

"Felt like a book," said Harlow and Jim could imagine him peering down over the parapet. "That was it " he said again.

The man Jim Carlton's opportunity. He could steal round to the side of the building, slip through the garden, and before the lookout could make his escape Noiselessly he crept along, and then saw a beam of light coming from the open door-way. Against such a light he must be inevitably detected, unless he chose a moment when their backs were turned But they showed no inclination to move, and stood there for a time discussing the thing which Harlow had knocked from the stone wall.

"I don't suppose it matters much," he said at last "It was only a few days before it would have fallen down of its own accord. Let's get back to the car."

The opportunity was not. Even as Jim stood there listening he heard the footfall of the man ascending the stairs. He could see the dim outline of his head and shoulders. He was left on the road without any means of making his way homeward.

The interview with his wife was an unpleasant one. Mrs. Harlow thought that he had deserted her, and departure forgotten to look it? That was not like Harlow

Jim pushed the door further open and looked down A dim light was burning in the room below, and he had a glimpse of a corner of the apartment and a stretch of red carpet Presently he descended the spiral stair which did not creak and under his weight, and after a while, coming to the bottom he peeped round the inner.

The room was apparently empty A log door stood open and the curtained window there was no empty hamper had on or carpet. Behind him was a door which was ajar The only light in the apartment came from the reading lamp on the desk—he crossed the room and pressing the lamp switch put the room in darkness.

A light on the head of solitude was now visible round the edge of the door He peeped and could see no sign of life Before him was a hallway which led down to the front door. He crept out and was about to open it when he heard a sudden exclamation from the room and grinned as he tiptoed down the hall.

The lower landing was in darkness, but he could guide himself by his hand, testing every step he took, until he came into the dimly lighted hallway. Here only a few days before, had been crowded with men and women whose sole concern was their own safety. Harlow had nothing and walking swiftly to the door, grasped the handle. On another second he was facing the man though he had been struck by some huge invisible force

CHAPTER XXV

Carlton lay on the ground beside the door, dazed and stunned. For a time he heard the pacing of a door upstairs and then a swift whizzing. It was the door handle knew by charging with electric current might more than kill a man. Jim made the door a death trap for any burglar who succeeded in entering Harlow's house and the owner of an estate, moreover, he thought. He saw the two men hurrying out of the hall and though only one light was visible in the hall, he guessed the top button was not lighted. This must be the connection Presently Jim heard Harlow again, touching it gingerly with his fingertip. The current was off in the house, and he was in safety. Jim and he advertised his escape by closing the door with a crash that shook the house

Harrison has a big car, he found to his delight, and started off in pursuit Harlow and his companion had disappeared from sight, but Jim knew the direction they had taken, and after driving for a few minutes he saw the tail-lights of a car ahead of him. Switch on Postum instead. You've got caffeine nerves!

Jim guessed the car was Harlow's, and he was right. He had driven it himself, and had left the engine running. The key of the library, of course, was in his pocket, and Jim was Harlow's property he turned into the side of the mountain road. After some time he came to a big open on the garage

He left the car there and set out to spin Jim Carlton into instead of a mere book he made the discovery, when Mr. Harlow was finishing his last cigar, Jim Carlton and Ella Harlow were sitting in the drawing-room.

"How amusing," said Mr. Harlow mildly, as he rose from the table and handed back the document to the owner. "Mortimer is an extraordinary man! Mortimer is an unpleasant word

His face was rather pale and seemed to have developed new lines and furrows. Jim saw him take a sip of water as he turned to the door. At the height of the harsh voices the waiter—quiet, almost Stealthy in the drawing-room—had the hand laid Mrs Ella in It was the first time he had ever had to conceive the waiter as unusually strong. He was a big man, and his hand fastened before her eyes, and then she fainted

"Mortimer!" Harlow's voice was quite calm as he looked down at the unconscious girl. "Mortimer, you are a fool! Why did you do that?"

He had taken a step forward, and Jim was looking at the back of his head. At the height of the harsh voices the waiter—quiet, almost Stealthy in the drawing-room—had the hand laid Mrs Ella in It was the first time he had ever had to conceive the waiter as unusually strong. He was a big man, and his hand fastened before her eyes, and then she fainted

"I am sorry, but he could not help it," said Jim roughly "The power will not be announced in advance

"The Germans were also strong about 'bomber tactics.' Major Robertson explained They believed that a bomber should trust to its speed and not to its guns when attacked by fighters. He then produced great numbers of the Heinkel 111 the Dornier 17 and 215, and the Junkers 88 all fast machines with gun fairings which could not be adapted to take a turret and only mounting three machine guns each These guns have to be swung by the nose by the pilot The turret fire is so feeble that German fighters are usually unable to get the better of our bombers and have often declined to close with them Of Britain bombers too it can be said that still better types will soon make their appearance

Authority On Aeronautics Explains How British Have Edge On Reich

Two Most authoritative articles have given our readers by Britain Explained in an interview by Major F. A. de Vere Hunt ton the authority on aeronautics.

"Important limited plane effort has been put through by Britain," he said and the output of the Air Ministry Factories has been handed to him by Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair. Before the war Britain's single-seater fighters must have eight machine guns and the last bombers must have gun turrets mounted by power of the engines, but now there is a heavy detail They were right and the Germans who have not yet adopted them.

German fighters mount fewer guns and place a good deal of reliance on the cannon a machine gun which fires a small shell One hit from such a shell will put an airplane out of action but the weight have not proved very destructive, as comparatively small amount of ammunition can be carried.

The concentrated fire of eight ordinary guns has proved more effective against the opposing aircraft is heavily armored and armor means weight with all its drawbacks. However, the British authorities are prepared to take cannon if it seems desirable New British fighters have been produced which will be better than the very successful Hurricane and Spitfire but they speed and armament will not be announced in advance

"The Germans were also strong about 'bomber tactics.' Major Robertson explained They believed that a bomber should trust to its speed and not to its guns when attacked by fighters. He then produced great numbers of the Heinkel 111 the Dornier 17 and 215, and the Junkers 88 all fast machines with gun fairings which could not be adapted to take a turret and only mounting three machine guns each These guns have to be swung by the nose by the pilot The turret fire is so feeble that German fighters are usually unable to get the better of our bombers and have often declined to close with them Of Britain bombers too it can be said that still better types will soon make their appearance

Manitoba Sugar Beets

Farmers Expected To Plant Larger Acreage To Beets Next Year

The campaign to make Manitoba self-sufficient in production of sugar is expected next year to result in the harvesting of enough sugar beets to meet the demand of the province.

The campaign was stimulated by reports of sugar beet farmers and the local refinery that this year's crop of 17,000 acres would produce approximately 60,000,000 pounds of sugar, enough to supply the province which consumes 100,000 tons or 200,000,000 pounds of sugar annually.

Farmers are expected to plant 20,000 acres to beets next summer to maintain the present yield from this year's 17½ tons per acre to 18 to 14 tons. The crop this year approximates 17 tons per acre.

Experience has taught the farmers that a small area intensively cultivated will produce a better yield.

A Mexican expert recently visited the sugar-growing district, advising farmers and factory employees how to handle beets.

The provincial government plans to co-operate with farmers in eradicating pests A system of crop rotation has been worked out. During between years when the land is not planted to beets, oats and alfalfa or other crops will be grown.

H. H. ALMA, K.C., one of the late Sir James Aikins, former lieutenant-governor of Manitoba is one of the workers in the campaign.

Brown: "It's just the length of this rule, and two thumbs over, with the brisk, and the breath of my hand, and my arm from here to there, but the finger nails." — Montreal Star.

Lest We Forget

WHILE we celebrate this Season of Goodwill in comfort, our brothers, sisters and comrades across the sea live 'neath the shadow of death . . . death far home from the skies by the monstrous hordes of Mandalon and Pegandon.

At this season we are particularly reminded of the debt we owe to those whose service and sacrifice make it possible for us to enjoy our Christmas amidst the carefree happiness of children and loved parents . . . Gone radiant men who patrol the skies, man the ships, stand by the guns, and place their all — even unto life itself, between us and the enemy.

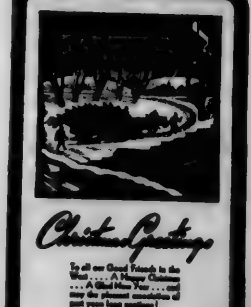
How can we pay our debt to them?

The least we can do is to Save every dollar that we can and lend it to Canada, so that Canada can provide everything in munitions and equipment to lastly those men for the defence of our country and our civilization.

Our savings should be invested in War Savings Certificates, and we should continue to save and invest in War Savings Certificates until Victory is won.

The widow's mite counts as much as the more fortunate ones' plenty, as evidences of service, sacrifice and determination.

So then, whatever else you do at this Christmas season, save and invest in War Savings Certificates. The very consciousness of your service in the Defence of your homeland will make greater your personal enjoyment of Christmas.



Christmas Greetings

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Is the Universe, Including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?" is the subject of the Lesson Sermon at all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. The Golden Text is Isaiah 45:18. One of the Scriptural citations is "And God saw everything that he had made, and, behold, it was very good" (Genesis 1:31.) One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "God created and governs the universe, including man. The universe is filled with spiritual ideas, which He evolves, and they are obedient to the Mind that makes them" (p. 331).

The Second Reason

For this reason, if for no other, education in the public and high schools must be oriented to the cultivation of the mind, to a training in the attributes and functions of good citizenship. This is largely the agricultural instruction for a life vocation can be safely superimposed, to the advantage of the individual and of society at large.

Until the basic cultural and mental attainment has been acquired intensive technical training should be held in abeyance, except perhaps for a small minority, no. for instance, the blind. Experience has demonstrated that they are unable to make any progress in the cultural tests and those of them who, by reason of peculiar circumstances, will be unable to complete a high school course.

The demand which has grown up in recent years for specialized technical training for very young people is largely the result of the abandonment of the apprenticeship system, under which industry itself undertook to prepare youths for a trade. The failure to revive the barrier of training for industrial life has been thrown upon the public educational system, where it does not and should not belong. More recently and particularly in the United States, factory schools have come into existence as institutions that industry is again resuming the responsibility which it abdicated when apprenticeship went into the discard.

The present day trend towards specialized technical training of manual, ...ally immature young people is not only detrimental to the individual, but is inimical to the interests of society generally in that it tends to deprive the ...ority of the opportunity of enjoying the fuller life and the better of a larger body of well informed and cultured citizenry.

* * * *

The Real Issue

With the exception of those few to whom reference has been made, youth should be required to complete a high school course, after which the student is well prepared to undertake specialized training for a life vocation in state-aided technical schools, private technical schools and later still, in factory schools directly connected with industry.

Only by following this course can the educational system of the country, so exemplified in the common schools, be expected to make their proper contribution towards the preservation of democracy, to develop and provide the human resources to enable the citizenry to move towards a fuller life and to the strengthening of our democratic institutions and an ever improving democratic regime.

It is to conserve this ideal for the world at large and to ensure the perpetuation of civilization in the highest form that the world is enduring devastations and suffering and this country is pledged to a great democratic constitutional contribution. When the fight is over and the battle won, the foundations for an abiding and ever broadening and enlightened democracy must have been well and truly laid, if the suffering and sacrifices are not to have been in vain.

How Become Thrifty

Munition Workers in Britain Not Spending Their Money Foolishly

British munitions workers of to-day are a strangely sober lot.

They are more intent on getting out of debt and on saving money than they were during the delirious war years of 1914-18 when they scorned the "upper crime" by buying pianos on the.

At least this is the conclusion reached by Charles Madge of the London School of Economics and Social Research after a study of family expenditures in the typical munitions town of Coventry, as published in the New Statesman.

He found that skilled workers in Coventry are getting between £50 and £60 a week (Canada parity) by considerable overtime while unskilled workers doing piecework and working to work more nights a week, are earning up to £65 and £66 a week. In all, 65 per cent. are earning more than they did in September, 39 per cent. are earning about the same and 39 per cent. are earning less.

But the striking part is that 87 per cent. of the families are saving money every week in addition to their routine payments for dividend and burial insurance and for holiday benefits—and of the remaining 13 per cent. the majority are paying off arrears of rent and doctors' bills and grocery bills.

Anglican Bankbright

United States Embassy To Britain Slightly Executive Type

The United States has released to Britain an enormous type of airplane bankbright which is considered highly effective, but not so accurate as the newest sight now used by U.S. army and navy planes, it was learned at Washington.

The bankbright was handed to the British for experimental purposes and the Royal Air Force, if satisfied with its performance, may apply for its production for ourselves.

For Propaganda Purposes

Heads Photograph Thats Combed Planes Describing Them As Boring

The London Times says The German army doesn't find it as difficult to obtain R.A.F. headgear as it does material for propaganda purposes that they have published a picture of their own crashed aircraft and describing them as British.

A case occurred on September 15, when the Volkischer Beobachter published in its North German edition an impressive photograph of a wrecked bankbright alleged to be a British machine which had crashed in Germany. It was accompanied by the triumphant caption: "The end of a British air pirate. He tried to cross the German coast, but our air defences were too strong for him and brought him down."

The aircraft is in fact, quite clearly a Junkers 88. The curious misunderstanding of the Berlin's bold publication on the bombing of the Nazi factories would in itself be comical, but a closer examination of the wreckage reveals it beyond any doubt as a German. It has swastikas on it, and

Saturday's Journal announces that Lord Halifax will be sent to the U. S. as ambassador and that Anthony Eden will become once more minister of Foreign Affairs in the British Government. U.S. AID TO BRITAIN

W. W. Aldrich, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Chase National Bank of New York, would have the United States Government act quickly to help Great Britain finance the war in a recent speech he made the following statement:

Britain also should be given aid promptly and generously, before England's financial needs run dangerously low, declared Winthrop W. Aldrich, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Chase National Bank of New York, in an address before members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, recently.

"There will be much discussion in these coming weeks about the extent and nature of the financial aid we are prepared to give Britain," he said. "Many ingenious proposals have already been made, some of which seem designed more to avoid raising the issue on the floor of Congress than to settle it on its merits."

Neither the Johnson Act, nor the Neutrality Act prohibits our Government from giving direct financial aid to Great Britain, he declared, although both Acts interpose barriers against private citizens or corporations giving credit to the British Government or to any agency of that Government.

"There is nothing in the law to prevent the United States Government from giving credit to Britain or from making an out-right grant-in aid to Britain," he said.

"Whether it is desirable or not to amend the Johnson Act and the Neutrality Act so as to permit credit to Great Britain, is a question exclusively of moral importance.

"Let us count the issue based on without embarrass or evasion, and put it directly up to Congress to provide Britain with the funds she will need urgently in the near future.

Note and Comment

Seigneurial tenure has been abolished in Quebec. The old system of landlords, one of the last vestiges of the feudal creation of land holding, brought to Quebec by the early settlers, was officially ended on Nov. 1, seigniories. The land holders were known as seigneurs, and parcelled out acres to tenants and received a yearly tithe. It will cost the province $10,000,000 to indemnify the landlords. The tenants will now become the owners, reimbursing the government through a nominal tax, thus finishing another form of slavery.

"Walk into my parlor said the spider to the fly." Hitler has invited the ex king of Roumania to live in Holland or Belgium. He may be allowed to keep King Alberts, of Belgium, company in his prison quarters. In these parlous days Hitler wants to be able to lay his hands on all the Axes Kings, Queens and Judas in the pack. In any nothing about the Dozen.

DEDICATION

To Mr. Harry Price And His Three Sons

(By Chas. T. Bryan)

In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, who went to be with Jesus, Dec. 21, 1939.

Dearest mother you have left us,
And our hearts are nearly broke with pain,
But 'twas God who took beneath us
And can help us meet again.
How we miss the constant flutter
Of your busy step and hand,
Meeting you our longest can times,
God alone can understand.
Oh our hearts are sad and lonely
Since our loved one's gone away,
For no more you'll join our number
On a rosy summer's day.
All your smiles were bright and cheerful,
And your heart was filled with love,
But the Saviour's voice has called you
To a brighter home above.
Oh we miss you dearest mother,
While we linger here alone,
With our hearts all torn and bleeding,
Sighing for a brighter home
Farewell, mother, we have left us,
Your dear face we'll see no more,
But in heaven we long to meet you
We have our parting will be o'er.

A Financier in the Making

William Rockefeller used to tell with delight a story illustrative of the financial genius of his famous father, John.

When John was a little fellow, a so-called Indian doctor visited the town. He advertised in order to get trade started, took out a bright new silver dollar and said that he would sacrifice it.

"How much am I bid," he asked, "for the bright silver dollar?"

But the crowd was cautious, silent, suspicious. No bids were heard.

"How much am I bid" shouted the Indian doctor again. "Come, come, gents! A nickle, a dime?"

"I'll bid a nickle," piped John D Rockefeller, at last.

"The dollar is yours, boy," cried the doctor. "Hand up your nickle."

"Take it out of the dollar," piped John. "Hand up your ninety-five cents change."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Christian Science" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. The Golden Text is Matthew 13:52. One of the Scriptural citations is "Then said he, these are the true disciples, which stand by the Lord of the whole earth" (Zechariah 6:14). One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "Christ's Christianity is the choice of spiritual being in opposition to all egos, manifesting its absolute correspondence with the Scriptural assertion, 'Every man shall bear his own burden in the day of God.'" (p.214).

RIPLEY
Complimenting Mr. and Mrs. Harold Olson, a miscellaneous shower took place recently, a large number of friends and neighbors gathered in the school on Saturday evening. Dancing was indulged in for a couple of hours, after which a dainty lunch was served. Then came the crowning feature of the evening when Mr. Hallett, on behalf of those present, presented the happy couple with a table laden with lovely and useful articals. Mr Hallett, in making the presentation, hoped that their troubles would all be "rosie" not very big ones. We will join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Olson many years of happy married life.
The Xmas Tree held in the school on Tuesday evening was a success. Much credit is due Miss Pugh, the children and Frees Cudmail not forgetting Santa Claus, for the very delightful evening. We regret very much that Miss Pugh is leaving, having taken a position on the Mirror teaching staff.
The W. A. and Ormsdale League held a party for the said boys who are home for their Christmas holidays. Every one reports a wonderful time.

Do You Care?

Speaking of Alix:

It seems inconceivable that a community with the resources and broad mindedness should take such meagre interest in the welfare of its future citizens.

Our boys and girls are allowed, indeed forced, to accept any type of entertainment offered though, it may not, in fact very often is not, either wholesome or desirable; children will find some outlet for that pent up energy. If properly directed it may be a source o' joy and happiness. If on the other hand it is left to the vagaries of chance and irresponsible leadership the end product is always frustration crime and broken lives.

The training and leadership of our teen age boys and girls will largely determine their outlook and usefulness to society in the future, it is absolutely necessary therefore that we "snap out of it" and begin making up for all the years of placid indifference to which we have subjected this community.

At the moment the most crying need of our youngsters is for good wholesome outdoor winter sport. We have what is left of a once fairly respectable open air skating rink. This item on our program is in a most deplorable state of disrepair and must reflect the amount of conscious effort we have put into our efforts, with the thing about to collapse. It is indeed a fitting moment to remind me of the things we have not done. Of course the rink or what is left of it does not belong to the community at large but to the Curling Club which organization is for lack of public support also in it's death throes.

All right! The facts seem to indicate that we have betrayed our trust in the past, perhaps it may become the gravity of the situation never registered sat-stupified public conclusion. Well now! Mr. and Mrs. Citizen it is squarely up to you and no matter how children spend their time running the streets, loitering in our public places and generally subjected to associations potent with peril to their future and society as a whole or whether by a united effort to safeguard, and interest ourselves in the problem and save those youngsters we are really interested in them. We can do this thru the formation of an association which could be in perpetuity a committee to supervise encourage and generally furnish the leadership for all sane sports in the community.

To begin with we must put our skating rink in to some semblance of usefulness and for this purpose a meeting is being called for Tuesday, January 28th, 1941, at 8 p.m., in the Athletic's Hall.

Its YOUR MEETING, YOUR COMMITTEE, YOUR PLAN and only as you respond to these your last it — it can and will be made Alix's better 9...ce to live in.

I'LL SEE YOU AT THE MEETING THURSDAY NIGHT — OR WILL I ?

From Little Acorns

The title Here's Howe gives little clue to the nature of the content of the article which as captioned in a recent issue of Reader's Digest "is the other thing" the pages of the magazine might indicate. It is rather a tonic to which liquor plays a major role, but it wasn't. Very much to the contrary.

In a magazine whose success in life is predicated on the attraction of the shortest 11 synopses each year but it tells a yeatre. Concerned from the Rotarian the official organ of Rotary International, it could be summarized also in two open-ing sentences "Two years ago, Howe, Texas was a seedy, down-at-the-heels village. To-day it is distinguished as one of the handsomest spots of northeastern Texas."

These two sentences prove a turn to a routine who has seen only too many villages on the journey to the unlovely description applied to Howe. Texas as it appeared two years ago and who is naturally led to wonder how so great a transformation could be brought about in such a time.

The answer is found in the remaining paragraphs of Here's Howe's condensed story. Below the Red Skull Hills, Howe has started a self-help program of Raising to Trans Texas." the village school has got busy With and the civicmed up the most unsavoring dump on the main street and planted flowers in front of it. Finally, quiet Miss Roberts' enthusiasm caused people to get busy Improvements spread from surroundings to buildings. It also obvious that unpainted buildings would look incongruous in a setting of flowery beauty. There was little money, but soon everybody contributed labor. Then small parks and picnic grounds were laid out and to-day Howe looks the nation as parks per capita, not for 500 people.

Charm soon brought recognition to the little village in a material way, as well. Visitors increased, tourist camps sprang and spent a little money. A couple of small industries located and now the people of Howe not only en joy pleasant surroundings but are reaping financial advantages as well.

* * *

It Can Be Done

No doubt the experience of Howe, Texas, could be matched by a number of the small towns and villages of the Western Canadian province, but there are many who have not yet pulled themselves out of the slough of despond into which they have been precipitated by the years of the present depression. It can be done however, and with very little expense if the will is there, if everybody will roll up their sleeves and get busy.

It is true that the seasons of bloom is short on the prairies compared with that of Texas, but a trim, neat appearance will manifest itself long before the summer flowers start to bloom and long after the last one has been cut down by Frost. And that makes all the difference between an attractive spot and one which peoples instinctively avoid if they can conveniently do so.

In every village and town there are vacant lots and unkempt and ugly corners which could be converted into beauty spots, many of them with the aid of some labor which can be done on a voluntary co-operative basis and the expenditure of a very small sum for seeds and a few shrubs and trees. It does not take many trees, shrubs and flowers to convert an unsightly corner into a spot which beckons with allure. A few such spots will transform the appearance of an entire village or city and it is certainly worth while attempting to improve the appearance of his own property.

Such projects, be obviously, have a civic value as well as an aesthetic one. The farmer and his family, who reside equidistantly from a town, friends or village will naturally be drawn to frequent their habitation in an attractive and distinctive place to the disadvantage of the less attractive centres. Other things being equal—indeed they may be regarded as being so—a town or city will grow in proportion to the attractiveness of its surroundings welcome expressed in terms of handsome buildings and pride

Oil Packings

Don't Put Apples in Mixed Pickles

To conform with the requirements of the British Ministry of Agriculture, which is regulating under the Destructive Insect and Pest Act of Canada, persons in Canada contemplating packing apples to meet the terms of the fighting forces overseas are in formed particularly that no application received that apples should not be included in mixed packages. Under the provisions of the Act of the Fruit and the unusual shipping conditions as a result of the war both the Department of Agriculture and the Post Office Department say that it is not enough to include only first fruit in such packages as second fruit potential carriers of the package itself and also to other matter with which it may come in contact. Experience has the fact that what is sent to the British Isles is longer in transit while the war is on than in normal times, it is not likely the fruit will be delivered in edible condition.

In the case of gift packages including apples only, certification under the Act referred to is required before the parcel can be sent. Inquiries regarding certification should be made to the nearest Dominion Fruit Inspector.

Record-Book Report

General Opinion In That Respect Considerations Are Generally Good

What is the essential question answer in the Record Books report which is now to be considered in a unanimous harmony our Dominion and the provinces? There is a good deal of difference of opinion as Canada that the recommendations are generally good, calculated to improve practical business of government in Canada. It remains to ask whether it is wise and practical to attempt to realize these recommendations while the country is at war.

Professor Angus of the University of British Columbia, a member of the commission on grants on exactly this question the other day. In sum it went like this.

Mr. Mackinnon is carrying a load this present setup of government. It is a badly adjusted that the man finds no overtaxing difficulty in carrying his burden. Now the question is the commission's recommendations) that the load can be distributed in certain ways so that it will be easier to carry.

Well, then, while the man is considering the best way of distributing his load that he has to carry a rifle or two? The acceptance of the idea that all the more reason, as he stoops to pick up his rifle, that he should adjust his load, so that he will be able to run—for it is practical and possible, as the saying is very well off better and so that he can be free to use it in the defence of his life and his home. Is that a reasonable one? And is not that a good answer? And if not, why not? —The Vancouver Province.

Why They Fight

British People Want To Have Every Injustice In Europe

The news coming from people tell us that they are fighting for the last for approval and they be against the wrong of government. And what are they behind for? Tyrannies, oppression, and unrighteousness is stated on September 3 1939 For the right to remove his persecutors. For the right to have the challenged their right to exist? Will they be compensated for the fearful upheaval in their lives with a guess that merely puts the boot on the other foot? Will they be satisfied "As you were"? Not a bit. They want the things that are mankind in the furnaces of war. They expect its demon to remove not only Hitler and all the social and international evils of which Hitlerism is the concentrated evil. They want to end nationalistic prejudice and economical injustice. They want the equivalent of compensation for private pain. They want to see the oppressed peoples of States and nationals Free want to end share poverty and every so. Will they be cold words. —London Daily Herald

Language Came in Handy

Anthony Eden's Friend Knowledge Of Arabic Useful to Egypt

The London correspondent of the Ottawa Journal tells of one cabinet minister's brave at least a which language came in handy. Many up both, but this is generally the linguistic test of British politicians.

Anthony Eden, one of the well-educated specimens of quite a number, knowledge and use of Arabic. He is reported to have served him, and on his visit to the Middle East, to Egypt, to Greece and Transjordan he has made himself extremely popular with the native dignitaries and politicians by speaking to them in their own languages.

Eden is the only British cabinet minister is likely to have left the best impression.

Advertising Pays

The Calgary Herald tells this one: A Missouri woman advertised for a husband. She got one at a cost of five dollars. He enlisted in the army and was killed. She got $5,000 insurance and will get a pension for person as long as she lives. Yet there are those who say advertising does not pay.

The Fate Of Italy

By Colin R. Cobb In The London Listener

There will still be an Italy, if we may believe Mr. Mussolini. There is Italy if we have I remember very well, in the early days of the war, that though the Kaiser's sons and Austrian eyes upon the Mediterranean as the main theatre of the war, Bridoux that great pan betweenItaly and America. They did not want the Germans as neighbours there and they were quite right to feel so. Italy is a prize much on a middle, over which both a decent regime has used it. But since that I have watched over it myself, and there is nothing to prevent the Italians from doing so. Whenever they wish Hitler will be ready to withdraw. Italy is the Mediterranean as Malta. She has only remitted on making the Mediterranean Italian. Italy is as much at the mercy of the enemy as Malta. Prince It is a tragedy.

The Fascists have committed the horrible error of inviting Italy to avoid that he will give them away rather than our award that we will pay Italy generous compensation at the end of the war. Is that a good answer? And if not, why not? —The Vancouver Province.

Ships Built By Britain

At Least At Shorehead Vessels Completed During Nine Months

Despite air attacks on her ports, Britain completed at least 84 new merchant ships, most of them fast freighters, during the first nine months of 1940, an authoritative survey of British shipbuilding showed.

The total tonnage launched was the same period the United States launched approximately 25 vessels. They British ships aggregated at least 420,000 tons.

At the same time, naval measure said, British shipyards completed many of the 169 destroyers and light cruisers and 20 escorts vessels which she was known to have had in the way when the war began.

The merchant ships included 12 fast freighters averaging between 5,000 and 6,000 tons, four tankers and two passenger vessels. One British port alone produced 20 vessels, and has almost a score on the way.

Sir William Jobnerwood said recently on arrival in London that "we are building ships like you people build autos—with assembly-line methods."

CHAPTER XXVI

"They kept him here," whispered Ellenbury. He seemed afraid of the sound of his own voice.

Jim saw another steel door at the farther end of the room, it had no bolt only a key hayhole. And then his attention was diverted.

"Look!"

Summoning all his strength, the little man pulled at the wardrobe and it swung out like a gate on a hinge. Behind was a steel door.

"There * * * I came that way The service. * * *

"As Mr. listened, he heard the distant whine of the elevator in motion.

"To what floor?" he asked hoarsely.

"Ground floor, I think," he answered Jim breathlessly. "We never got to the basement."

He tried to climb one of the grimy hydraulic cylinders but although with the assistance of Jim he managed to touch the platform, he could derive little comfort from his achievement. The platform was of steel and supports. Neither hope anything of the mechanism of an hydraulic lift, and indeed the enormous weight was of sufficient strength to stand gaining.

Jim dare behind the wardrobe and the only possible means of egress. He searched the car, and the tool chest, but found nothing.

"If we could get to a bar—he'd be afraid of using any kind of gun for fear of setting off the bombs—and he might find something that would help us," he said.

"Bombs?" he never saw Mrs. Simmons or Edwards, or whatever her name was, either the old man and his wife.

"That fact had not occurred to Jim. Enough they had murdered the girl from roof to basement, he had not seen the hard-faced woman again.

"Perhaps," he said Jim. "she threw the cable out, swinging his feet, he could see the dimly lit pit below. Perhaps she is there now, waiting for us the little elevator!"

It was true! Jim had seen the elevator when Barlow waited upon the top floor but after that it had disappeared. It was the easiest thing in the world to slip from floor to floor blinding the little sentry party.

The door was immovable; he could detect no leverage. And, even if he had, it was unlikely that it would yield.

In polite Greek "kera" means "make room." In battle it means "Get the hell out of here."

The Evzones are natives of the mountains and a wounded Evzone sergeant, his bullet-riddled leg in a tied sling, told the correspondent of their fighting sport.

"We beat them surprised by the first rush," he said. "Sometimes we had driven up a ravine," he said. "Sometimes we had driven up a ravine." he said. "Sometimes we had driven up a ravine." he said. "Sometimes we had driven up a ravine."

NOTE A D COMMENT

No doubt many of our readers are puzzled to understand the recent success of Nazi submarines in attacking British shipping. The reason is that Germans have developed a device of the British destroyers by which they can detect the presence in nearby waters of a submarine. This device can work for the submarine, too, and enable it to detect the presence of an approaching ship, without coming to the surface or even showing its periscope. The device gives notice of approach as well as distance and they can accurately dispatch a torpedo to meet it. To some extent this new danger it may be necessary for the British to add airplanes to its convoy systems, by having a certain number of planes convoy shipping from Britain half the distance of 1800 miles and meet a similar convoy from the Canadian side to escort the convoy the balance of the voyage. The submarine still has a horror of airplanes and will quickly drop to great depths on their approach.

LIFE OF MAN

Three score years and ten is about the average span of human life, and according to the latest statistics the majority of citizens are very well satisfied to live out their allotted span. The cradle of every man starts with a birth, and the grave with a death, but the span between is filled with many years, some short and some long, and the average is about seventy. Many of these years are filled with sickness, suffering and pain, caused by the carelessness of the individual in the matter of his eyesight. Statistics show that 80 per cent of the human population of the world suffer from defective vision, and that 90 per cent of this could be corrected by the use of modern methods. Of the 20 per cent who have perfect vision, 10 per cent will develop defects in the course of their lives, leaving only 10 per cent who will be free from eye defects. Of the 80 per cent who suffer from defective vision, 50 per cent suffer from errors of refraction, which can be corrected by the use of glasses. Of the 50 per cent who require glasses, 10 per cent will require them for reading only, 20 per cent will require them for distance only, and 20 per cent will require them for both reading and distance. Of the 20 per cent who require glasses for reading only, 10 per cent will require them for reading after the age of forty, and 10 per cent will require them for reading before the age of forty. Of the 20 per cent who require glasses for distance only, 10 per cent will require them for distance after the age of forty, and 10 per cent will require them for distance before the age of forty. Of the 20 per cent who require glasses for both reading and distance, 10 per cent will require them after the age of forty, and 10 per cent will require them before the age of forty. Of the 10 per cent who require glasses for reading after the age of forty, 5 per cent will require them after the age of fifty, and 5 per cent will require them before the age of fifty. Of the 10 per cent who require glasses for reading before the age of forty, 5 per cent will require them before the age of thirty, and 5 per cent will require them before the age of twenty. War Without Gloves

Fathers this number is over, the people of this continent are likely to witness a good deal of high pressure Nazi inspired propaganda designed to persuade the citizens of the United States and probably Canada as well to exert pressure on Great Britain to make her accept blockade of European ports to prevent starvation among the people subjugated by Hitler and his Nazi hordes.

Of course if such a propaganda campaign is attempted, and it is likely to be its success may be expected to be skilfully hidden. The seeds will be secretly planted perhaps already are being sown, in what the up-to-more page will be fertile soil, industrial committees of organizations devoted to humanitarian purposes, and efforts will no doubt be made to press on a sympathize all the agencies of Christianity and business welfare.

The object, of course, will be to endeavour to rouse up a vast body of public opinion whose common will be to persuade those in charge of the prosecution of the war effort, that the people of the German-occupied countries are being starved to death that the health and morale of the survivors are being permanently undermined and that if the Nazi Beast is to achieve the suffering of these innocent people by allowing sufficient food to reach them to prevent an irreparable disaster and to do so in the interests of suffering humanity.

Is Blockade Inhumane Probable

On the face of it, it seems probable that there will be some underlying truth and perhaps starvation among the subjugated European nations the more that the degree in which this condition might avail for Hitler will to determine with any great degree of accuracy as long as Nazi censorship controls the information available from those countries.

In view of his Nazi the rise of the end justifying the means, the Nazi policies of total warfare and complete ruthlessness towards civilian populations as well as enemy fighting forces, of the doctrine of government by suppression and frightfulness, it is a reasonable assumption that even if there is enough food to sustain the entire population of Continental Europe for an indefinite period of time with the best of it first for their own fighting forces and secondly for their own civilians and the remainder in small driblets and leftovers. This would be quite in line with Hitler's belief that the Germans are super people and must be strengthened and perpetuated at the expense of all others. Other nationals should be subjugated to bowers of servitude and drawers of water for their overlords or should not be allowed to encumber the earth at all.

Supposing the British should yield to pressure to permit supplies of foodstuffs to get through to the suffering victims of Nazi aggression under the most arduous Nazi guarantees that the food would reach those for whom it is intended and that it would not be diverted to provide additional rations and comforts for the armed forces and the nation which is standing in destroy the British Empire and world democracy? It is difficult to believe and his Nazi cohorts already affords ample and overwhelming [illegible] of the value of such promises and guarantees, from such sources.

And For Nazis

If the Nazis find, in course of time, that the British blockade [illegible] impedes their war effort, no undoubt only if it will, it will be quite in keeping with their character and their avowed doctrines to use it to that a crop of public sufferings of the subjugated nations reach the outside world and particularly the people of this continent in the hope that the [illegible] sufferings the desired result of a free flow of needed foodstuffs for the sad and comfort, not of the Nazi bondsmen but of the Nazis themselves.

Hence if there were some truth in so much stories, and it is quite possible that there may be, it would be an easy matter to exaggerate them in degree and accept to appeal to the well known sentimentality of the British people and to create a feeling of horror and pity in the minds of the Canadian people.

The people of this country must not, however, be blinded by compassion for suffering innocent people, into forgetfulness that if these conditions exist this winter among the subjugated people, they are the direct result of Hitler and his Nazi minions. In taking over these countries against their will, the Germans have made themselves responsible for their welfare until such time as they can be liberated and are put in the position of feeding for themselves once again.

The war cannot be speedily terminated by playing into the hands of the enemy. And with an enemy of the type which the democracies are today facing war must be waged without gloves.

No Apple Shipments

Great Britain Puts Ban On Shipments This Winter

No Canadian apples will go to Great Britain in this winter of the war.

At Manchester, England, Lord Weedon, the British food administrator announced on fruit can except oranges would be imported this year.

Sir H. L. Wheeler fruit expert at the department of agriculture, said the department had anticipated for some weeks that no apples would be shipped to the United Kingdom.

Lord Woolton also hinted at a reduction in the bacon ration for Britishers. The bacon board at Ottawa, now no word of this and is still shipping its 8,176,000 pounds a week under the contract running to January, the next which calls for a total of 426,000,000 pounds.

Ace Canadian Bomber

Pattison now can't christened prematurely by any name. Any "Mountain" having a "Mount" or "Mountain" in its name is an observation ace with sleeper section. And any sleeping car with "Lake," "Stream" or "Fort" in its title is one with 16 sections, two compartments and one drawing room.

Some storage jars used in ancient Crete were made big enough to hold 10 bushels of grain or bread.

When Italian bombers attack and destroy Greek churches how can they expect Italian churches to escape?

The Royal Soldier

Story About King Christian Of Denmark And The Nazi Flag

King Christian of Denmark recently had down the law to a German officer in an argument over display of the Nazi flag in that occupied country, according to the Goteborg newspaper Handels-och Sjofarts-Tidning.

The King noticed the banner flying over an official building and complained to the German officer that this was contrary to the agreement between Denmark and Germany.

The officer replied that the flag was there by order of the German minister to Denmark and that, therefore, he was about to find a soldier to take it down.

"The soldier will be shot," the officer replied.

"I will be the soldier," the King mildly.

The Nazi flag was lowered.

LOCAL RED CROSS

Red Cross Speaks

The following is taken from the "Voice of the Red Cross" Broadcast of November 25th.

We have had inquiries from mothers of Canadian soldiers in England asking how our supplies—socks and other comforts—are distributed to the men of our forces. This is how it is done. When the men need woolen comforts or other articles, their Commanding Officer is informed, and it is he who requests the Canadian Red Cross for supplies. The Canadian Red Cross Receiving Depot distributes these supplies to the individual soldier. That is the job of the officer delegated by the Commanding Officer. Any Canadian soldier who needs socks has only to make his need known to his superior officer, and the Canadian Red Cross acts immediately. You can see, therefore, that many of our Canadian troops receive socks which they do not know come from the Red Cross, because socks are not labelled with the Red Cross insignia. They cannot be labelled because it would interfere with the stretching and comfort of the socks.

There will always be an England

WORLD OF WHEAT

By H.G.L. Strange, Director "The Crop Tossing Plan"

Some are taking a gloomy view of the future of the prairie wheat industry. For myself, I feel optimistic, and here are some of the reasons:

1. Methods have now been found that will permit flour to be "fortified" with the precious Vitamin B. This will make bread more nutritious and should tend, of course, to increased bread consumption.

2. World population is steadily increasing at the rate of about 1 per cent per annum. This should call for an increased wheat consumption of at least 25 million bushels each year.

3. During the past twenty years the great trade routes of the world have been cluttered up with high tariffs and other man-made artificial restrictions which have prevented many people who need Canadian wheat from buying it. The World has had its fill of the so-called "New Order" and will, I believe, after this war revert to the good "Old Order" of much freer international trade, and so to better fed and more satisfied people.

When the stupid harmful trade-strangling tariffs, set up by Canada and other countries, are cleared away, then must definitely demands for wheat will increase, surpluses will disappear, wheat prices will rise and, because foreign goods will come into Canada more freely, then the cost of the "things farmers have to buy" will be reduced.

It is now suggested that England should build undersea craft to transport food and material to her shores. Large cargoes could be carried in these boats if properly constructed. This would enable Britain to do away with the convoy system and release many battle ships.

CREDIT UNIONS

Credit unions in Edmonton continue to register fine records of service and co-operative help, according to the latest report issued by the Department of Trade and Industry. Ten functioning unions have amassed capital and assets of $98,000, and since inception of the movement have lent members $99,600. Largest union organized among Swift's packing plant employees. Three hundredand one members in two years have been able to borrow $16,220 from their co-operative fund. Other unions are composed of church members, community leagues, employees in various trades, civil and civic servants. Latest to plan organization are city fire fighters.

Safeguarding An Investment

Discussion of considerable importance to the economic interests of the people of Western Canada were made at the recent annual meeting of the On-to-the-Bay Association in Saskatoon when resolutions were passed calling for a Western Board of Management for the port of Churchill and for a joint through railway rate tariff on grain moving from all Western Canadian points to the Bay route.

In the light of the half century history of the struggle of the people of Western Canada to secure the short route across the province to tidewater, it is manifest, if no question once it was established, the On-to-the-Bay Association's faith justified in taking whatever steps may be necessary to see that the investment of $45,000,000 in the Hudson Bay route is fully protected and that all necessary funds be paid promptly for the people whom it was designed to benefit the people of the private provinces.

That the Bay route is a sound business is evident from the fact that it was decided by all a conference of all western transportation representatives before the last session of the Parliament to place before them the proposal contained in these unanimous resolutions.

The history of the campaign for the construction of the Hudson Bay route, now the business asset of the province to make it pay, is one of the most romantic in Canadian annals. Its successful completion is the necessity for the further development of this avenue of trade being placed in the hands of a group who will have a tangible eye to the interests of the people and the public money—for it must not be overlooked that $45,000,000 of the $67,000,000 which represents the actual costs of Churchill and the railway, was raised by the sale of Western bonds specifically announced for that purpose.

Piety Of Opposition

While the position was first mentioned it was immediately opposed by Eastern interests to such a good purpose that 40 years ever was contracted before construction was completed and the port and railway facilities were ready to handle the produce of Western grain fields and such inbound cargoes as might be available. In the meantime valuable years were lost and money—for it must not be overlooked that $45,000,000 of the $67,000,000 which represents the actual costs of Churchill and the railway, was raised by the sale of Western bonds specifically announced for that purpose.

Ninety four years of age and resident of Lamerton district two miles north of Mirror since 1906, Valentine Neis passed away in an Edmonton hospital on Boxing Day, Dec. 26. The remains were brought home for interment in the district which had so long been his home.

He was first in the district to operate a threshing machine. He was also in demand as a locator of water.

Address—Alix, Alberta

This is a fight to the finish. No room for half measures. No time for delay. This is urgent . . . pressing . . . vital. This is WAR.

So Canada closes her ranks . . . 467,000 men in the Canadian Active Service Forces; 240,000 recruits to be trained during the next twelve months; an army of 500,000 by next summer.

This is one side of Canada's war effort. The other side concerns YOU.

More men . . . well equipped, well armed, well clothed, well fed . . . demand more dollars.

Canada looks to you to supply those dollars . . . and to keep on supplying them till this war is won.

Start saving now. Be ready to help your country when the call for money comes. Be ready to assist your dollars in this fight for human freedom and decency.

Be glad you are able to help so simply a thing as thrifty . . .

COURAGE LEVELS CASTE

It has been said that Nazi bombing of London has brought to Britain a practical social democracy the country has never known before. Lords and ladies, it is declared, are sleeping in servants' quarters; they are playing bridge in cellars with mothers and maids; and they are sitting almost in each others' laps in trains. People from the East End have moved into mansions further west, and in all hands social barriers, especially those of wealth, have been broken down.

This is true. But it is somewhat of an exaggeration to suppose these things are a new phenomenon in British history. The diarist Pepys, for example, frequently sat down for an evening's music with his wife and servants, nor was there considered anything socially odd in this.

It is a mistake to imagine that the past of Britain is wholly aristocratic. The roots of democracy go deep and its growth is correspondingly lusty.

VOLUME XXX — Thursday, January 23, 1941 — SUPPLEMENT

By
Dr. K. W. Hunter
Director Agricultural Department

SOIL EROSION

The Agricultural Department of The North-West Line Elevators Association has just published a well-illustrated bulletin dealing with the subject of water erosion of soils. Its purpose is to draw attention to a problem which has, to a large extent, been overlooked by the general public. It has been easy to arouse public interest in the problem of soil drifting and control practices have met with a large measure of success. Water erosion may be quite as damaging as soil drifting on individual farms but, since the injury to the soil is often less obvious, it is apt to be neglected.

This bulletin is well illustrated and written in popular style. It deals in a concise way with the causes of erosion, with the losses suffered, and with control measures. It contains many excellent illustrations of fields in the Prairie Provinces which are suffering serious damage. In addition, there are four pictures generously supplied by the United States Soil Conservation Service.

As this is the only publication of its kind in Canada, it should be read by every prairie farmer. All Junior Club members and high school students should secure copies, since "they shall inherit the earth," every inch of it as is not washed or blown away!

Copies may be obtained from the representative grain buyer of any line elevator company associated with the work of this Department, or by application to the Agricultural Department, The North-West Line Elevators Association, Winnipeg.

We wish all our readers a Happy and Prosperous New Year, and trust that it may bring "peace in our time."

Alix Wins Own Tournament

Before a large crowd of spectators, the 1941 edition of the Alix Intermediates, who by the way are known this year as the Panthers' (short for C.A.D.P.), underwent a fast and systematic attack, which at the end of the third period saw the Panthers' leading their rivals by a score of 7-5. As many fans remarked after the game which was played last Saturday night Jan. 18, if that is the kind of hockey the Panthers' are going to give us this year you can count on me being there. Scores as follows:

Panthers'—Don Walper, 1; Bob Walper, 1; A. Stolie, 1; Ken Smith, 1; Jack Pears, 1; Harold Patrick assisted in four of the above goals. Other goals were for the Panthers' were: Wilson Cundal, 1; R. Olding, 1. Referee, Pop Walper.

A return game was played at Barrhead on Jan. 19, the Panthers' again winning by a 7-5 score. Goal scorers for Panthers' as follows: Jack Pears (subs) 1; Wilson Cundal, 3 goals, 2 of which were on assists from Bob Walper and Don Walper; Harold Patrick 1, on assist from A. Stolie; Don Walper, 1, on assist from Jack Pears; Ken Smith, 1, on assist from H. Patrick. Pop Walper again refereed. By the way Pop is now high with both the visiting teams and the local boys in regards his refereeing, which goes a long way in keeping harmony on the ice. Harold Hansen, the Panthers' manager, is showing the boys a few hockey tricks he picked up from the Lethbridge Maple Leaf Seniors.

RIPLEY

The Ripley Community Club met at the home of Mrs W. Giampaola, on Jan. 15th, for the annual meeting and election of officers. The following are the executive for the coming year; Pres., Mrs Olson; Vice Pres., Mrs Wheeler; Sec. Treasurer, Mrs Dye.

We are sorry to say Mrs B. Hillebrant is under the doctors care. We wish for her speedy recovery.

Edgar Hibert, of the Youth Training School, Calgary, was a week end visitor.

The Social Credit group met at the home of Mrs L. Barrett. A number of important resolutions were drafted and forwarded to the Provincial and Federal Governments. The next meeting 1st Tuesday in February will be held at Mr and Mrs Wheeler's. Everyone interested welcome.

Library Report

The Alix Public Library has just ended another very successful year according to the report submitted by Mrs R. Cullen at the last meeting of the U F W A. The number of members for the year was sixty four, and the number of books circulated was large in comparison, totalling eighteen hundred and sixty-seven. Seventy-four new books were bought and put into circulation during the year.

The thanks of those interested in the library is due to a number of people who made generous donations of books, namely, Mrs Peacock, Mr Patterson, Mrs Wolferstan, O. Siddons, Mrs Pederson and Mrs Hollings. A considerable number were also donated by the Dept of Extension.

Mrs Allen has continued to carry on in the same efficient manner, and has given unstintingly of her time and effort. She has been ably assisted by U. G. Marryat, Peter Marryat and Mrs Palmer.

The library is off to a good start in 1941. Thirty new and very interesting books have just been placed on the shelves. Amongst these are Philip Gibbs latest book "The Hope of the Others" and "Escape" by Ethel Vance. "The Hope of the Others" gives a picture of France before and during the collapse and brings in the Dunkirk episode. All the book worms of the community are invited to join the library and enjoy good reading.

Mrs. G. E. Lemcke and family have moved into the house formerly occupied by Art Lisack who moved into his new residence.

Miss Phyllis Richards spent last week visiting in Edmonton at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. [illegible].

A Dramatic Festival is being organized again this year to be held early in March. Will any group in Alix or district that feel they would like to enter a one act play, please notify Mr U. G. Marryat. A number of plays have been already promised from outside points. The proceeds will be given to the Red Cross. Please endeavor to have your entries in as soon as [illegible].

Weed Identification

A booklet containing coloured pictures of twenty-six noxious weeds has just been released by the Agricultural Department of The North-West Line Elevators Association. Your local line grain buyer can obtain a copy for you or you may write to the Association at Winnipeg.

Germination Tests

At the annual meetings of the Manitoba Agronomists, the Field Disease Committee reported that there is a tendency for wheat samples submitted in Manitoba to germinate poorly. (The same may be true in parts of Saskatchewan and Alberta.) It was recommended that farmers should increase the rate of seeding next spring. There should be no better evidence of the wisdom of having germination tests made. Any grain buyer of a line elevator company associated with this Agricultural Department will be glad to send your seed samples to be sent for testing. Please do not delay, as our laboratory is likely to be taxed to capacity.

Bushels to a Bin

Right weeks ago we described a method for calculating the number of bushels in bins of grain. We stated that in order to convert cubic feet to measured bushels it was only necessary to multiply by 0.8. The correct factor is actually 0.78. We rounded off the figure deliberately, partly to simplify calculation and partly because in wooden bins the bulging of the walls due to pressure of the grain will largely cancel the error involved in using the factor 0.8. In round metal bins, or wooden bins so well braced and tied that bulging is very slight, the factor 0.78 should be used.

Soil Erosion

Have you obtained your copy of "Water Erosion of Soils in the Prairie Provinces"? This may be obtained from your Line Elevator Agent.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Life" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. One of the Scriptural citations is "And Jesus said unto the centurion, Go thy way; and as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee. And his servant was healed in the selfsame hour", (Mat. 8:13). One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" is "We all must learn that Life is God. Ask yourself: Am I living the life that approaches the supreme good? Am I demonstrating the healing power of Truth and Love? If so, then the way will grow brighter unto the perfect day. Your fruits will prove what the understanding of God brings to man."

A Matter Of Survival

Napoleon is quoted as having said on one occasion that an army marches on its stomach which, being interpreted in simple terms, means that an army that is well fed is able to go places and do things. Consequently the army that is not well fed or fitly to be defended assumes of lack of stamina and vigor.

The truth of Napoleon's dictum is so universally recognized to-day that no country needs forth its uniformed men to battle without taking extraordinary measures to see that at all times the troops have ample supplies of well-cooked nourishing food. At no time in history have armies been so well fed as they are during the present war. The governments and the high commanders of the combatting nations in the conflict now under way realize fully the effect of good nourishing food not only upon the physical health of their fighting forces but upon their morale as well.

While the health and vigor of the troops is thus taken care of the importance of keeping up and maintaining at the highest standard the health of the common population of the nation at war is apt to be regarded erroneously as a matter of secondary consideration.

In this age and generation it is accepted as axiomatic that, whether in uniform or out, the entire nation must bend all its energies to a common prosecution of the war which means that the workers in the factory, the yard and the mine, turning out munitions, tanks, ships, planes, metals and all the ingredients requisite to mechanized warfare, the farmer on the land providing foodstuffs to feed the combatants and civilian populations and the men of those danger-ing times and other essential occupations must be able to work at maximum efficiency.

The ability to work at maximum efficiency is dependent not alone upon well proven medical attention, but these forms must be supplemented by sound rational health, by physical well being. The health of the people at home who are furnishing the efforts of the forces on the fighting front must be safeguarded not only that valuable hours and days be not lost through sickness or bad health effort, but that supreme effort can be maintained at all times and the full productive capacity of the nation at war be developed when an unimpeded flow of maximum quantities of supplies of all kinds is vital to speedy success.

Ample But Restricted

In this country there can be no complaint of a lack of ample food. There is sufficient in bulk of some commodities to supply the needs of all the Canadian armed forces the British armed forces and those of the United States and possibly the Reserved stocks of some commodities would suffer seriously to that fact. There is a question, however, whether the contentment of the food to consume the proper balance of nutritive elements essential to maximum health and therefore maximum production.

A survey of the United States department of agriculture in 1935-37 revealed that one half the population was living on a poor diet. 35 per cent on a fair diet and only 15 per cent on a good diet and by good diet is meant one containing all the essentials to maximum health. Since the Canadian dietary is very similar to that in the U.S.A. it is not probable that a similar survey in this country would yield comparable results."

The cause of the prevalence of diet deficiency is largely attributable to poverty for the survey showed that people who were spending as much as $30 per month for food were placed in the poor diet class.

According to Dr Henry Borsook, professor of biochemistry at the Calif-ornia Institute of Technology at Pasadena, the situation is attributable to the general use of food stuffs which have lost much of their original vitamin content and minerals during highly refined processing to mills and factories if that is so, and Dr Borsook has plenty of support for his statement among scientific nutritional authorities, these elements so highly necessary to health must be restored and made available to all the people, and apparently it can be done at very little cost.

That Great Britain realizes the importance of providing the people with essential health giving minerals and vitamins in the interest of maximum consumption is evidenced by the new legislation requiring that vitamin B1 and calcium be added to all flour used in the manufactures of bread. This measure is regarded by Dr Borsook as an "historic event in public health."

At The Source

The same authority declared in a recent news despatch that "the cheapest, easiest and most effective way of improving the nutritive condition in to add vitamins and minerals to such simple foods as flour consument, sugar and to some bottled and canned goods at the source. These must be added in measured amounts, under government supervision and subject to government inspection."

Some remarkable results in the treatment of diseases due to deficient nutrition, by the use of pure chemicals are reported in the Reader's Digest by Paul de Kruif an eminent bacteriologist He visualizes the time is near at hand when it will be possible to make available to everybody the vitamin superpharmacy that can be added to a cheap diet of sufficient calories "Two ounces of it per day spread on a piece of bread will cost one more than twenty cents a pound That is less than ten dollars a year for an abundance of the chemicals essential to human nutrition."

In case of poore health is vitally important. In wartime it is of still greater importance In war health spells survival

TWO WAYS TO PAY YOUR INCOME TAX

THE HARD WAY—

Forget about your sharply-increased wartime income tax until it becomes due on April 30, 1941. Then no doubt, you will be ruefully shocked by the size of the amount you will have to pay

THE EASY WAY—

Plan now to take advantage of the government's offer to accept monthly instalments, without interest charges. The offer is explained in a pamphlet, which shows you how to work out the burden of your income tax by spreading it over an extended period, permitting gradual adjustment of your spending and saving programs. By doing this you not only simplify your own tax problem but you also help Canada's war effort by respectfully collection of governmental revenue.

Scientific Instruments

British Gains Supremacy In Making Them

A triumph over their German rivals is announced by Bertram's scientific instrument makers.

Before the war Canada availed the British to engage in the manufacture of the assorted required by the Dominion's Geographical Survey Department. They asked for an accuracy of 1/60 inches of mercury The Germans said it was impossible They failed refused to try Britain decided to tackle the job. The supply was dry as dust. Experts were put in on it and now the makers are making the instruments they have come to times better than they were asked to do. They have achieved that for an accuracy of 1/60 they had 0/02 or 1-10th of the error allowed by the specification.

"We beat heavily on it," said a member of the firm, "but the results are worth it. We have a speed boat

Today Britain's supremacy in making scientific instruments is shown by the world demand for them. Among the customers everywhere are Argentina, Australia Canada, Peru, Chile and Egypt.

When bombers are swung aboard ship at Montreal, their dashboard instruments, compasses, air pressure indicators, boost gauges, fuel press gauges, oil pump gauges, altimeters, thermometers and the rest are all made in Britain.

The latest figures are eloquent of Britain s new supremacy.

Before the war she was exporting about one third the quantity of scientific instruments used by the German reich During the first nine months of the present year she sent overseas more than 600 tons worth in total. The record of almost 1000 tons over the first nine months of 1939

Saving Aluminum

WPB Conserve Sufficient For Annual Production Of Planes

Through co-operation of manufacturers with G. C. Bateman, metals controller, it is hoped to conserve enough aluminum in Canada for the annual production of 2,000 aeroplanes on official and.

It has not been necessary to issue a ban on non-essential use of aluminum since a voluntary agreement was reached with fuel manufacturing companies to employ a substitute and it is to this particular cutting down on use of aluminum that the greatest saving is expected, the official said.

Some time ago Mr Bateman called in representatives of fuel companies and told them all available aluminum was needed for war purposes. They were asked to take the matter up with their customers and it was agreed a substitute would be used.

It is understood the conservation plan is well underway and instead of aluminum foil some manufacturers have decided to use waxed paper.

Pontiers Win Two More Games

Described by many hockey fans as the best game they have ever seen played on Alix for many years the Alix Pontiers defeated Delburne by the score of 8-2. The score, which on paper looks a little one-sided does not by any means indicate the play between the two teams, which was very close indeed. Delburne has a fast nicely balanced team this year. But the Pontiers' deserve their win, they showed plenty of good defensive work combined with two fast and tricky forward lines, and these two for going factors coupled with good goal keeping spelt defeat for the Delburne team.

On Monday night, Jan 27, the Pontiers played a return game with Delburne, again winning by a score of 8-5. And with ideal weather, and fast ice, the large crowd on hand were treated to a swell exhibition of hockey. The Pontiers were greatly surprised and pleased when they took the ice, to ... that a large crowd of Alix fans, who came to Delburn to see the game, were gave the Pontiers lots of vocal support. Goals for Alix were scored as follows: A Steele, assists from E. Smith and H. Patrick; W. Cundal, assists Bob Walper; A. Brein from H. Patrick and K. Smith; A. Stelle assist H. Patrick; W. Cundal assist Walper; W. Cundal assist Bob Walper; Jack Pears sale; Bob Walper assist D. Walper. Referee Pop Walper and J. Dixon.

The Pontiers' wish to thank all those who have given donations towards the purchase of new hockey outfits. A full list of those who donated will appear in next weeks paper. Any tickets fans in and around Alix should not forget the game in Alix this coming Saturday night, Basham vs Pontiers

"THE TASK WILL BE GREATER IN 1941 THAN IT HAS BEEN IN 1940

...it is going to demand more effort, more sacrifice and far more change in our daily lives..." RT. HON. W. L. MACKENZIE KING

NEW YEAR'S EVE, 1940

ALREADY the pattern and pace of life in Canada have undergone a profound change. Gaps in employment are rapidly filling up. Some 350,000 Canadians who were unemployed before the outbreak of war are now employed. Another 200,000 are with our armed forces. Factories, which until recently were turning out goods for civilian consumption, have been transformed into humming arsenals, pouring out instruments of war. Night and day shifts have become the rule rather than the exception. But the peak of effort is not yet in sight.

In 1941 still more factories will switch to war production . . . new plants will be established, thousands more will be employed. This rising tide of activity must continue until we reach the flood of effort when every Canadian will be employed and working to his utmost, every possible square inch of plant will be utilized, every wheel will be whirring in the race we are waging against time and the enemy.

More men are working . . . working longer hours . . . making more munitions . . . earning more money . . . producing more goods . . . putting more money into circulation. Most Canadians are sharing in this increased national wealth — have extra dollars in their pockets.

The effort the Prime Minister calls for is gaining momentum, but many Canadians, as individuals, have not yet felt the real pinch of sacrifice.

Canadians of all classes are sharing tax burdens, but it must be admitted that up to date the larger part of the money needed for Canada's war effort has come from business firms and individuals with large incomes. They are paying high taxes. They have already invested heavily in War Loan Bonds.

This is not enough. The plain truth is that Canada's rapidly expanding production for war purposes will require increasing sums of money. That is why the Prime Minister warned Canadians in his New Year's broadcast that the year ahead demands more effort and more sacrifice.

Every man, woman and child is asked to lend. Every dollar you lend will help to put another man in a job . . . making more munitions. Every dollar you lend may save a soldier's life . . . help to shorten the war. Small wage earners must carry their share of the burden, too.

No one need go without necessities, but you are urged to forego the purchase of unnecessary articles . . . however small the cost . . . no matter how well you are able to pay for them . . . which take labour and material away from the great task of providing goods needed to win the war.

This is your war. Everything you have . . . everything you believe in . . . is now at stake. This is a message to you . . . a challenge to every Canadian . . . a call to the colours . . . a call for volunteers.

Be sure to make provision to pay your Income Tax—payment is made easier by the new instalment plan. But be prepared to do more — budget your earnings to make sure that you will have money available to buy War Savings Certificates and to subscribe for War Loan Bonds. You will help Canada — you will help yourself.

Air Raid Horn Heard in Montreal

MONTREAL citizens were warned last weekend that the time has come for them "to prepare an air raid shelter" in every home, by Assistant Director Charles Barnes of the Montreal Police Department and organizer of the "I.P.C." Civilian Protection Committee (15,000 strong).

Above, Director Barnes, and William Fair of the Northern Electric Special Products Division, on the roof of the Company's building, test the Duplome Horn, twenty five of which spaced a mile and three-quarters apart on roofs that have been selected, would adequately cover the metropolis. These horns can be heard over an area of four square miles, but to overcome normal sounds within offices, stores, factories, homes and public conveyances, etc., cites laid that distance apart have been chosen as a result of many tests.

These horns being operated by compressed air, a reserve supply is available to offset danger of power failure.

Soil Mining

At the Annual Conference of the Manitoba Agronomists an interesting and challenging paper was presented by M. J. Tinline and H. J. Stevens. Its title is "Changes and Readjustments in Manitoba Cropping Practices," but it has equal significance for residents of Saskatchewan and Alberta. The following is an abstract of the authors' introductory statements:

In view of the present wheat problem, this is an opportune time to encourage sowing down grasses and legumes.

Manitoba farmers have been grain mining their soil for too long. Older countries have had to maintain a high percentage of their land in grasses and legumes in order to produce and maintain a crop of grain. Many soils, particularly Argenta clays, have been robbed of their humus and will no [illegible] Serious drifting over much of the province, short crops and poor quality of the [illegible] may have any considerable or more severe troubles yet to come.

More underfoot the question.

It is an interesting fact that, until quite recently, lectures and articles on crop rotations were considered to be of academic interest only. We believed that our prairie province soils were so abundantly fertile that they would never wear out. Now, we know better.

Kinsey, of the University of Chicago, in an address before a joint meeting of the American Society of Agronomy and the Soil Science Society of America, on December 5, stated that most of the publicity was "just plain bunk."

Booklet on Weeds

A booklet entitled "Illustrations of Important Weeds in Natural Colours" has been issued by the Agricultural Department of the North West Line Elevators Association. This booklet is issued free of charge to any farmer desiring a copy. Copy may be obtained through any local line elevator agent.

The object of the booklet is to assist farmers in identifying weeds common to the prairie provinces. After identifying the weed, should the farmer desire any information as to the best means of controlling and eradicating the weed this may be obtained by writing to the Agriculture Department of The North-West Line Elevators Association.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Love" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. The Golden Text is Jeremiah 31:3. One of the Scriptural citations is "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage" (Galatians 5:1). One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "Christian Science commands men to master the proposition,—to hold hatred in abeyance with kindness, to conquer lust with chastity, revenge with charity, and to overcome deceit with honesty. Choke these errors in their early stages, if you would not cherish an army of conspirators against health, happiness, and success" (p. 455).

From a Scout

A Salute! Lord Baden-Powell
From each Guide, Cub and Scout,
May the name we love and cherish,
Ne'er be hauled out.
From the pages of our history,
May our movement strong and true,
Forever be the mementoe,
We dedicate to you.

Be a credit to your name
And again, the honor to uphold,
Your gallantry and fame.
We salute you! Keep in touch
With us from where you've gone.
That we may always do our bit
And reap what you have sown.

Canadian War Economy

As the war progresses, the importance of the economic phase of Canada's contribution to the fight to defend Democracy and preserve individual freedom and liberty becomes increasingly apparent and insistent.

With this thought in mind it is obvious that every consumer in this country and that means everybody, as all are consumers, should give careful consideration to the ultimate objective of every dollar that he spends or saves, and utilize it in such a manner that it will play a maximum part in this effort.

A percentage of all income is devoted to the acquisition of necessities and luxuries and the payment of taxes. The balance or surplus is invested or saved. Before leaving the individual to-day see What percentage of my income should I spend and how should it be spent that it may assist my country's war effort to the greatest possible extent? and how can I best utilize the surplus, ordinarily referred to as savings with the same objective in view?

Since the circumstances and needs of every individual vary, no hard and fast rules can be laid down, but if the underlying principles of war economy are studied and understood, each individual will have no great difficulty in determining the course that should be followed and the extent to which it can be adopted to comply best with his own needs and at the same time contribute as much as possible to the country's prosecution of the war.

* * * *

The Greatest Consideration

In the matter of the money that is actually expended for the acquisition of goods and personal services, the individual who is anxious to make the greatest contribution to the war effort will confine his spending dollars as far as possible to commodities produced and processed or manufactured first in Canada and secondly in Great Britain or in other parts of the Empire, and will reduce his expenditures on luxuries to an absolute minimum, and especially on luxuries imported from potential enemy and neutral countries.

It must not be overlooked that the dollar spent by the Canadian in the purchase of goods manufactured in Canada contributes towards the war effort, directly or indirectly in two or three ways. It increases the national income thereby promoting industrial growth. It assists in maintaining employment providing dollars for war purposes which would otherwise have to be spent for relief purposes. Where the manufacturers are located in Canada the Canadian natural resources or primary products, it increases the tax paying ability of the country's primary producers. By building up permanent industry it increases the post war tax paying ability which is necessary if our debts are to be liquidated. Dollars thus expended have a future potential as well as present day power.

Money expended on necessities in Great Britain or other parts of the Empire, not only contributes directly towards the war effort but indirectly through savings on foreign exchange which would be accumulated by the purchase of similar commodities in neutral countries. A homely illustration is a decision to purchase tea produced and processed in the Empire instead of coffee from Brazil, or to buy Canadian apples instead of California oranges.

* * * *

The Second Dollar

Having applied these principles to the purchase of the necessities of life and replaced expenditures on "luxuries, the individual is faced with the question of how to utilize the surplus dollars to aid the war machinery to the best advantage not having overlooked the fact that the power of money expended on luxuries, the more there will be for the purpose the country's dollar and imperative objective.

Here again, the individual's particular needs and specific circumstances, will dictate the amount that can be made available to his country's war effort, either as a loan to the government or as a donation, but the primary dollar that can be utilized for the prosecution of the war through one or other of these channels will make the Canadian effort that much stronger, effective and will speed the day when victory and peace descends upon the nations.

Canada is now being allowed to Canadians to use the second dollar for investment in future security, liberty and peace - dividends beyond price and of incalculable value. The war savings certificates and the Victory Loan Bonds, available to invest in these bonds at low rate, and almost any serious consumer gives an opportunity to invest in the other necessary financial instruments. There are few who cannot contribute more than they have been doing. Let it not be thought that because there may be little more than this dollar it will be worth while.

Every ounce of strength it may have to be the "widow's mite," it must be remembered that, "many a mickle among a muckle" and that it is the sum total of small savings that will decide the strength of Canada's war effort and, perhaps decide the future destiny of this great country and her great people.

Stopping Her Mouth

At Kansas City, Mo., the fancy dancer of the night clubs became annoyed with her visitor, her police manager. In a standard type row she set to work in it. "That's my business you're trying to," replied the receiving police manager. "Then you'll stop my business pronto," the dancer retorted.

Born For Children

Toy Library Scheme Is Spreading In United States Cities

A little girl clutches her doll and crudely suggests papers

Mistress Sally Ann Jones has agreed to give her adopted child, Baby Ellen Louise, excellent care in the paper cradle. It's signed and sealed with very official seals. And Sally Ann takes home the doll she has had for a week on "probation." It's sure now "for keeps." She has proved she will be a good mother.

A growing number of cities are making it "Christmas all the year." The program does double duty in many libraries, and means creative work for aged or physically handicapped and crippled as part of a relief project. Toy centres permit any youngster with a library card signed by his parents to choose a toy from a huge varied stock. He may keep it one week, with a number of days, then must return it for inspection. If he has treated it well he may renew it or choose another.

The dolls are the only exception. Little girls may adopt them after the probationary period.

A Cackling Goose

Wild Goose Makes Friends With a Flock Of Sheep

From Quebec comes a story of a cackling goose which made friends with a flock of sheep. It was found in the woods by Mr. Alphonse Marcoux, a farmer, who, on his journeys, the goose recently slightly bends the sheep and elected to remain with them. It followed them about as they grazed on the hills. Mistress Sally Ann and the goose remained even when interested spectators approached to watch this unusual association at close range by the sheep which first become nervous of an unusual companion and began to move away. After the goose was left a short distance behind, it ran swiftly to rejoin the flock, alight again in the shelter of the flock.

The smallest of the Canada goose group, the cackling goose is about the size of a duck. It is found in the west in western Alaska and migrates along the coast to winter in Mexico. It breeds in California mainly in the Sacramento Valley

Performing Right Society

Many Canadians Compete For Scholarships And Cash Awards

During the last three months more than one hundred young Canadians representing every province in the Dominion have competed in the music shops and cash awards given by the Canadian Performing Right Society. H. T. Jamieson, president, said in announcing the decision to offer similar awards in the Dominion Drama-festival open to competitors under 16 years of age, has not yet run one of the major prizes.

He stated that the competition for 1941 will be divided into two classes, one for persons under 22 years of age and the other for persons over 22. The specifications for entry must be obtained from the office of the Society in the Royal Bank Building, Toronto.

During the past three years 16 awards have been made. Four in Britain Columbia, four in Alberta, four in Saskatchewan, two in Quebec, one in Manitoba and one in New Brunswick one in Nova Scotia and two in Prince Edward Island. Six of these awards provided for the establishment of bursaries in the Royal Conservatory of Music, Toronto, amounting to $3,180.00, as increases of $300.00.

Canada As Oil Producer

Stands Second In British Empire, And Turner Valley Produces 80 Per Cent.

Due to Turner Valley Canada now ranks second in the British empire as an oil producing country and fifth among the countries of the world, a survey of world oil yields of 1940 contained in the 2nd and last issue Journal, American oil publication, showed.

Despite the seizure of part of the Polish oil fields by Germany, that country produced in 1940 a total of 1,000,000 barrels of oil in 1940 fell short by more than half a million barrels of Canada's 1940 oil yield of 9,459,240 barrels of which 97 per cent was tapped and refined as part of a robust project. Two centres portal any competitor with a library card signed by his parents to choose a toy from a huge varied stock. Too Small For Nations

They Outlive Republic In Practically Every Instance

The Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph says in the year 1 a.m. of Italy the tiny Republic of San Marino, with its 38 square miles and its 15,000 souls is the oldest republic in which still the world.

Not quite all the world though. San Marino is technically at war with Germany. That is because it remained neutral in the World War of peace after the World War But Italy is at war with Great Britain and Mussolini has declared that San Marino is a "fascist republic," and remained even when interested spectators approached to watch this unusual association at close range by the sheep which first become nervous of an unusual companion and began to move away After the goose was left a short distance behind, it ran swiftly to rejoin the flock, alight again in the shelter of the flock.

Opinion Of British Publisher

Sir Evelyn Wrench Thinks War Will Last Until 1942

Sir Evelyn Wrench, publisher of the London Spectator, predicted the European war would end by Spring, 1942.

He told interviewers a result in German people, plus determination in democratic countries, would bring a close to the war

Lady Freeman, whose brother is Sir John Brown, Commander-in-Chief of Great Britain's home forces, differed with her husband in the war-ending date, predicting it would be over by this time next year.

Bathtub Ruling Their Process Of Treating Metal For Plating

An interesting explanation of the high percentage of defective metal is made by Albert F. Caldow, a Brooklyn engineer. In a New York exchange, he describes the extent to which the Government is entrusting certain metal alloys has improved the quality and strength of many products.

Parts of 50 British planes are manufactured by Dorman, Long and Company, Limited, of Middlesbrough, England.

The process in treating the special metal is attributed almost wholly to the services of Charles Sherlock, engineer, who has pioneered in developing the process which led to England when the Nazis seized their home land.

Mr. Sherlock escaped, by, he reports that British planes are superior to the Germans', they outsize. They have to cope with the larger Nazi motors. Hitler's lethality is trumping the Nazis under his—but I'm a large price.

Beaver Reserve

Million Plans To Set Aside Large Area For This Purpose

Plans for a 1,000,000-acre beaver reserve in northeastern Manitoba, extending to the shores of Hudson's Bay, are under consideration by the provincial government.

Stewart, in the fortnight, if by the Hague, God's and Shanahan's River, has made known any objection to the proposal.

Completion of the reserve, it is stated, has been agreed with Rev. T. Dorner, Dominion Secretary of the Indians.

Beaver tribes are in the district but there are no settlements, and with men in the territory.

The proposal is said to be a step in the direction of Canada's policy of conservation of wild life and natural resources.

CHAPTER I

The slim, red-haired girl came slowly down the long flight of stairs, one hand clinging to the dusty bannister, her feet lingering as though she were trying to walk a faraway tune through step. She determined to literally what shall it be "Smith" Jones" Brown?

She tried again. A passing truck caught her eyes she noted a name and number. Then Smith Jones and Nancy Ellis that sounds business like

"Okay Miss Ellis" He grinned and patted his hand

Nancy Ellis. The name sounded strange to the girl to strange as the life she was about to enter on. She had been educated and been going barely about after at school and summer dates and clothes and occasionally studies. rooming with Ida Bruton the daughter of a well-to-do banker who set beside her now They ostracized her completely but it would be all right now suddenly that she had left her stunned for days, but not too stunned to be aware of the disapproval in the cold stare of Robert Thorne's suicide, of the whispers behind her mother's fortune, and the loss of the Thorne fortune

Nancy girl, your girl she thought grimly A life of schools, sorority teas, country clubs, and now a prize-fighter wanted, given her by an indulgent widowed father Now he was gone, and she was alone that morning in a cheap rooming house. Well, she'd manage, she told herself.

With what appeared to be an air-ship Nancy descended the stairs. Stairs said. "I suppose you know its taken her first flying lesson today."

Nancy nodded. She knew it very well, too well in fact. "Where's my bed sheet her becoming a pilot?"

"Me? Oh, my opinion wouldn't count for anything. I'm just the proprietress. I do anything about who you it." A deep rumbling laugh followed. "Say, that's a real "Headstrong little miss!" There was a pride in his voice.

Nancy said nothing. Iris Bruton, self - sheltered friend and complete dependent, had been a headstrong instructor, and to-day she was accidentally burning to fly. Investigation of the matter revealed that the wide expanse of blue. Not as very much interested in flying as she had formerly to that same first lesson. Now, instead of adventure she was to be a passenger. Her good bye day is an office that she would be a passenger. The Bristow company had nothing to do with aviation, they owned even know what it was.

A Matter Of Speed

Old Man Was Very Cautious About Answering Question

A traveller was waiting along a country road when he came across an old man. Addressing him, he asked how long it would take him to get to the next village. But the man went on with his work, neither looking nor speaking to the traveller, so he went on his way

He had not gone far when he heard a call: "Hey, mister! Come back!"

The traveller returned, when the old man said: "It'll take you twenty minutes."

"Why did you not tell me then when I asked you?" said the traveller.

"How did I know how fast you were going to walk?" returned the old man. London Tit-Bits.

Log Bound By Air Elderby Tells What Plane Does

This log was bound by the Air Ministry News Service for a British Columbia paper, and reached the office of the United States of America. I am certain that your readers would learn of interest if Hitler had decided to invade and personally take stock of the resources available to the British Empire and America. In explaining the aeroplane's importance in production, I can tell you the joint efforts of the British speaking engineers will prove to be far superior to those of the enemy," said Sir F. Newton, managing director of Short's Ltd., of the annual meeting in Melbourne, Australia.

Night Coughing

Can Often Be Prevented This Interesting Vicks Way

If throat "tickle" irritation is the cause for the cough, it often causes night coughing — you cough all night long. But this new thorough treatment often relieves coughing all night long! Here's why: Each time you breathe, VAPORIZED medication is released right where needed. Each time you cough, it helps LOOSEN and EXPEL germ-laden mucus. Also, it helps PROTECT RAW AREAS OF INFLAMED THROAT TISSUES. Just spread a thick layer on chest, throat and back before bed. Cover with warm flannel cloth. Direction in each package. Follow directions carefully. Use as directed. Vicks VapoRub

The King And Queen Pleased Unknown Picture Taken at Winnipeg

They illustrate the keen interest at the time that they were being photographed, unknown by their subjects, of the photographer and commanded them.

Thereupon the editor of the Tribune had the pictures framed and presented them to the King and Queen, request that they be forwarded to the King and Queen.

Advancing The War Effort

While the prosecution of the war is properly and necessarily claiming the first attention of the people of Canada at the present time and almost to the exclusion of internal affairs, at the same time the proposals of the federal government to implement in legislation the recommendations of the Rowell-Sirois report in the immediate future is recognized as a matter of great import.

It is perceived, dimly perhaps, by a large section of the citizenship that these recommendations are designed in character to be fair, it is not too much to say that the move ranks with Confederation itself as one of the most important in the history of the country to date. If the principal objectives of the report are translated into legislation and made operative, it will not only have a very important bearing on the future destiny of the nation but will, as well, go a long way toward the elimination of the present inter-provincial and provincial-municipal friction, the avoidance of which is the chief

By H.G.L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan"

The Dominion Government will soon be considering its wheat policy for this coming crop. What should the Government do? My own personal opinion is that the Government should purchase the entire wheat crop whatever size it might be.

There will be a sale in Canada and abroad for about 240 million bushels, requiring a crop of 300 million, so the cost to the Government will only be for the excess, if any, over 300 million bushels.

Extra storage space, too, would be required only for the excess over a crop of 300 million bushels.

Should there be an excess it would, of course, add to the size of the present surplus but my own belief is that this would be a great blessing, for it is far better to have an abundance, even a super abundance of wheat in Wartime than to run the risk of a scarcity, for no one can foresee the future. We never know when a set of circumstances may have it again. Nobody knows how much wheat will be sunk or destroyed at sea.

And then there is a higher ground. The Allies who of necessity are imposing a blockade on Europe have, I for one believe, a moral responsibility to store up enough wheat to feed the blockaded people as soon as peace is made.

To Mother

Farewell Mother, I have left you,
Your dear face I'll see no more
For your boy will soon be buried
'Neath your happy heart will ache sore.

It was Hitler's wicked ruling,
That the nations should go to war.
But you bravely with deepest sorrow
Filled your happy heart with gloom.

It was not the mess-in's roaring
Nor the bullets deadly rage,
But was leaving you, dear mother,
That gave my heart its deepest pain.

In your loving way you taught me
To stand for freedom's cause unflinching
To stand for freedom's cause unflinching
To defend.

Yes, Mother, at all times do,
In the battle of the battle
I remained a deadly worker,
Here to be among the fallen.

Here to die upon the ground,
But your earnest prayers are answered
I have found my Saviour's Lam.
I am saved today, dear mother,
Saved through God's marvelous pardoning grace.

Still I long to see you, mother,
Hope your good-by tears soon more,
For your boy will soon be home
On a stronger and distant shore.

CORRESPONDENCE

To the President and Ladies of Mirror Red Cross Branch:

It is with the greatest of pleasure I write you, to show my appreciation of your kindness in sending me a Christmas parcel.

I had the occasion to share the good things in this parcel, with others in this billet, less fortunate then myself, and they also voiced their appreciation of the splendid work and the kindness, of your, and other Red Cross organizations in the Dominion. For this we say THANK YOU.

I would like to add, that the contains enclosed were in first class condition on arrival, and the cigarette a life saver to us all, as perhaps you are well aware of this fact, that the majority of parcels of cigarettes and tobacco, destined for the troops, were much on December 3rd, according to reports here.

So, as a prospective citizen of your fair community, I wish you and your organization every success.

Yours Sincerely,
Gnr. W. Brown.

SEEDTIME and HARVEST

By R. B. Cantley

Seed Grain

Grow Seed to Improve Your Crop

Some of the following reasons

1. To obtain purity
2. To adapt a new or different variety
3. To begin growing a new or different crop
4. Because crop was damaged by frost, sprouting or weeds

Whatever your reason seed it in advance of the time you will require it. Then, if unsure, secure testing results and if possible, seed it out.

To maintain purity, it is not necessary to buy a sufficient quantity of expensive seed to re-seed the entire farm. Start with a small area and take every precaution against the occurrence of volunteer plants of the same crop and against mechanical mixing. Suppose that a farmer annually has 150 acres in wheat. A seed plot of fifteen or twenty acres will usually provide seed enough for the next year. The plot selected should be summerfallow, and should be located at least fifteen or twenty rods, preferably further, from any other wheat. Exercise extreme care in cleaning the seed drill and binder.

If a new variety is to be introduced the same practice of seed plot should be followed. Even greater care should be taken to keep it pure. The old variety is supplanted. It is unwise to necessary to replace a variety annually in one year. A thirteen year old is done in two years, and it is then dropped.

If frost, sprouting, or some other injury necessitates seed for the entire farm, and remember do not consult the pedigree. If it has been pastured or scrubbed seed for all needs, then at least a few bushels of — a seed plot should be obtained.

We understand Mr. A. J. Anderson of the local C. A. D. P. Creamery has accepted a position with the Alberta Producers Co., Calgary, and will leave for that city shortly.

C. Karp, of Gunger Mine, had a very narrow escape when returning home, Saturday night, accompanied by Mrs. Karp and baby. A horse ran across the road, and it was either take the ditch or hit the horse, Carl took to the ditch. Although they received a shaking up, no one was injured.

Miss Winnie Wenger had the misfortune to have her ankle broke with a hockey puck, while skating on a lake close to her home. One of the boys raised the puck, hitting her on the ankle and shattering the bone.

The Alix Senior Hockey team played Stettler Saturday night defeating them by a score of 6-2. Played a return game at Stettler on Sunday, winning by 5-1, and on the way home played Bisbey Sunday evening winning by a score of 2-1. Good luck boys. Keep up the good work.

European methods are being adopted in Alberta by our flyers in training. They are dropping letters over Alix. Mervin Penny picked up a letter dropped by an Australian flyer, requesting the finder to acknowledge its receipt. The flyer is now on his way Bert, but when he returns, he told Mervin, he would try and knock the chimney off the house the next time he flew over Alix. Well, Mervin is in training himself and will be able to knock plus wings off the birdmen after he has had "their" turn.

HAYNES

A very large crowd attended the entertainment and social evening held in the Orange Hall on Friday night in aid of the Red Cross. The program consisted of a half hour play, several solos, musical selections, a monologue and community singing, with Rev. L. Thompson acting as chairman. Lunch was served by the ladies of the district following the program. During the evening a draw was made for a quilt, the selling of which netted $28.00. The holder of the lucky ticket was Mr. Chas. Bischoff. The door receipts amounted to over $40.00. These funds will be used to buy more supplies.

The Ladies Club are holding a Basket Social and program in the church, on Friday evening, Feb. 21st.

Richards, of High River, to Albert L. Bolster, of Bolster, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Dollster, farmers of Lamerton municipality living east of Alix and well-known old-timers. Confidence vs. Complacency

What is the attitude of the Canadian towards the war? Is it one of confidence or of complacency?

In view of the intensity of the struggle between the totalitarian powers and the democracies, the answer to the question is of grander importance than perhaps any other in the history of the nation. For upon the form and degree of the attitude outlined as one of the gigantic conflict now raging, and upon it certainly will depend the length of time that must elapse before the forces of freedom and liberty will prevail over those of barbarism.

One of the several definitions of the word "confidence" is some of the synonyms of which are "assurance of mind" or "a firm belief."

"Complacency," on the other hand, is defined as "satisfaction" or "gratification." It suggests a sense of something that is soothing and pleasing, as indicated in the suggestion French word "complaisance."

"Confidence and complacency alike convey a sense of assurance, but there is a vast difference between them. Confidence is no assurance born of knowledge of the truth, coupled with attitude and action based upon realities. Complacency is an assurance that is the offspring of ignorance; the outcome of wishful thinking the attitude of one who sticks his head in the sand and says "It can't happen to me," or "There is no danger because I can't see it" or perhaps "The fire is not dangerous, for he hasn't touched me yet."

* * * *

A Wide Difference

The confident nation, like the confident individual, is the one that recognizes danger when there is danger, that gives full weight to the danger without under estimating it, that gives full weight to its own ability to meet and overcome the menace without over estimating that ability, that takes every necessary steps, and all the necessary steps to repair any shortcomings, that faces all the facts squarely, that assumes all its responsibilities to the full measure, picks up its arms and goes out to conquer in the full knowledge that it must win, because the full extent of the part has been realized and everything humanly possible has been done, or is being done to meet it.

The complacent nation, like the complacent individual, is the one that refuses to recognize danger when it is present, the one that hopes the danger will pass it by, the one that does not realize its own strength, underestimates the part which threatens it because it is so comforting to do so, the one that will over estimate its ability and underestimate the ability of the other, the one that refuses to do the things necessary to be done, the one that begs to itself a fond and cherished delusion, the one that lives in a fool's paradise until it is too late.

The nation is composed of its individuals. As the individual thinks, so he will the nation. The attitude of the individual will determine the attitude of the nation. The actions of the individual will determine the actions of the nation. Every individual must recognize the truth of this enormous issue and shape his attitude and actions to the light of the knowledge.

If it is necessary for the nation to fight an all-out war to conquer, every individual in that nation must wage an all-out conflict, according to the measure of his ability and powers and to the limit of his circumstances. Otherwise, the nation's efforts are hampering to that extent and either defeat is inevitable or victory is protracted.

Canada is common with the other units of the Empire, has a right to be confident as to the outcome of this war, but Canadian confidence is tempered by the confidence of the individual and by the extent to which every individual is translating confidence into attitude and actions. The true meaning of the term "confidence" and all that it implies.

That means that the foe must not be under estimated. It is much safer and truer of wisdom to over estimate the enemy's courage, ability, resources and resourcefulness than to under rate them.

* * * *

Is Not Beaten

Because the strength and power of the nation is determined by the strength of the entities that comprise it, it is the duty of every individual to make a survey of himself, of his attitude towards the war and the contribution that he is making towards a speedy and victorious termination to this grim business. The thing in his power and according to his circumstances and ability to bring about that consummation of the Canadian effort.

If every individual every man and woman, every youth and maiden in the land will do that, and as a result of such mental survey, make up his mind to a definite course of attitude and action, very complacency will vanish and will yield to confidence and a warrantable confidence

"It will be a confidence founded upon sound principle and right attitude. It will be a confidence that will enable this country to go places. It will be a confidence that will assure a great victory at the earliest possible moment and which will be the means of hastening the day when the democratic nations can once again beat the sword into a plowshare and turn their attention to the profitable pursuits of gaining success in the knowledge that happiness and liberty have been restored to the world.

Complacency or confidence, which shall it be?

Repair Bomb Damage

Squads Of Skilled Men Work On Restoration Of London Homes

"First aid" repairs are being carried out in London to houses damaged by enemy bombs.

Supplementing efforts of local authorities, the temporary of works and buildings has mobile squads of skilled building trade operatives at work making "first aid" repairs so that people can get back to their own homes. Permanent repairs will be undertaken later.

A first contingent of 2,000 men has been released from military duty by the army authorities and these are engaged in the new work they are not under ordinary discipline and are not hired as civilians at the customary building trade wages and conditions. They will be returned to the army when no longer required.

The 2,000 are divided into 20 squads of 100 each. Every squad is a self contained unit, comprising all in all branches of the building trade, complete with transport and all the necessary tools, equipment and material. They tackle trues selected by the health ministry as the most urgent.

The work of London includes the repair of all its war damaged churches in addition to the ordinary work of the works ministry and if the ordinary work of the ministry is to be done more men are wanted.

We can keep them very busy in London," said Lord Reith, then a press on Hitler's bombers damage a building we are immediately set to work to make it fit for occupation.

"In 1940 men, all of them experienced building workers, have made a big impression on the fring of the scarred parts of London. There should be much to heal the wounds of some of London's borough."

Pre-fabricated Hospital Units Being Shipped To Britain

The pre-fabricated framework of 32 buildings will be shipped to Britain soon to be placed together into 16 hospital units, it was announced at the week-end in the northwestern part of England, the American Red Cross said.

The hospital, a joint project of the Red Cross and British Red Cross, usually is expected to be set up next month, will include a laboratory for the study of communicable diseases under war-time conditions, and its findings will be reported to the United States army, navy and public health services.

The Red Cross said the buildings would be constructed of fire-pin bonded board, insulated between two fireins resistant sheets.

Ventilation experts have designed a system to circulate fresh air into the rooms during the nightly "black-out" by blackouts.

Influenza Vaccine

Discovery Is Thought To Be Of Most Value In Epidemics

Accidental discovery of a new vaccine against influenza which may be of immediate value in epidemics was announced by Dr. Thomas Francis, jr., director of the epidemiological research laboratories of the University of Michigan, and Dr. E. H. Lennette of the Rockefeller Foundation, who discovered the vaccine in the course of research studies that it stimulates immunity to a second outbreak of the same type of organism.

The vaccine seems to encourage a natural immunity against several types of organisms

Dr. Francis said later, in continuing the "experiment, some of them are being given the vaccine to see if they have "massive doses" of three distinct strains of human influenza virus

"To the great surprise of the New York investigators, some of them unknown developed immunity to the disease," the journal said.

The physicians have concluded that under the influence of the distemper infection the human "flu" virus undergoes a change which has made it "less highly specific" (or less able to attack the one type of organism it usually does) "more broadly antigenic" (with more general ability to kill several types of organisms).

When tested on human volunteers these vaccines, by all instances produced a "definite increase" in this immunity to many powerful virus-killing ability.

72nd Annual Meeting Royal Bank Of Canada

Morris W Wilson, President and Managing Director, Calls For Drastic Economies by Public and Government to Permit Full Measure of War Effort — War Savings Campaign Most Important Feature Federal Financing

Sydney G. Dobson, General Manager, Reports Unprecedented Activity But Peak Not Yet Reached.

Some of the factors having a vital bearing on the critical period of the war were discussed by Morris W. Wilson, President and Managing Director of the Royal Bank of Canada at the annual meeting of the bank held in Montreal on January 21st. Mr. Wilson's address dealt with the financial aspects of the war and the part which Canada is playing in it. Extracts from his address follow:

"The war is now in its second year. It is a struggle of unprecedented magnitude in the part of the public and the extent to which it has been made necessary to mobilize the resources of nations. It should be noted, however, that the public are prepared to make a very considerable part of the increased wages and salaries which are now being paid to them, and there are three alternatives before us:

1. The Government must further increase taxation.
2. A system of forced savings must be adopted or
3. The inflationary upward spiral will steadily gain head way.

"We are sure that Federal Provincial and Municipal authorities will not shrink from their budgets and will continue to increase taxation to the utmost possible extent that can be collected, as they have done in war time

TAXATION

Mr. Wilson commented the opinion that a considerably larger proportion of the national income will be taken by taxation in the present year than in any other year. He said: "It seems quite clear that all the practical possibilities of increasing taxation income in increasing it a much greater degree than has been done in the past."

Due to present business activity Dominion and Municipalities have the benefit of considerable increased revenue from sales and income taxes, but this increasingly unequal distribution of the burden of taxation and defects in the methods of collection, as revealed by them in the past, have not only led to greatly increased Federal taxation, but to the present

While admitting that no perfect solution of the problem has been found and ever been devised, Mr Wilson expressed the view that the present corporation taxes are not designed to produce the maximum revenue. He turns or to spread the incidence of taxation fairly over the whole of the whole

"I advocate nothing that would tend to reduce total Federal corporation taxes, but I do think that the Excess Profits Tax is going to bring in much more revenue than during the period of the depression when profits were so greatly reduced as compared with those that have all appreciably returns to shareholders

"Another important item in the question of war taxes, I should like to say that I think the present income tax rates have been raised to the full extent that can economically desirable."

WAR SAVINGS

Mr Wilson considered the present war loan campaign the most important War Savings Certificates by far the most important Feature of Government finance

"This is not because of the sums involved. The great bulk of our war expenditures must be met by the taxation and by the current savings of the people. But I feel that if the campaign is successful it will have far more significance than savings by individuals in the lower income brackets are essential for the success of the campaign, but of great importance. Once definite shortages of labour, materials or capital appear, most appeal, personal savings by individuals will be more difficult. At this stage, only by curtailment in the production of consumers' goods can the production of war materials be increased. Such curtailment will appear, then in the forms in which individuals are responsible for a great deal more than half the total purchases of consumers' goods. The use of increased purchasing power would seem, instead of to be directed for ordinary needs being re-

CHAPTER III

The ringing of the cheap alarm clock at half-past 6 was like an unexpected blow. Nancy Conrad rubbed her eyes sleepily and wondered what in thunder it was. Someone was making a terrible racket ringing at its own accord and in the absence she opened her eyes and looked around her, trying to remember

[illegible]

Suddenly it remembered. The clock—she had bought it the night before at a pawnshop—cost her only $2.39, allowing herself an hour and a half before she must arrive at the office of Sir John Malvey Detective Agency Company.

With a sudden start she sprang out of bed and stood shivering in the cold morning air. It had been his self-imposed task to sleep late, and now she felt unbearably drowsy and tired. She felt as if she had scarcely been in bed at all. Then she remembered that she had stayed up all night long, painted her face, dressed and combed her hair

THE DOMINION HOUSING ACT

The Provincial Government is making an effort to have Alberta share in the Dominion Government Housing Act. Alberta is the only Province in the Dominion who cannot participate owing to its drastic laws on debt legislation and moratoriums. It seems that considerable pressure is being brought to bear on the Provincial Government in order that the people of this province may come under the Housing Act. It would appear a leading boom here and greatly benefit our business men who cater to the building trade. Mr. Low has suggested a new way agreement between the Dominion Government, the Provincial Government and the lending institutions. Under the proposed agreement the lending institutions would be given certain assurances that National Housing Act loans would be exempt from Alberta's debt legislation, present and future.

The lending companies are cool towards the Alberta's proposals and are offering quite a few objections. Alberta's attitude towards the Stevie Report is not helping him any in carrying out the proposed plan.

But something should be done to enable the people of this province to take advantage of the Dominion Housing Act. Albertans need the help offered under that Act, and it would cause a mighty revival of business, give employment to hundreds of people and to tradesmen. It does not seem right that we should be deprived of the benefits of this Act.

The Provincial Legislature opens in Edmonton today, Feb 9th.

In 1901 she was married to John Iverson and went to Illinois, U.S.A., or, from which place she came with Mr. Iverson's parents, in Alberta, in 1907, two years ago next March. She passed away on the 22nd inst. after a long illness.

Coming to Alberta conditions were not favorable to Calgary and in 1909 took up residence in Alix, Alberta, where she lived until four years ago when she went to Penolie.

She suffered her first stroke 6 years ago, from which she never fully recovered. Last July 28th she had another stroke, and from these third possibly could be done and about a month ago she was taken to Calgary for further medical treatment. On Sunday last she suffered a third and fatal stroke and passed away in the hospital at 8:30 p.m.

She is survived by her husband, three daughters, Mrs. Ray Hammond of Alix, Mrs. Ed. Wrenson, of Penolie, and Miss. Pearl Bullock, of Spokane, Wash., also two brothers, Henry and Thos. of Penolie, and one sister, Mrs. Goodfellow, Clonella and Algar of Alix.

Her lengthy illness she endured like a brave soldier, and she never complained. One could only admire the pluck in her life was her extreme humility and Christian resignation.

Until we reach the dawn departed, Safe when another shower sets sail, On the bosom of the boundless deep, Soon to meet and part no more.

When we leave this world of sorrow, When we leave this world of pain, We shall find our missing friend then, In our Father's mansion above.

Rev. Parker.

FALL IN! The line is forming. Close the ranks. Answer His Majesty's call. Every man, woman and child in Canada has a duty to perform. Some will fight. Yes, you have a job to do. It may demand sacrifice. You are called on to help furnish the munitions needed to win the war . . . guns and tanks for the army . . . planes for the air forces . . . ships for the navy and the merchant marine. Guns and tanks and planes and ships cost money. You are not asked to give—you are only asked to LEND your money. This is something you can do . . . something you must do.

There is only one place to get the money Canada needs to win this war—from the people of Canada. A large part will come from business firms and from large investors. They will pay high taxes and buy bonds of War Loans freely. But many money is needed . . . a great deal more. $10,000,000 a month—a thousand men, women and children who invest in the Government's Certificates.

Work hard. Save more. Save all you can and put your savings in Canada. BUY WAR SAVINGS CERTIFICATES. Budget to buy them regularly. Buy them every week . . . every month . . . as long as the war lasts. You will be forming a good habit, if you don't already have it . . . a habit that will benefit you when victory is won. You will be doing a real job in helping to win the war.

The Democratic Dollar

Democratic dollars are destined to defeat totalitarianism

There seems to be a disposition sometimes to undermine the important contribution the men behind the guns behind the gun, the men behind the guns in the aeroplane rustigat can and must make, firstly in the winning of this war, and secondly in the winning of it first. Reference is made to Germany's "Blitz" over civilian hill.

On the face of it the dollar bill appears to be a humble and almost insignificant instrument when compared against the gigantic forces which Hitler has launched for the destruction of our liberty our freedom, our right to live in our own life. But that is not so. The dollar bill is of the very essence of the powers of war.

Without the dollar bill the fighter plane, the bomber, the cruiser and the destroyer would be impossible to build. The anti-aircraft gun, the machine gun and the long range cannon would be impossible. Without the dollar bill the shells the bombs the torpedoes and other forms of munition to feed these requisite of defensive and offensive warfare could not be provided and the weapons would be as useless and ineffective as the mammoths without gumtion.

Hence the dollar bill becomes just as important and powerful role in the United war effort that it cannot be maintained. In fact the dollar bill, fortified by the self-sacrificing will of the people who have come going to decide the outcome of this fight and going to determine the length of time this conflict going to last. The date when many or all again be turned into the markets of peaceful pursuits as predicted by the present day use of the dollar bill.

If Hitler's ambition and determination to sway the destinies of this country and to order the lives of its people were realized, not only would the liberties and the way of life of the Dominion be gone, but Canadian property would be sequestered and the Canadian dollar would become the Nazi dollar. There can be no mistake about that. Whether this is to be accomplished without any or much bo-dap of the Canadian democratic dollar

* * * *

Into The Stream

Every dollar that can possibly be spared from its function of providing the barest necessities must be turned into the stream of the democratic war effort. Every spare dollar that at not than utilized in an indirect bid to the cause of Hitler and Mussolini.

It is because of this that the Canadian people, through their government, have decided that these dollars must be marshalled in a democratic way in the democratic job. It is realized that a single dollar by itself may not do very much but it is also recognized that a lot of single dollars gathered together constitute a mighty force and in the aggregate will decide the issue.

The marshalling of these dollars is one of Canada's principal contributions to the cause of freedom. At the moment perhaps it is the most important one. Because these dollars and their destination are in the hands of the people it constitutes an individual effort on a coordinated scale

Expansion just now is being given to the coordinated effort through the purchase of War Savings Stamps and War Savings Certificates a can page for which is at present being prosecuted across the Dominion. The campaign calls for a sustained effort not a moment,s,y burst of enthusiasm. It is the consistency of continued month by month, to whenever month another dollar can be flung into the fray

Unlike some forms of contributions to the war effort, the purchase of war savings stamps and certificates represents an investment, youth a direct benefit to the investor as well as a long range one to both the nation and the individual. It is not a war charity. It is money loaned to the government bringing a return to the lender and is a first-class investment. As Walter P. Keller national chairman of the special war savings campaign has said, those who subscribe to war saving certificates are not going to lose any money Instead, they are actually going to make money All that is being asked of them is that they save as much as they can during the while the war continues. This is, as Mr Keller has added, what a really prudent person should be doing in any event

* * * *

A Multiple Function

The economic value of war savings certificates to the nation is just as important as their pecuniary value to the individual. A large and continuing investment in war savings certificates is a vital part of Canadian war finance it should serve to regulate prices both now and after the war It should help to smooth out the wave of over-drama balance, preventing private spending from soaring to the sky as it did during the last years, and likewise check its descending slide in the post war years ahead.

It is true that during the past few years Western Canada has known difficult times but it is equally true that the people of the west have built a reputation for responding magnificently to emergency Up to the present they have not evinced splendid support to the war effort Time is still on hand time to do so by every means in their power until victory has crowned these efforts, can hardly be doubted

Gifts Of Civilization

Ordinary Things Not Appreciated Until They Are Taken Away

The following extract is from "With Love and Irony" by Lin Yutang

In the last analysis, we can not all the gadget thrown into the morning coffee, fresh air, a stroll in the afternoon, even dashing for the subway or killing friends among communists in the teeming trash, constitute a civilization because they constitute no moral end or meaning War makes us realize the simplest joys of living and additionally take for granted. CHAPTER IV

There was a small crowd of men and girls on the corner waiting for street cars. As soon as a car would appear, already crowded, there would be a sudden, terrifying rush for its doors, a dozen or more hardy souls would push the very rails in the platform or cling perilously to the steps, while the rest stepped back a little on the long ride on the running board to catch the next car that came along.

Nancy Thorne stood a little apart from the crowd. For all that she had spent a number of years in the office of the John Bristow Company, she still felt like an outsider. But that was not the reason she stood by herself now. She had decided to wait until the class Stephen Bristow usually took at the end of the car to be sure of an hour two hours.

A small crowd, badly in need of paint, stalled to a stop in front of her.

"May I offer you a ride, Miss Ellis?" a voice called.

Nancy glanced into the ramps and saw that the driver was Hugo Blake Hugo Frisco. He had opened the door as he spoke and she stepped in the gratefully, glad to escape the discomforts of the long ride on the street car.

"You look tired," he said sympathetically as he started the car "Let me put down the window—there you have odor off your hat. Is that better?"

Nancy leaned her head back and let the wind blow through her red-gold curls.

"Much better It's been frightfully warm to-day."

Indeed it has, Miss Ellis. Or should I call you Nancy? I was a man there in no one from the office to hear."

Please Nancy felt the color rising in her cheeks Tom never would have said that to you. I don't know what possessed him."

"I understand Hugo Blake said sympathetically "It is hard, becoming used to something so new." He laughed again and added, "I don't mean the new name but the new life."

It is hard." Nancy said impulsively "Terribly hard." Without warning and to her own horror she burst into tears

"Oh, now now, now!" Hugo Blake said sympathetically "If is hard, but it's not the first she had shed in that long week, but the others had been in the privacy of her dingy room.

"It's terribly sorry," she gasped at last. "I'm tired, I guess, and it has been hard—" Suddenly she thinks over telling Hugo Blake the story, the humiliation and boredom of the past few days, the embarrassment of the girls in the office, the constant coming of dunns and secrets and gossip. He had opened his coat and she leaned her head on his shoulder and cried. At last the rush of words ceased. His bright green silk tie was soaked at her eyes. pathetically through his dark glasses

"You feel better, now that you have talked to someone isn't it so?"

She nodded. He patted her shoulder and gave her a handful of trivial things. At last she felt recovered enough to glance at him curiously He was a heavy-set man, shorter than Tom. His round, smooth face looked rather dull, deceptively so, she guessed, because his bright blue eyes seemed clever, almost cunning. She glanced at his hands as they rested on the wheel, they were muscular, but with thick, short fingers.

"What do you do at the Bristow plant?" she asked suddenly.

"Me? Oh." He laughed. "I am in what you call the loading division. And I don't mind it now I was a month ago, but—"

"That isn't what I mean." Nancy said, feeling a little uncomfortable I mean she felt the color rising in her cheeks again, "you don't think him a saboteur, or a truck driver, or a—" her voice broke off suddenly

"Like an educated man? All right. I'll answer that when you give me an educated man. In fact—and this really is a compliment—I'm a writer."

"A writer" But—"

"That's why I'm working at John Bristow's. I'm getting material for a series of articles on American industrial methods, and I'm trying to really get it at the source Understand?"

"Yes I think so. I'm afraid, though, I'm not working for any such reason. I have to earn a living that's all."

"That's nothing to complain about, young lady. I'm glad that you can earn one Say—you type, of course, don't you?"

"Why?"

"I have an idea. I have any amount of material that has to be copied, and I'm a rotten typist. I've been looking for someone to do the work, I'd pay you well for it. You see, I—perhaps you could earn enough to pay for stockings and lipstick, at least. Have you any spare time?"

"Spare time! Lot's of it." Nancy hoped she were not blushing at the memories in her voice.

"Then that isn't a great deal to do—only to make accurate copies of material I will give you." Hugo Blake went on talking about the work he was doing as a writer His little car when Nancy climbed the dingy carpeted stairs to her room she was filled with a new enthusiasm. The amount she would be paid for copying material for Hugo Blake would not be much, but it

We Sunday Evening Number For Airmail Workers And Friends

Sunday as a day of rest has been put aside in Britain until the end of the war as far as aircraft workers and the men who fly the planes they make are concerned.

Only yesterday let us know what day it was—an employee of an aircraft constructional company told Hurricane pilots during a visit to a fighter aerodrome in the south east of England

If it weren't for pay day we would not have any idea of the day of the week Saturdays and Sundays are just as busy as any other day of the week

It's the same with us a squadron leader answered "One of our pilots had a few hours off, so he went into the nearest town to do some shopping He came back Wednesday

Most in early closing day' he said Then he looked at the calendar and discovered it was Sunday.

Some Hit, Sherlock!

Recently the Legislature opened at Edmonton. The Speech report, the Treasury Branches, the new barter plan will be up for discussion. The budget will probably include further large items for the continuance of the Treasury Branches which have proved so expensive already. It is perhaps too much to hope that the Premier will implement his oft-repeated desire to help the Federal government to get on with the war. If he really wishes to do this, he can take a great step forward by scrapping the whole Treasury Branch set-up, and the whole Social Credit Board, lock-stock and all. He can count on the unanimous support of the opposition group for this action and the wholehearted approval of many thousands of Alberta's Red Deer Advocate.

Poolers Win 3 More Games

Last Saturday night in what many fans claimed to be the best game played on Alix ice this season, the Poolers won over a strong team from Bluffton by the score of 6-2. The following day they drove the 70 miles down to Bluffton and again won by a score of 6-1. In this game after a scoreless first period Jack Pyatt scored 2 goals for the Poolers to put them in the lead, these were followed by 1 more. Asked by the Stanley Hockey Club for a game on the 9 o'clock the same night, the tired Poolers agreed and again won by a score of 5-3.

A truck load of loyal Alix fans travelled with the Poolers to help make boys with a little moral support.

Weather permitting Blackfalds will play the Poolers in Alix Thursday night (to-night). We must say that after 9 straight wins, Harold Hansen's Poolers all local boys, are doing pretty good this season.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Mind" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon to be read in all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. One of the Bible-based citations is "Then Jesus answered and said unto them, If ye were great to thy faith: by it unto thee even as thou will. And her daughter was made whole from that very hour" (Mat. 15:28). One of the corollary passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "Whatever is governed by God, is never for an instant deprived of the light and might of intelligence and Life."

Italians Electrify Wheat Seed

Washington, Jan. 28 — Italy claims to have evolved a new method of boosting wheat yields by giving seed a pre-planting electric shock, the Department of Agriculture reported yesterday.

The Department learned that treatment by a high tension electric current was used to stimulate the male reproductive cells of the seed, and Italian agriculture experts said this development might mean gains to each bend of wheat.

Soil Conservation

In an address at Calgary recently L. E. Thomson, Superintendent of the Dominion Experimental Station at Swift Current made some interesting observations and practical suggestions when speaking on the subject, "Soil Conservation in Relation to Reduced Wheat Acreage." His remarks had application to the prairie or plains area. He divided his subject into three parts

1. Good farm land.
2. Abandoned land adjoining good land.
3. Abandoned land and farm grazing units.

An increase in summerfallow is recommended for the good soil areas. He stated that the two year rotation of wheat and fallow will yield, with a lower production cost, almost as much wheat as the three year rotation. Other advantages gained would include an improved condition of land for crop in 1942, and less damage from insect pests. Mr Thomson suggested that on practically every farm soil drifting has its origin in small localized areas which start to drift. These areas should be seeded down to grass to prevent spreading of the problem. Mr Thomson recommends a vigorous policy of [illegible] areas which [illegible] land.

The problem of handling large areas of cultivated land in south-western Saskatchewan and south-eastern Alberta is to keep these lands out of cultivation and in a satisfactory condition for grazing.

The necessity of curtailing Canadian wheat production is open to debate. However if automatic reduction in wheat production as a result of extensive methods of farming is to be avoided, the points raised by Mr Thomson must receive early consideration.

A LOAD OF MISCHIEF.

German mines are rendered harmless by British Navy R.M.S. (Rendering Mine Safe) squads. They haul the mine up the beach dismantle it, and set fire to its explosive. Here a German mine is being hauled up by a squad, smilingly aided by a girl of the Women's Royal Naval Service.

"WE REMAIN, YOURS FAITHFULLY....."

German bombs have forced these London workers to leave their office. But Londoners are determined that nothing shall interfere with essential work, and they are seen carrying on business temporarily in the open air.

The Source Of Strength

What is behind the morale which is supporting the British people in their hour of trial? What is back of the substantial spirit which enables them to take the tremendous blows which they sustain when they are bombed out of homes and home and come up again lighting? What is it if it is not Christianity a belief in God?

The gallant people of Great Britain with their backs to the wall realize that they are fighting for the preservation not only of their right to govern themselves in the way they choose but also for the right to worship as they will, for the right to remain Christians the right to believe in God. They know that if they are conquered by Hitler and Nazism they will no longer have the right even to their religious beliefs or of access to the source of the comfort which sustains them under great difficulties and under unparalleled stress and strain.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation of London signed a year ago published an article by Dr Herman Rauschning former Nazi president of Danzig in which he quotes Hitler as making the following declarations at a tea party at which he was being wax present:

The religions are all alike no matter what they call themselves They have but one purpose namely room for the Germans. The Italians and the French are essentially heathens Their Christianity is only skin deep. But the Germans, no different. He is serious in everything he undertakes. He wants to be either a Christian or a heathen. He chooses to be both. A German church a Germans Christianity is distortion One is either a German or a Christian. You cannot be both. We don't want people who keep one eye on the life to the hereafter We need free men who live and know that God is in themselves."

Add a little earlier in the conversation, which occurred shortly after Hitler became Reich Chancellor Hitler is quoted as discussing the possibility of Pastors and Priests coming to terms with the Nazis. He said:

"That will not prevent me from tearing up Christianity root and branch, and annihilating it root and branch in Germany".

It was from that conversation, and threatening, dated his inner revolution against National Socialism. "For now I happen to understand its true nature and aims."

* * * *

Behind The Battle Lines

Hitler's subsequent actions have served but to confirm in dire manner the intentions to impose this doctrine, not only upon his own people but of the entire world.

Is it any wonder that the desperate free nations of the world who believe in God and cherish the right to worship him as they will, are fighting every sacrifice that can be conceived to prevent this monstrous concept being fastened upon them? "We don't want people who keep one eye on the life to the hereafter".

It is just this right "to keep one eye on the life to the hereafter" that is giving the people of Britain the courage and spiritual strength to stand the hard knocks they are receiving and that is fortifying them in an unyielding resolve never to give in.

Playing Their Part

In 250 cities and towns of bomb-wrecked Britain are displayed in the public shelters and in private homes of the people a placard, issued by the Lord Mayors of York, of Sheffield of Hull and of Nottingham, and endorsed by the Lord mayor of many of the cities and towns of the country including Bristol, one of those large centres which has been severely shattered.

Entitled "Your Share in Thy Your Part" that placard says in part:

"Forget yourself in helping your neighbors. In days of tension this counts out your own fears and worries. Help them to carry out all instructions about safety precautions, rationing and warfare.

"Keep the moral standards of the nation high Don't condemn the home front by trying to wangle easier thing for yourself and the more difficult to bear by others. Be a bright spirit all personal indulgence withdrawn and private wars, which undermine national morale and unity Everybody has his and her part to play in the moral re-arming of the nation.

"Be a rumor stopper Those who love their country as rules the history of being the cause to pass on the 'news' A rolling snowball ends up slight. Face the facts but don't exaggerate them. Prepare to meet them instead Faith, confidence and cheerfulness are as contagious as fear depression and grumbling

"The secret of steadfastness and inner strength is to listen to God and do what he says

"Prevent yourself by listening to God the first thing every morning This provides a clear plan for every day and the power to work with other people in common unity . . . No effort hasten tomorrow . . . Be active and instinctive

"A Britain greater who has fought through two wars says 'Wren may be cut and wondrous stations destroyed, but no bombardment can stop messages from God coming through. If we are willing to receive them. To listen to God and to obey Him is the highest national duty and privilege of everywhere."

Are we in Canada hearing the same sternly and war silent on the same foundation and are we relying on the same source of strength? It all depends upon the individual

Have Cheaper Coal!

Secretary Of Statistics Report Shows Big Increase Last Year

Volume of cheaper coal mined by shattered banks in 22 Canadian centres was $84,427,000,000 in 1940 compared with $81,617,000,000 in 1939, the Dominion bureau of statistics reported.

The report said "greater economic activity" reflected in the indices of employment and the physical volume of business was responsible for the increase

Globe Will Show Something When He Makes Invasion Attempt

Sir Walter Citrine, general secretary of the British Trades Union Congress, told Toronto workers at a union meeting that "if there was a body of vigorous men it was that contingent which came over under General Sikorski."

He said that with British defiance in their ground attitude "Hitler will never in all his life be more cordially welcomed than if he attempts to invade England."

"We were in great danger in June," Sir Walter said, "but the United States came to our aid. It can be told now. They sent us 500,000 rifles when we did not have one for every five men."

Want War Training

Women Of Bottrum Would Join The Army

Dr Edith Summerskill Member of Parliament for Fulham, England appealed to the authorities to allow women to join the Home Guard and to receive military training.

"Is it conceivable that if there were a landing on the coast of London, Liverpool and of Coventry would retire to their houses as the Germans came in, but the women would stay and defend their homes?" she asked in the House of Commons

"Would you disapprove of women using their household guns, if necessary to surrender the streets" And would you prefer to see the streets of men fall

Safety For Infants

A Special Warning Is Issued To Mothers By Dr. Venable, Doctor

A special warning to mothers is issued by Dr. Ant. Hugh, physician-in-charge of the child welfare clinic of the city health department. During the past year 11 infants died of accidental suffocation and there have been 10 deaths from this cause so far this year. Dr Hugh says. Most of these deaths could have been prevented if mothers had been aware of the danger.

Mothers, he said, should not sleep with their babies in the same bed, or the child was allergic to feathers, pillows and mattresses should not be used, as it was impossible to keep the child clean.

Modern Battles Different

Fought Over Vast Area They Can not Be Decided Quickly

In the light of the present war every thing or the range of military planes the there is nothing to call the war battle like the Battle of Britain which may go on for a year or two years mixed with occasional lulls such as in the older land warfare be lighted each with its own name but not now to the larger whole Battles are no longer really like baseball held on one ground on a box diamond and played to a quick decision They are fought over a vast theater through a period of months and at three dimensions. It is all confusing to those of us who are accustomed to getting along without an index in which names like Hastings and Waterloo and Gettysburg and Manila Bay are set down in convenient rows Detroit News.

Governments, Municipalities And Individuals Should Curtail Expenses

Speaking at the board's annual dinner he said that it was only just that Canadians enjoying the "tragic paradox" of wartime prosperity, should be content with a greater share of the cost of comfort.

"I trust that the greater our present payment be the better it will be for the generations to come," Mr. Berkinshaw said.

CERTIFIED SEED

Good seed is the first requirement for an excellent crop . . . because only good seed will grow vigorous and productive plants.

Canadian Certified Seed Potatoes are good seed potatoes. By planning them, higher-quality, cleaner, smoother, more uniform potatoes than those grown from ordinary seed stock will be produced.

So, this season, to harvest finer potatoes — and more of them, plant Canadian Certified Seed.

Be sure to select the variety most suitable for your locality. Ask the District Government Inspector, Plant Protection Division, for full information and list of nearest distributors.

World's Week

By HAROLD L. WEIR

Japan may be playing bogeyman in the Pacific at Germany's behest, hoping that the United States may get frightened enough to curtail her contemplated aid to Britain. But Australia, at any rate, is taking no chances.

Long suspicious of Japan's intentions, the southern Commonwealth has steadily prevented "peaceful penetration" for years by barring Orientals from her territory.

This week, Acting Prime Minister Arthur W. Fadden stated plainly that a Japanese attack on Australia was a "real danger" and that his country was taking prompt and extensive steps to repulse it.

Eventual spread of the war to the Pacific appears now to be a certainty. It is doubtful, at this moment, if Japan is eager to plunge into a conflict which will ruin her commercially and militarily. But she has been egged on to such gross pretences by her Axis partners that she is bound to commit some foolish act of intervention that will leave her no retreat from active and actual participation.

The Week in Edmonton

Declaring that unless if farmers' grain is to be kept in controlled storage for two or three years the growers' equity will be eaten up in charges, Hon. D. B. McMillan urged in the legislature of farmers subsidies, such as other industries enjoy. Stating that the Alberta government's plan for grain storage tickets had not been adopted, he said the federal authority had discriminated against the Western farmer.

Alberta's day of prayer for peace and victory was observed by members of all churches throughout the province Monday, March 3. Proclaimed by His Honor the Lieutenant Governor, on Thursday, February 27, the day of intercession was immediately endorsed by clerical heads. Prayers were offered "on behalf of the cause undertaken by the United Kingdom, by the Dominion of Canada and by the other Dominions of the British Commonwealth of Nations and other allied powers, and all those who are offering their lives for our cause and for a speedy, enduring peace founded upon justice, liberty, and truth and the sure foundation of our Christian way of life."

The Alberta-Alaska chain of air bases now under construction was planned by the permanent Canada-U. S. joint defence board, it is learned. Prime Minister King gave the Commons this information Tuesday. Points named are Grande Prairie, Fort St. John, Fort Nelson, Watson Lake, Whitehorse, Prince George, and Smithers. All fields will provide ground and navigation facilities needed, such as are to be found at existing airport suitable for major traffic.

The Turning Point?

The fact that Anglo-Saxon leadership, in both hemispheres is frequently reiterating the belief that the current year, 1941, will prove to be the turning point of the war should not lull the people of this country into the fond delusion that the worst is over and that it will not be long before British forces will be able to win a walk-over.

Such a view of affairs is always the possibility that some unknown and undiscovered factor may suddenly enter the picture and reverse the tide of victory to Nazi like a great land wave such a contingency should at present not be regarded as a pure gamble with any other element in it. On the contrary the more the more and the only sensible view to take is to encourage that there are plenty of hard knocks yet to come and that Britain at this stage seem to point to the likelihood that the toughest fights which the enemy may be capable of delivering have not yet been struck.

No matter how comforting it may be to assure the belief that the corner has been turned, it would be the part of wisdom to steel ourselves to the thought that there is a long, hard road to travel yet before the victory is won and the war is over. Not only is it the part of wisdom to accept this hypothesis as a truism, but it is the only safe view to take and having taken that view, to shape our course accordingly

And what does it mean to shape our course in accordance with this assumption, if it does not mean that we must redouble our efforts on all fronts, that we must multiply our sacrifices without counting the cost, that we must daily get our home for sustained and superhuman effort, that we must unstrateh to the fight all our resources, to the last man available to the last dollar in the purse, the last ounce of energy in productive effort in the factory and the field."

We Are Not Alone

There may be good ground for the opinion that 1941 will see the turning point of the war in favor of the British and the Allies, but it will not be unless every Canadian does his or her bit to help bring it on.

If any consolation is needed to temper the sacrifices that are now being made and the still greater sacrifices that are being called for in the near future before we have seen this thing through, it should be in the knowledge that the harder we pull on the oars the sooner will the finish line be reached.

If any further consolation is needed it may be found in the knowledge that we are not alone. Not only have we ranged on our side the enormous productive capacity of the factories, the mines and the shipyards of the great neighbor to the south, but in Europe and Africa millions of Nazi victims, at present on the sidelines, are eagerly yearning and anxiously awaiting the moment when they can, with some hope of success, pitch into the fray and help rend the foe which ground them into the dust.

When that moment comes, which will be after the tide has definitely turned, one may reasonably expect a rapidly increasing tempo in the upsurge of the revolting victims of Nazi cruelty and oppression. There are many evidences that help from that quarter will be forthcoming when the time is ripe, help which will play its part in smothering the end of Nazidom in Europe after the pattern of the rolling snowball.

Sailing Their Time

The temper of the people in some of the conquered countries, after the first shock and depression of their plight were all in evidenced in storms which have followed through to Canada via Great Britain.*

For instance we learn that at Brussels when Germans heard a train, all the other passengers got off. The raucous witch whose Germans were ready are empty. If a German asks a Belgian stranger for a light, it is offered, but the Belgian throws away his own cigarette

In Holland, the Germans-controlled Hilversum radio has had to complain that ministers of the church resist subsequent tests for their services in order to point up anti-Nazi moral. Prof. C. V. De Vries, of Rotterdam, has been sentenced to 18 months imprisonment and fined for introducing some remarks about the Dutch Royal House in a speech with the words: As I myself heard over the radio and as you will have heard

Germans are complaining that people in these two countries and in France are listening to British broadcasts, but the Germans apparently are not able to stop it.

Then, too, there are the peoples of ravaged Czecho-Slovakia and Poland. They are not going to forget the massacres, the tortures and the indignities they have sustained. Those who have survived are performing valorous deeds with the British forces. Those who were not so fortunate are hoping their time

No we are not alone. But until that turning time comes, let our backs bend, let our muscles ripple.

Western Operators And Mechanics Required In Canada And Britain
To fill an urgent need for radio mechanics and engineers for Britain and Canada, the Canadian Government Department of Transport announces that applications from men between the ages of 20 and 45 will be received for the duration of the war. Men who are now employed in essential industries will not be considered.
At the present time many experienced Non C. G. Power and radio operators are the saying need in Britain and Canada. Many Canadian Christmas Mail ministry has been the routing radio operators with the end of a big publicity campaign. All enthusiasts were assured such a transfer to Britain as qualified.
About two years ago Canada began taking on the training the efforts but the first is for several times that number. The exact number required has not been disclosed but here details been given of the nature of the work involved. A report that wireless men were needed at service staff for the new R.A.F defence against night bombers has not been confirmed.
Officials have been quietly combing the national registration records for men with radio training and it is believed that the radio adaptation of the lists of skilled categories to an important part of the task. The lists have been used to locate men with training required for special jobs in connection with the war effort. The registration was completed. But the call is not for a specific number of 5,000 or 6,000 citizens been sifted and segregated to permit wide selection. The call was for men with a knowledge of the fundamentals of the Post Office and Signal Corps.
The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation reported. About 500 men are expected to be released shortly, the BBC said. These released were women with children under 16, women over 60, men over 65 and women whose husbands were over 65, the BBC added.

History Of Silk

Was Used In China Before The Christian Era

It is said that the kings and nations of China, surrounding possessions swept back hitherto secrets of history, but Europe first knew that material when the overpowering explorers of Venice and Portugal brought these luxury fabrics to decorate their homes in the thirteenth century.

Silk always had its lure. A story is told that even the Greek philosopher, Aristotle, tutor to Alexander the Great, fell victim to the wiles of a little maid in waiting who fooled him about the court in a flimsy silken shirt.

Queen Elizabeth, in the year 1561, is reported to have received the first pair of silk stockings, crude and coarse affairs compared to the diaphanous leg-gear worn by the shop girl of to-day. Before this time, clothing was made of cotton, wool, or other expensive cloth, for the shortlived fad of silk hosiery, and little attention to their hose

It was a minister of the church, the Rev William Lee of an English village, who in 1589 invented the first machine to make knitted silk stockings, and all because he grew so tired of seeing his wife momentarily knitting the family stockings by hand. Done man! But neither her nor anyone else believed that that knitting machines could hold anything so fine as silk threads.

CHAPTER XI

It was a sleepless night for Nancy Thorne. She turned up miserably in the centre of the lumpy bed the night after supposedly fresh lying on a crumpled heap on the floor.

One thing kept returning to her mind over and over again: Dingo Bimbo kept ringing in her thoughts after time. Tom Carter!

He had told Hugo Blake that she was working in the office under assumed names. He had told Hugo Blake that story about her father. Bullfire looking it appear that John Brent on had been there to murder him.

But that wasn't all.

Tom had asked Anne to ... Nancy knew that day at the latest. It's up to both of us to ... were not getting acquainted and I a new girl at the office. He had let in for her whether she ... for. Whatever Hugo Blake wanted ... to get rid of, it would keep it close ... the office.

For that matter what was Tom doing in Hugo Blake's office in the first place, anyway?

Whatever it was her mind refused ... could come to only one answer. Tom was in this thing too. He was working with Hugo Blake. And that terrible ... to find she was just be ... getting to ... entangled.

Her first plan ... Tom ... pointed. But he wanted her to ... him virtually ... ultimatum. He would ... Dingo to John Bristow in the morning and tell the whole story. Then as Blake had gone on with his explanation it had occurred to her that she had not one shred of proof.

Mr. Carter ... Mr. ... now ... pretend to ... co-operate with Hugo Blake and ... at least ... to ... whatever he ... demanded. For that way could she obtain ... proof that would render him harmless in the future—and save Dingo? Was there a chance of ... the identity of his fellow ... Already she knew the identity of ... of them—Tom Carter!

Every time ... dropped off into a restless sleep, waking to find the night hideously ... through the window.

She rose, bathed and dressed, her head throbbing with ... At last she didn't have to face the ... Tom Carter. That was still only ... she could ask for advice, even ... Dingo. Her brother. Pat.

Telephone ... still revealed that Pat Thorne was at the airport due for a flying hour. He would be back late in the afternoon.

She pushed on ... little sort ... but, many ... and gloves, and ... out ... Waiting ... at last ... much would ... to ... The airport ... ... Pat ... ...

THE ONLY POTATOES

that can hardly be sold or advertised as seed potatoes are potatoes that have CERTIFIED as seed potatoes by the Dominion Department of Agriculture (Destructive Insect and Pest Act, Certified Potato Order, 1935).

Official tags are issued by the Department of Agriculture to the potatoes that are certified as seed. On these tags the words "CERTIFIED SEED POTATOES" are printed in bold letters. One of these tags must be attached to each container of certified potatoes.

An official certification number is stamped on each tag. By this number the Department of Agriculture knows, and will inform the buyer upon request, the name and address of the grower who produced the seed potatoes.

An advertisement for seed potatoes must, to conform with the Destructive Insect and Pest Act, refer to CERTIFIED seed potatoes. If it does not the advertisement is illegal, and per sons who have purchased from the advertisement are liable to prosecution.

Dramatic Festival

The Alix Dramatic Festival held on March 5th and 7th proved to be an unqualified success, both financially and in the quality of dramatic talent exhibited. Plays were entered from Mirror, Rigley, Clive, Alix, and two from the Stanton district.

The audience on both evenings exceeded expectations. The first evening the actors played to a full house. On the second, the hall was packed to the doors.

The adjudicator, Mr. Sidney E. Bick, of the Department of Extension, University of Alberta, gave very instructive criticisms at the end of the performances each evening. In a clear and detailed manner he pointed out the faults in the acting of each play and explained how improvements could be made. As well as criticizing the mistakes made he also said a number of very nice things which should have encouraged those taking part. Mr. Bick congratulated the actors generally on their voices, diction and enunciation. He also stated that the Alix Festival had displayed quite the best amateur acting he had seen as yet in Alberta.

Much credit is due to all the players and their directors who gave of their time and effort so unstintingly. Not only did they present two evenings of excellent entertainment, but they also gave the Local Red Cross a boost financially. Thanks also goes to Miss Jean Greenwood and the other artists who made the intervals between the plays very pleasant with their performances.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Substance" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. The Golden Text is Psalms 104:30,35. One of the Scriptural citations is "By faith the walls of Jericho fell down, after they were compassed about seven days" (Hebrews 11:30). One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "A New Testament writer plainly describes faith, a quality of mind, as 'the substance of things hoped for'" (p. 270).

A contributor to the New York Sun tells us that perhaps the most authentic Manx cats in England, at least the best to be regularly bred there, were those of Miss Helen Hill Kermode, veteran breeder and judge, said to be "Our Cats and All About Them," published in London 60 years ago. "The Manx fancy has its ups and downs. At the moment the breed is not extravagantly popular."

Manx admirers insist that lack of a tail makes a cat trim and shipshape, that "tail-crazed" look unsightly in consequence. But the human race is conservative, and always has taken its cats with tails.

CHAPTER VII

The Monday morning street car seemed a little less crowded than usual. Nancy Thorne found a seat in the corner and huddled there, plotting out the murder with unseeing eyes.

Through the long afternoon and night she had thought her own thoughts, her mind like the viscera of a song. She was alone now. There was no one she could trust. It had seemed to her as though supernatural wills had sprung up between her and the people she loved most.

She held back the threatened tears with a heroic effort. No use in making a spectacle of herself on the street car. Holding her chin high she took out her compact and powdered her nose and brushed back her coppery hair, with a convincing air of calm.

The situation had to be faced, that was all. Tom was in the terrible thing, and so was Pat. No matter what her own feelings might be, she couldn't give them away lightly. She must somehow summon to Hugo Blake for not doing his work. Maybe she could leave the Bristow job and go away. A change of sports all sometimes, was through her mind.

She looked up. John Bristow, his round face very reassuring, was looking down at her. It seemed odd, having him call her by her surname down.

"Oh—good morning, Mr Bristow."

"I haven't seen you since we started work here. How do you like it?"

She smiled at him. "I like it fine."

"That's good. I hope you get along splendidly."

He nodded to her spoke to several of the other girls in the same friendly fashion, and went to into Grimshaw's office. For just an instant Nancy felt faintly hurt at his cool impersonality. In the next instant she realized that he was being careful and to her best interests. him for if she was suspected enough now with the other girls without the added disadvantage of being a favorite of the boss.

The day passed, crammed with work, with the added impetus of the big boss himself being on the premises. Nancy worked like a fiend, for the keyboard as she tried to keep up with the ever-increasing piled up work, realizing as she did so that the added work was being given her in the attempt to prove, to appear she was getting behind.

"Miss Thorne right away, Miss." A floor girl stood at the door of the cubicle.

Out there copied in a hurry—they want them downstairs."

A rush back to the typewriter. "Miss Thorne reports into Mr. Grimshaw as soon as you have them done. He wants them right away."

She finished the last one to a trembling rush, gathered them together and hurried to the door of Mr. Grimshaw's office. Through the glass she saw him and he had to her to come in, and closed the door.

"... at least the attacker on my car seems stopped." Tom Bristow was saying as she entered. "That takes a load off my mind."

"Just put them on the desk, Miss Thorne," the office manager said crisply. He went on talking to John Bristow. "These probably won't be any more messages. The plane is now definitely out of range."

Nancy stole a look at him as she put the reports in a very handsome

A passenger getting off the street car left his loaded newspaper in the seat beside Nancy and the pitched it up and glanced at it carelessly. [illegible] She [illegible] the first line of the story. Then a few details gave only that an ocean had been assigned to the accident and that by some means the attacker and student pilot had escaped with minor injuries.

Tom had said "a lot of men planned disaster."

Pat had said "There's nothing I wouldn't do for money—"

Tom had said—"You're in this up your neck—"

She closed her eyes and saw that tiny tracking plane as she had seen it yesterday circling so gracefully against the sky. She remembered the groups of students who had been with them, the thousand smiling faces looking into the sun.

By the Bristow signal car came to a clanging stop before the John Bristow Clothing Company she knew she must keep to her resolve, regardless of what it might do to Pat or to Tom Cantrell.

She climbed wearily up the concrete and iron stairs, pounded her card on the time clock and pinned it in the rack, and went to her desk.

It was a little before 8, and the other office girls were congregated in the dressing room, chattering and laughing as they took off their hats and spent a few minutes primping before work. Nancy nodded briefly, hooked away again. Anita Burke, with her bright, canny face, her dyed hair in a cheery greeting, but then the 8 o'clock bell rang and work began.

"Good morning, Miss Hilts."

She looked up. Miss Bristow, his round face very reassuring, was looking down at her. It seemed odd, having him call her by her surname down.

"Oh—good morning, Mr Bristow."

desk. He seemed to look at her very ill. Frightened. Ion

"That's what I think," Bristow said. "Now about this other business—"

That was all she heard. Nancy closed her door almost behind her.

"Those orders have to be copied quickly Miss Hilts. All of them have to be out before noon." It was Madge Fletcher again.

Nancy nodded and started back to work her mind filled with what she had overheard. The attacks on the train had been caused. John Bristow and he believed it was because of protection was in great

Hugo Blake had said something about new methods—nothing to crash as overturning a truck filled with valuable dies and patterns. That was why the attacks on the trucks had ceased. There was some more frightful way than that. With all with all her heart that she could save the friendly, wake-hatred man whom her pilot was made.

"Finished with those," Miss Hilts." She shook her head. "Almost. I'll be—in—a—minute."

Five minutes after 12 Tom mailed the last letter. 10 minutes past and finally the last one was done. She made a quick check-up for any omis errors, found none, and laid the orders in a neat pile on Madge Fletcher's desk. Her head was fairly whirling, her fingers still limped.

Her circumstance she noticed, had not left her. Somehow she could see him through the glass door, still sitting at his desk, his head in his hands. She wondered if she ought to go in and ask if she might do anything for him. Perhaps it would be better to leave him alone. Since they had to work so hard seemed to be warning her to leave her job, he had appeared to avoid him.

The next hour Nancy spent in a daze, at her desk, but now he had his head in his arms.

She wondered what she ought to do. If he were asleep, he might resent being waked just to be told that the reports were finished. Or, if there was really no special hurry for the work, he might not like it if he weren't waked.

"Mr Grimshaw——"

There was no response to her timid voice. She laid the pile of reports in the wire basket, hesitated a moment and then tried again, louder.

"Mr. Grimshaw——"

Then she screamed. On Grimshaw's head was a dark red stain.

All Have Contributed

But Exile Indian Princes And Chiefs Are Not Wealthy

The London Evening News says: Not all the Indian princes in exile are wealthy, nor even all the Maharajahs; yet by this time I think every prince and princeling, great or small, has contributed in some form to the Viceroy's War Purpose Fund.

I hear of a gift from the Chief of a Western India state who is known to be very far from rich. He has sent 125 rupees, he suggests that the Rs 125 will buy a rifle, complete with bayonet, and that Rs 50 will pay for 1,000 rounds of ammunition.

He gave the rifle and bayonet, his subjects the ammunition.

It is a comment to the gist of the Memo of Statehood and his subjects, which now amounts to hundreds Rs the R.A.F.

Saving No Element

The banker had sounded for dinner. The famous retired beer quaffing one of the men, a gourmand by nature, put down his pick.

"I believe," he said successfully, "that if the house sounded when you had your pick in the air you would keep it there."

"If I got no more to the time of that," replied the poor, "I would be unable to tell it up."

Scrap Iron to Be Gathered By Line Elevators

"Drop your iron on Berlin" will be the slogan of a drive sponsored by local Line Elevator Agents in which farmers will be asked to donate their scrap iron to aid Britain.

Plans are now under way for organizing every community for collection of scrap iron in Western Canada. Local Boards of Trade, Weekly Newspapers, Church Societies, farm organizations and all local associations will be asked to cooperate in the drive for collection of waste scrap iron. Its ultimate destination will be Germany via British bombers. In this manner, farmers will be enabled to give their direct reply to Hitler for his bombing of British cities.

The North-West Line Elevators Associations has arranged with all Line Elevator Agents to act as collecting agencies for the scrap iron. The preliminary organization for each community will be set up during the next few weeks and actual collection and shipment will take place between June 15 and July 15. It is felt that this date will best fit in with farming operations.

The only expense to be incurred in the organization of the "Drop your scrap iron on Berlin campaign will be freight charges. The entire proceeds other than freight costs will be turned over to the Patriotic Salvage Corps.

- Private John Smith is through with drill and duties for the day.
- He is tired, maybe a bit "fed up." He is far from home and lonely.
- He longs for a dash of gaiety, a bit of cheer . . . warm, perhaps, for a homey supper, a cozy bed, play games, listen to the radio, write to the folk back home.
- It is the job of these six organizations to see that disconsolate, homesick, loneliness have no place on the precious leisure moments of our men in uniform. Wherever they go these services go too, come bomb or bullet.
- In camp, on the march, on the ranges, these services bring them hot drinks and snacks, smokes and other comforts. Recreation centers are set up . . . sports and entertainment organized . . . reading and writing materials supplied. Comfortable canteens provide extra food. There are educational facilities. Hostess houses enable the men to enjoy healthy social contacts.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Matter" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. The Golden Text is Isaiah 40:6,7. One of the Scriptural citations is "While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal" (IICorinthians 4:18). One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "The conceptions of mortal, erring thought must give way to the ideal of all that is perfect and eternal" (p. 269).

Lake Bend News

The plays put on by the Young People of Lake Bend were well attended and a success in every sense of the word. They were enjoyed by all from from start to finish. The directors, Messrs Macfarlane and Murdock deserve great credit.

All the players acted their parts to perfection. Albert Pedersen, the black mute, was a success; George Stevenson, who depicted Tommy's elderly uncle, couldn't have been better.

Mr Macfarlane took the part of Tommy and carried off his part very able manner. He had an exciting time choosing a wife in just half an hour in order to receive a large sum of money from his elderly uncle.

Lyle Webb, who took the part of Gwendolen Holliday, made a splendid mischievous girl and caused much amusement.

Ethel Elmer should be in Hollywood. Ethel Elmer should be in Hollywood as they are born actresses.

Lawrence Elmer sang a cowboy song and played his own accompaniment on a guitar. Let us have more.

Gilbert Stevenson, as John Hoffer was all business and did his part very well.

Miss Alice Jarvis, pianist, was much appreciated as were others who helped to make the affair the undoubted success it was.

Soil Moisture Studies

The answer is definitely yes, unless present methods of crop production are altered.

Four years ago, the Department of Soils of the University of Alberta made a study of the nitrogen and organic matter content of cultivated soils and neighbouring virgin soil at 22 widely separated points in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

In this study, the four major soil zones (black, dark brown, brown and gray) were all represented. It was found that, as a result of cultivation, the black soils had lost 15% of the original nitrogen and 21% of organic matter. The dark brown soils lost 23% of nitrogen and 26% of organic matter. The loss in brown soils amounted to 29% of the nitrogen and 27% of the organic matter. The gray soils, naturally less fertile than the others, were found to have lost 25% of the original nitrogen and 42% of the organic matter.

The above figures were obtained from analysis of the surface six inches of soil. In general, subsoil losses of nitrogen were slight, but organic matter losses considerable.

The authors state (Scientific Agriculture, Vol. 19) that "... it is clear that the straight grain and fallow system has not maintained the nitrogen ... or organic matter content of western Canada prairie soils."

Modification Necessary

The announcement by the federal government of its decision to enter on negotiations towards the cost of direct relief on and from March 31 of this year came not only as a surprise but a distinct shock to the people of the province.

The first reaction to the early morning announcement of Hon Mr McLarty Minister of Labor was a feeling of comfortableness on the part of all those in the west who are well acquainted with the yet undispensed unemployment situation on the province and financial inability of the province and municipalities to carry the full load should there be no modification of the decision.

In the first place it should be noted that the decision is based on a false premise if the decision as intimated by Minister McLarty is to stand on the assumption that unemployment is down way in the province with only readily employable and partly unemployable men are out of work in the march

In support of this contention Mr McLarty quoted figures to show that out of 250 000 persons on direct relief in October only 62 000 were listed as employable. Unemployables together with the unemployables who have since the list had undergone further substantial reductions but official figures were not available

Inasmuch as the prairie provinces are concerned it is well known that in October while harvesting operations are underway or while it is completed relatively little living on the perseeds at harvest work opportunities were down to the lowest point of the year In November and December the relief in the began to fill up again and the numbers of unemployables have the peak towards the resumption of spring activities in the spring That has been true throughout the depression decade and in spite of the situation as pertains at provincial and municipal figures at the current time amply demonstrates

Problem Remains Here

Had Mr McLarty confined his statement concerning the declining incidence of unemployment after October in Eastern Canada the situation are showing increasing numbers of the formerly unemployed he would have stood on firm ground no doubt but it is not applicable to the prairie provinces as yet

On the contrary in Saskatchewan particularly and to a lesser degree in Manitoba and Alberta the relief problems have been growing more acute and the beta needs a proportion of employable and partly employable unemployed In all three prairie provinces provincial and municipal authorities have come to the fact that they still face an unemployment problem in which employables are a considerable constituent

How long this condition will continue is of course unpredictable but that it is a current problem on the prairies is undeniable It is a condition which will have to be recognized by the federal government and some provision made for it at least until the remaining employables are paid more time as the provincial and municipal governments between them are in a financial position to take care of the entire load.

It is gratifying, of course, to find that over the Dominion as a whole the unemployment curve has been trending sharply downward in the last year or so but in the country at war when every able bodied man should be a real asset to the war effort, the downward trend should continue until every employable man and woman in the country is engaged in war work or worth. If a does not there is something wrong with the war effort or something wrong with the distribution of the war effort

There is no good reason to believe that there are any peculiarly Western problems, could have been solved had the conference on the Brian-Rowell recommendations been practiced instead of collapsing, but the conference failed in no reason why some other method of approach could not be attempted.

* * * *

A Temporary Solution

Possibly a temporary solution of the problem may be found in some provision for transferring employable out-of-works from the prairie provinces where they are not needed, to the east, where their services could be utilized to a useful purpose and an essential product.

This possibility was well expressed recently by the Regina Leader-Post, in the following words, referring specifically to the problem as it exists in Saskatchewan

There are not only hundreds of unskilled workers but also a considerable number of trained tradesmen in this province who want to do useful work. True, their condition is complicated by the fact that in many cases they are married men with families But the fact remains that the numbers industrial interests case employment restrictions to the point of forcing them sought answers, and something is done to assist them to get to available jobs they will remain unemployed.

Until employment service is put on a truly national basis there will continue to be unemployment at home as men return with cash to spend. There remains insufficient fluidity of labor in Canada at the very time when maximum movement is required. Something should be done about this"

What form assistance is going to take to enable the provinces and municipalities to assume a load which is beyond their ability to bear may perhaps be known at Ottawa, but something will have to be done No doubt prairie representatives in Parliament will fully acquaint the powers that be with the situation and to such effect that the recent decision to cut off relief contributions will be modified.

Grow More Flax

Moderate Boring From Wheat To Flax Requested In The West

A moderate swing from wheat to flax production is expected on good prairie farms during the present year.

Flax seed production in western Canada is a different under taking from fibre flax production in eastern Canada The latter is going out of production as a fibre crop and flax is of a different type and is wholly for seed purposes. The need is mainly used for production of linseed oil.

For several years past Canada has imported about 1,000,000 bushels of linseed oil annually, mainly from the Argentine If all the linseed required could be produced in Canada a substantial saving in foreign exchange could be effected

Flax seed production is a somewhat larger toll still very small quantity into a field crop. Flax is a hardy crop and with adequate precautions for time of sowing and against anthracnose disease may be grown successfully in the Canadian Prairie Provinces. The result was fairly good. However, the unfavorable weather of 1939 caused the crop to ripen unevenly and to shatter much of the seed before it could be harvested. Consequently the yield was disappointing.

Flax is a somewhat different crop from wheat and requires special treatment in order to obtain the best results. Flax should be sown on summer-fallow land which has been well worked and packed. The land should be free from weeds. Flax should be sown as early in the spring as possible, preferably during the first week in May. Flax should be sown thinly, about 40 pounds per acre, and covered with a shallow drill to a depth of about one inch. Flax should be harvested when the seed capsules are ripe and the straw has turned yellow. Harvesting should be done with a binder, and the crop should be threshed as soon as possible after harvesting.

Flax is a crop which requires a rich soil and a long growing season. Flax is not a suitable crop for land which has been recently broken from sod. Flax is not a suitable crop for land which has been recently broken from sod. Flax is not a suitable crop for land which has been recently broken from sod

Cereal Varieties

Ten different varieties of hard red spring wheat are officially recommended for use in various parts of the prairie provinces. As a result of extensive experimental work, it is known fairly well to what conditions each variety is adapted. In each of the three provinces, a Cereal Variety Selection Committee is responsible for making official recommendations as to the varieties which should be grown in each district. These recommendations should be used as a general guide in making a choice It is, of course, recognized that there are local districts to which varieties not officially recommended may be well adapted However, it is wise to follow the official advice unless there is a very good reason for not doing so.

Seven varieties of oats, eleven of barley and three of flax are to be found on the recommended lists.

In order to assist government institutions in making the necessary information readily available to farmers, all grain buyers of Line Elevator Companies associated with the Agricultural Department have been provided with printed copies of cereal variety recommendations.

In order to secure maximum returns, it is necessary [illegible] pure seed of the right variety

So long as supplies last, copies of recommendations may be obtained from

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Reality" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science Churches, on Sunday. The Golden Text is Jeremiah 31:33. One of the Scriptural citations is "Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord" (II Peter 1:2). One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "There is but one way to heaven, harmony, and Christ in divine Science shows us this way. It is to know no other reality—to have no other consciousness of life than good, God and His reflection, and to rise superior to the so-called pain and pleasure of the senses" (p. 262).

The Alix Athletic Association are holding a dance on Thursday, April 17, in the Legion Hall, Alix, the proceeds of which are to be used for the promotion of athletics and recreational activities in Alix and district. The association is doing good work and deserves the whole hearted support of our community. Turn out and give them full support.

An Ontario member asks the West a "fisher" always asking for a handout. There are a good many Ontario and Maritime people who have come their wealth to the West. The best thing that could happen to the West would be to cut the West at the Manitoba eastern boundary and leave the eastern half without the benefit of the Western Market. We have been fed white by the eastern bloodsuckers.

A definite blot was conveyed to the local congregations of the United Church, that if attendance at services did not improve, there would be no services at all. If the shining clergyman can travel the night miles to give his services at the church, surely the people of Alix can walk the two or three blocks necessary to be present at such service. It is not saying much for our interest in spiritual affairs if the commentary when only about a half-dozen people turn out to attend the meeting. "We that both care to hear, let him hear".

Can't Happen Here?

If Britain were crushed and Canada conquered by Hitler's hordes of ruthless ruffians what would it mean to the people of this country? Then as a question which is pertinently posed and one which is deserving of a clear thoughtful consideration. It occasioned much discussion between bouts and captains of their souls.

The Canadian nation is girding men and mustering all its resources of men, materials and money to fight against what is now the fight for what? To put it loosely the people of this country are making sacrifices and being called upon to make still greater sacrifices to prevent having forced upon them Hitler's "new order" and to preserve the right to continue to enjoy the Canadian way of life.

And what is that new order which Hitler seeks to thrust upon free the people of Europe and, if and when he can get around to it, upon the people of this country, of this continent and ultimately upon the whole world? What would it mean to the people of Canada if they were forced to live under the black shadow of this so-called "new order"?

* * *

What It Means

For the manufacturer the retailer and the businessman, it would mean the requisitioning of their businesses. True, they might be allowed to continue to operate some of them, but they would have to make or buy what they were told to make or buy and in the quantities and at the prices dictated by their masters. They would be told what to sell, how much to sell and at prices set by their masters. Under national socialism, as interpreted by Hitler and his minions, the use of capital, the right to engage in or contract, methods of operation, wages to be paid and even the dispensation of such necessary profits as might be permitted, would be determined by the State. All capital would be subject to the direction of the State and woe betide the business man who failed to bow to Hitlerian decrees and dictates.

For the farmer it would spell confinement, total and absolute. He would be told what to grow and what to raise and at what prices. The price that he would receive for his produce would be set for him and he would be left with no more than sufficient to maintain himself and his family at the lowest possible subsistence level. If he refused or failed to do as he things they would confiscate them and turn the family over to the tender mercies of the Arctic wilderness. There is no room for humanitarianism even those who banded servitude. That has happened already in countries over which the swastika waves.

There are the things that would happen to capital and labor if Hitler seized the land. The State would be supreme, the individual a cipher and a slave. Trade unions and organizations there would be no appeal and the ruthless and fat oppression or even mild objection would be the internment camp or the lortiure chamber and perhaps even death.

* * *

A Supreme Unwelcomeness

Truly a bleak outlook for a freedom-loving people, for a nation who after all have been accustomed to doing pretty much as they liked, so long as their actions are not injurious to the community at large.

Fortunately, there are indications that the people of Canada are becoming more and more conscious of the perils to which they are exposed and to the realization that the only escape is an all-out effort in which every man, woman and child participates, coupled with a firm determination that victory must be won overseas of the menace is not to reach them above.

That growing sense of responsibility was aptly expressed by a business lire woman in Calgary who once pushed a cash contribution to the war off with the following declaration:

When millions of men can offer their lives in their country's defence that's one will pay with their lives, others will be content to do so. It is as little as we of Canada can do, to subscribe to the interest-free loan to the government, which not only helps the enlisted man, but helps our native."

When every Canadian adopts the viewpoint that his utmost contribution, whether it be in the farm of a loan to the government, prepayment of taxes, gifts to war charities in cash, energy or time, is at the service of his country it will be appropriate to say "It can't happen here."

Premium Holds Up Norway Being Used Aside By Nazis

Most rule in Norway is taking off its mask. The fair premises with which it sought at first to make conquest philatelic and brown opposition by the conquered are being cast aside. They have served their purpose. Now it appears that new stamps in the image and not merely the restoration of Norwegian independence which Mayor Quisling, the willing instrument of aggression, has been promising his fellow Norsemen in the strange possession pastor of the occupied nation. The Quislingites are now in power, and the stamps are theirs.

Quisling, himself, does not even vague the pretense of being responsible for the new issue, but among those stamps of support from the fellow Norsemen who have adhered to his fifth-column wagging is the Norwegian Nazi Party. Lovely Vegetables Have Important Place In Diet Of Britain

The common potato and carrot have been elevated to a distinguished position in the changing diet of Britain, and housewives are learning to use to advantage as tender and fresh nip the potato and carrot are being disguised in fancy dishes so they may appear different for every meal.

The Ministry of Food is reminding Britons of the nourishment to be obtained from these vegetables and suggests ways in which they may be served for breakfast lunch and dinner.

Coupled with this reminder is the advice to grow potatoes carrots and other vegetables that will store for winter

Faced in a mansion of war the Ministry declares on a doing ban- ner under which is the admonition "don't waste it."

In the centre of a double column advertisement is a carrot out of a perspiring do hhand carrying volubly under a heavy load. Under him is the other reminder

"Our dog-bees don't mind raking their bees to without any fuss but if you waste it the 3 languages is something horrible."

Eighty-Year-Old Widebman Is Again Repairing Slips

Fred Grant retired from the shipyards 15 years ago, but he's back again at his old job of repairing rowlocks despite his 80 years.

Old age sent him into retirement after 50 years in the yards and until he was 65 he had no real contact to tend his flowers in the garden of his Keele Street home. But he heard of a call for more skilled shipyard workers "I'm going back," he told his daughter "I can't sit around all week to do."

The object will be to utilize materials now going to waste in meeting wartime needs, and to raise money for wartime charities and services.

CHAPTER IX

The office of the John Bristow Company hummed with excitement 5 minutes before opening time Nearly every girl on the staff had come to work early so that by the time John discovered about the managers most day disappointed by learning that nothing had been disclosed so by they consoled themselves by gathering in the gossiping corners talking over the events of the day before

A hush fell over the entire room as Nancy Thorne entered a few minutes before eight. Her face was but her determined little chin held high, ready to face anything

She walked into the big office so as only as though she were entering a dentist's lair, lowered her purse on the desk and said lightly "Anything new on our personnel most for mystery?"

Someone gasped. There was a long moment of awful suspense then Miss Annie Burke said in an awe struck whisper, "I thought they were married."

Nancy Thorne shrugged her shoulders, said an insolent motion with her lower lip, and said "Oh no. They're not married. Not by a long shot. I happened to find out by accident that they haven't even applied for a license."

Nancy looked up calmly. "They were did."

"Oh no," someone else said. "What happened?"

Nancy said she had become a heroine in the office, the centre of attention. With maddening deliberation she took a comb from her purse and began drawing it slowly through her red-gold hair.

"For Pete's sake, what did happen?" It was Madge Fletcher who spoke that time.

Nancy grinned. Before she spoke she thought of every movie star's dramatic pause and counted. "Well, they took me off to the police station for questioning. They wanted to send me to a State in the garden of Kevin Kosher. They had no need of a call for more skilled shipyard workers "I'm going back," he told his daughter "I can't sit around all week to do."

He be runs every morning at 5:30, catches the 7:05 a.m. train from his village station and at 7:30 is hard at work adding to the list of the

It had never occurred to her that John Bristow might not be quickly available when she needed him

For a moment she sat at her desk in confusion trying to think of some solution As she sat there a telephone rang sharply She barely listened that Madge Fletcher picked it up answered it and sat listening with her face turned slowly pale

The head stenographer put the telephone down at last and came slowly over to Nancy's desk When Nancy looked up she saw a worried expression on Madge's pretty face and even that had been so unfriendly

Nancy," she said in a low voice. "I've been keeping something from you. But I thought it best not to tell you before."

Madge Fletcher reached out and laid Nancy's hand but seriously I'm afraid That was the emergency hospital at the airport phoning They want you to come out there at once

Should Use Canadian Lemon Fruits And Vegetables And Save Exchange

Patriotism means saving our own Canadian fruits and vegetables for the season says Miss Gladys Cooper in the dietetics of Make L. C. Pepper in the Canadian Department of Agriculture

Canadians will have to save limiting certain food importations to conserve exchange for purchase of needed war supplies and Miss Cooper and her staff are lecturing to women throughout the Dominion on the new food rules and teaching them how to substitute Canadian products for imports as far as possible in the home kitchen

Officials say most of the money Canadians spend for fresh fruits and vegetables in the United States during 1940 something more than $13,000,000, went for pre-season products which Canadians could have had cheaper and of better quality from their own orchards and gardens a few weeks later The Lake Ridge of our appetites with these early strawberries and other fruits and are now getting so keen for them when our own appear says Home Economist Miss E. "There is a British Columbia melon which makes excellent pest, while you have a number of varieties of pears, peaches and other fruits which will easily and completely replace anything we have formerly imported," she said.

At the end of the 1941 season the results of testing these recipes in the country's kitchens will be assembled to find out which ones are best.

Miss LaBlanc explained the Consumer section is canned apple sauce. In the experimental kitchens cooks mix different varieties, each with a different flavor according to the apple used, were set out to be sampled.

Another product still in the experimental stage but expected to be on the markets after the next apple crop is called apple "flakes" or "chips" These have been tried out by Miss LaBlanc who says they taste exactly like fresh apples in pie.

RUBBER IS NOW PRODUCED FROM FARM WASTE

Automobile tires with a life of 50,000 miles and synthetic rubber made from waste straw and wood were farm fibres are the major discoveries of research chemists, said Cecil Lamont, of the North-West Line Lumbers Association, who attended the annual conference of the United States Farm Chemurgic Council just held at Chicago. Leading scientists, industrialists and head of farm organizations and co-operatives of the United States gathered at the four-day conference to discuss latest developments in finding new markets and industrial uses for farm products.

The South West Line Elevator Association is urging the Federal Government to establish a Western division of the National Research Council dedicated to research in expanding markets and finding industrial uses for Canada's surplus wheat. At Chicago, the chief of the four national research laboratories, established at a cost of $7,850,000 by the United States government, announced that three of the four laboratories had brought their operation by January, 1941, and the fourth will be opened within a few weeks. One hundred and seventy-five scientists are already at work, in these laboratories seeking expansion of markets for farm crops produced in the United States. This number will be increased to 300 or 1,000 as a new research projects get under way. At the Peoria laboratory a pilot plant building has been erected and will be used to ascertain most economical means of manufacturing motor fuels from wheat, corn and other cereal crops, it was reported.

GET THE FACTS! Before You Buy a FORD!
IT'S THE BIG CAR
with the THRIFTY Engine!

Have you seen the Ford . . . the big new 1941 Ford. In actual feet and inches it's the roomiest car in its price class. Greatest inside length! Greatest total seating width! Extra knee-room and head-room! Wider doors! Larger windshield! A spring-base that's luxlon longer.

It's the big car with the thrifty engine. Only Ford, at this price, is powered with an eight. Eight cylinders for smoothness as in America's highest priced cars. Gasoline economy, that has outstripped all competition in its class, in one official contest after another. Long life and reliability that persuades Ford owners to buy one Ford after another.

What's more, the 1941 Ford has that big car "feel" — that road-hugging stability on the curves or on the straightaway.

This year Ford riding qualities are a revelation — a completely new ride made possible by "Show-Motion Springs," plus improved shock absorbers, new stabilizer, a more rigid frame.

Ford prices are still lowest. Get in touch with a Ford dealer and see what an attractive deal he is willing to offer.

Inflation Or Thrift

With the issues of the past confronting them, it seems almost needless that there should exist in Canada people who would have the government of the country adopt a policy of monetary inflation as the "easy" way of financing the country's war effort and of buttressing its external economy.

The average Canadian of mature years, who is old enough to have been a spectator of the evil effects of inflation during the first Great War and the post war depression era, could hardly be expected to subscribe to a doctrine which in practice brought such bitter rewards to the rank and file of the general public in every country which attempted to lift itself by the bootstraps in this manner.

There might be some excuse for the advocacy of the gospel of "funny money" on the part of the mentally immature, or of those who are trying by any means to realize the monstrous effects of the adoption of a policy which history and very recent history, has demonstrated is invariably followed by a day of reckoning—a reckoning which one may take the form of bankruptcy such as the world experienced during the years which followed the great financial collapse of 1929.

* * * *

An Object Lesson

Surely the experiences of Germany during the years which followed the Great War should be an object lesson to the people of this country of the disastrous aftermath of an inflationary policy. Indeed had it not been for the ruinous effects of the policy, it is extremely doubtful if the people of that country would not have heralded Hitler as their saviour and placed him in the position of supplying them to a war which he destined to complete the ruin blithely started when the printing presses were allowed to run amok.

Even now the people of the world are being given a demonstration of what inflation means to the common people in the countries so recently subjugated by the Nazis, where they are being stripped bare of the very necessities of existence by the ruthless device of forcing them to accept printing press money for their commodities in the form of "paying" for them. In those countries prices are soaring to a giddy altitude and this, coupled with drastic rationing, is driving them to hunger and rags.

It is bad enough for a people to be enslaved by their conquerors in this polite form, but at least they cannot help it. How much worse it would be for a people willingly to allow themselves to be reduced by such a vicious device, when they have the power to prevent themselves being led head-long foot in economic chains.

Fortunate, indeed, are the people of this country that their leaders are men who have steadfastly set their faces against this financial will o' the wisp, men who realize that the only way is not the easy way, but that inconvenience never will mean later on a burden that will prove unbearable and will not break the backs of the people and ruin the country.

The Sane Road

This war has got to be paid for, and there are only three ways of doing it. Inflation, borrowing, inflation. The first is unthinkable and cannot be considered. The second is sound and safe and, sane, as long as we are borrowing from ourselves, which is precisely what we are doing when we buy war savings certificates or subscribe in government loans. As long as we are following these two methods we are not preparing a red for our own bucket later. The last is the broad road which leads to destruction.

The straight and narrow economic way of paying as we go or at borrowing from ourselves retains personal incentive and necessitates thrift. It means that Canadians must spend less and less on non-essentials as more and more, not only that we may win the war more speedily but so that the stock of post-war readjustment may be established.

The road to security for the future was aptly pointed out recently by J. A. McLeod, president of the Bank of Nova Scotia, in his address at the Bank's annual meeting, when he said:

"If inflation is to be avoided there is only one way in which Canadians can find the necessary money to finance the war effort. That is by strictly limiting their expenditures and thus increase their rate of savings. It is then a vital part of the war effort on the home front that everyone who can reasonably economize should save more and more. As their incomes are rising as a result of war-time expansion, a high rate of saving is not only the part of patriotism, but also the part of wisdom, for in building up a reserve, they will be providing against the day of post-war readjustment when their jobs and their incomes will be gravely threatened.

All of us, Mr McLeod continued, "are anxious to avoid any postwar inflation. It is the duty of all, individuals and Governments, to the future of our society. Under these circumstances, we must willingly accept heavy taxation and, more than that, we must save to the maximum of our ability. It is very apparent that this is the best way of preventing inflation, and because it combines efficiency and justice in the greatest measure, it is the best way and the democratic way."

War Savings

British Columbia Tunnel Has Cloth A Record For Canada

During the last six months the 362 residents of the lumber town, Chemainus, 35 miles north of Victoria, have put $34,884 into War Savings Certificates, an average of $47.86 for each inhabitant, man, woman and baby. John Stumbled, head of the mills there, says Chemainus is signed up 100 per cent for war savings and everybody saving and paying regularly to help finance the war and Chemainus thus has not a record that cannot be surpassed. It should be a matter of pride for the rest of us on this island that one of our towns has set this example to the rest of Canada.—Victoria Times.

No Gun Is Spared

Poles Old And Young Have Been Exposed To Shots

Half a million Poles from the Russian occupied belt of the former republic, old men, women and children, deported to Siberia in the first year of the Russian occupation, and dumped there to get along as best they can or perish if they are not strong enough to survive, writes Frederick V. Birchall in the New York Times. The mass deportations began shortly after the Red Army occupied the eastern areas of Poland in 1939 and are still continuing. That is merely varies according to the transportation available. In the deportations, says Mr. Birchall, no one, old or young, was spared.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Uses New Idea

Advertisement In British Newspapers Is In Form Of Quiz

A regular advertiser in the British newspapers is the ministry of food which buys space to urge conservation of food to educate the people in the best use of their somewhat restricted supplies.

The latest advertisement is in the form of a "quiz", with 10 questions asked and the answers given at the bottom in inverted type. In discourage pudding. "For what important event in Scotland famous Mrs. Beeton's book must have got that one "What is the principal reason why you should buy home-produced foods". Neither would that prevent any dishonest use. But others were not so simple. "What is a hay-box?" "Bibs and Pinafores" are apparently the pets "pottiness." What are they? "Three of the following are protective foods. Name them correctly. Which is which? Cheese, flour, to the nutritious oatmeal bread, dripping rice." Fish marks, 20 "make you a cook-general." Incidentally a hay-box is a heat-conserver, and potatoes are pigs' toothers. Ottawa Journal.

Saving And Sacrifice

Something To The Limit In War Time Days Civilization

The aim of the Government and the the duration of the war, is undoubtedly one of moving and sacrifice—giving up things that are really needed, but being sparing to the use of the non-essential articles that have a commercial value, avoiding the purchase of luxuries and investing to the limit in war bonds. The purchase and other government securities and only to a small extent the operation of the war but to store up resources with which to cope the economic difficulties that will undoubtedly fall at the close of hostilities. Once they appreciate the necessity of such a course being followed, the women of Canada may be depended upon to adopt it with a will.—Strathroy Recorder and Times.

Encircling The World

Flying Boats Can Cover Huge Distances With Facilities At Hand

Sir Alan Cobham, addressing the Royal aeronautical society in London on the subject of refueling aircraft in the air, said that there were now sufficient data and experience of manual fuel replenishment to show that the process means danger and inconvenience but a practice which could be put into everyday use.

Important trials had led to the conclusion that passengers could be transferred from a refueling aircraft to another in the air with safety and comfort. Experiments were continuing to provide air liners with the necessary facilities for such transfer. Commercial flying boats could now be refueled in the air from specially designed tankers.

With a view to the range of long flights it would be possible for any aircraft to remain in the air with safety for many days, Sir Alan Cobham declared.—London Times.

Main Ben Detective Novels

Call Them Sub-zero Because They Make Police Look Foolish

The Mason organization has hauled all detective novels. Such literature is said to be "subversive". The will be unfortunate for Germans during the coming months because if they have to adopt the practice of Britain's they would take detective stories into their shelters and try to forget the war.

Mr. Mason thinks things out this way: In detective novels there is always some individual who is a master mind who does a better job of detecting than the police. The police are usually found cheering after the master mind has solved a crime and generally making a mess of things. Then the quiet man who on the police himself, with considerable subtlety solves the mystery and hands the criminal over to justice.

This, say the Mason, is subversive, because it makes the police look foolish and is subversive of discipline and of respect for the uniformed authorities.

That would not do in a police-ridden country like Germany. The Nazi leader rule and they do not like subversiveness. But so far as being sub-zero is obvious, the organization makes their efforts look ridiculous.—Buffalo Evening News.

Secret Device

May Be Britain's Answer To Submarine Menace

The Toronto Daily Star said in a newspaper story that it had learned a secret device for combatting submarines in Canada may be Britain's answer to the "most serious and threatened all-out U-boat attacks."

The Star's story continued. "The full significance of this new principle assures the doom of any submersible once its presence is in certain areas is detected. It is stated. Even though the U-boat may be hiding at a great depth it is possible for planes or destroyers to drop depth bombs with accuracy.

Should the U-boat be caught on it is in the act of submerging, it is stated, the percentage is practically nil no further use until it is repaired."

CHAPTER X

"Please don't worry." Madge Fletcher kept saying over and over one arm around Nancy's waist "I'm sure he'll be all right, I'm sure he will."

Nancy tried to speak, found she could not and so put up the hat and jacket one of the girls had brought for her from the locker room.

"There's a company car waiting to take you there." Madge Fletcher went on. "The driver will wait there until—until you're ready to leave Don't worry about coming back to the office to-day."

Nancy nodded, fighting to keep back the tears. The girls were very friendly sympathy from the hotel stenographers and bookkeepers bent down the corner she had kept up so bravely. She gave Madge Fletcher's hand an affectionate squeeze and went out to the yard.

Tom Channell was there, standing by the door. His face turned forest was pale and drawn with anxiety

"Nancy—I've heard about it! Never mind the company car—I'll drive you in my own. Come!"

She turned on him in a sudden fury "I never want to see you again. I never want you to ever speak to me again. This is your fault. That's what I've got for you. I'll never forgive you, never as long as I live!"

"Nancy—don't—"

She turned and ran blindly toward the waiting car, paying no attention. The minute he door closed behind her, she burst into tears.

"Go ahead and cry," the driver said amiably, starting the car "Get it all cried out of you before you get to the hospital. Then you can go in to see your brother with your face washed and smiling."

She choked down a sob, and dried her eyes. It just occurred to her to explain that she wasn't crying because Pat, her adored brother, had been seriously hurt—but because she had just told Tom Channell she never wanted to see him again.

The distance between the Bristow plant and the emergency hospital at Wellington was unusually long way. Even though the driver of the company car ignored rules and made intions about safe driving, it seemed to Nancy that hours passed before they turned from the general direction of the factory district and were making up to the little building She was halfway out of the car before it stopped. The driver called Hall hoss

"Want me to wait for you?"

"No—no—he may be—he may be dead!" she shouted. "Oh, I don't know what I'm saying! Please wait!"

The emergency hospital was a little, compact building with whitepainted walls. Nancy burst through the door and collided with a man in white. A firm nurse at the reception desk looked up in annoyance.

"Where? He's in No. 9, down the hall. You can see him in just a few minutes."

"How badly——" somehow her throat would not let her say the words.

The trim nurse smiled at her "It's a broken leg and a concussion, but he'll get through all right." She added, "Miss Bristow is down the hall if you'd like to talk to her."

Nancy all but ran down the narrow hall. Through the double doors at the outside the door of No. 9, her throat. She rose pale and drawn.

"Oh, Nancy, I'm glad you're here!" The blonde girl reached out quickly and caught her hand. "Keep your head up—he's going to be—he'll be all right——"

"I can't! That can't all—" Nancy's voice forced herself to say it. "He—he did—it happen?"

Well—it seems that Pat was working late. He—he was—he was—" Mary Bristow's voice gagged. He wasn't doing when it happened."

Tom Channell—who's here now? Pat's the kind of fellow who would help anyone in trouble. He'd just left the office and was—was—and just when all of a sudden—but you all not know how hard some of the people—Pat was working and fainted him. The driver of the car is happy wasn't in the accident and just beat it down the road without stopping."

Nancy was conscious of a moment of cold sickening—a sudden fear that had been the method used to wreck the Bristow trucks Was it possible that the same method had been employed to to get rid of Pat? But if Pat discovered the reason why should there be any attempt to get rid of him?

"I'm tired like something delirious," Iris Bristow said grimly. "Someone seriously trying to break Pat's neck for him——"

Nancy turned to the other girl. "Iris—I've got to get back to the office—at once——"

A white cloud came appeared in front of Nancy, interrupting her.

"You may come in and see your brother now Miss Thorne."

"Thanks." She turned to Iris. "Wait for me—I've something terribly important to tell you." Then very quickly—"Don't say anything to Pat but two hundred arrest a man of bright red hair and a wild grin. She went softly in to the bed and stood looking down at him.

"Hello, sis."

"Hello—how are you, Pat? Very pained?" Couldn't you duck?"

"Yes. They really did not to get me this time——"

"They?"

"Yeah the sabotage ring."

"But Pat, you——"

"Listen, you! Some people thought because I'd gotten so broke all of a sudden I'd be glad to do anything for money."

He paused a moment for breath. He felt somewhat dizzy from the sheer of the truth. Tom had driven Pat into this thinking of him as in need of the money to make money But Pat——

"Pat, tell me. You were just pretending?"

He stared at her "You thought I'd take bonuses of unexplained accidents to steadiest plants some of them happening to my pal. Then even to tip you, thought I'd take up with anything like that—for money?"

"Oh Pat, forgive me! I've been such an idiot!"

He drew a breath. "I pretended—to play along with them—while I tried, in my humble way, to unravel out some real evidence. Finally I thought I had it. I went to see Tom and sent it off to the proper authorities. But evidently I wasn't smart enough, because some guy managed to drive me into a tree to-day."

She looked down on the side of the bed. "I've been terribly stupid."

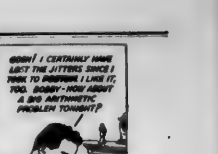
"Tell sure have. You thought that I——"

"Please, Pat. I feel so miserable." The white-clad nurse appeared, and said firmly "You've got to go now, Miss Thorne. Your brother needs rest."

"I'll be back in the side of the ward the door.

Pat smiled from his bed, "I won't rest unless I can see Iris first. I know she's there."

The nurse smiled in friendly sympathy. "All right, but only for a



"Okay Which your stop in the city?"

She followed the stairs as far as the ward door, then turned back and, beaks sure the watchman had not observed her, then turned and went down the corridor to the room at the extreme point in the direction of the loading platform.

Food In Britain

Comparison Of Rations In Great Britain And Germany

Britain can maintain present rations of meat and fats, the United States agriculture department said, even if our wartime civilian imports up to per cent, of average pre-war levels for fats and 35 per cent. for meat and bacon and lard.

The report made a rough comparison between rations in Great Britain and Germany, in addition to fats, meat and sugar—which are rationed in both countries—it said that eggs, cheese are rationed in Germany but not in the United Kingdom. Consumption of eggs was said to be greatly restricted in Germany, but not so in Britain.

The department said food consumption in the United Kingdom was higher, and in Germany lower, than it was in 1909, whereas in Germany consumption of fats, meat, eggs and fruit had been more or less restricted for several years.

In the case of bread, the proportion of the population that is actually buying full rations, at largely unchanged prices, is larger in Germany than in the United Kingdom, where hard prices since the outbreak of the war have substantially increased."

The report said that in Britain rations, the department said the percentage of the population included, however, that special rations will not impair health.

"On the whole, present rations for the United Kingdom reflect a reasonably reduced consumption and conservation," the report stated.

Air Raid Casualties

Fewer Lesson Deaths Of Civilians Than Expected, Says Churchill

Civilian deaths in Britain attributable to air-raids numbered 32,611 to the end of last year, Prime Minister Churchill told the house of commons on the war situation.

Injuries totalled 50,609 to the end of the year, he said. Deaths from air raids in England, Wales and Scotland (military deaths excluded in the first three months of this year, he said, to the death of civilians is no-raids are apparently substantially less than the normal number in that area. But in addition to the 32,611 killed, 50,609 injured and 18,800 missing during the seven months.

Has Its Good Points

Fresh Attacked With Bad Cold Usually Never Chance To Beat

The Toronto Daily Star in a recent editorial, appeared in the New York Times, in which it stated that time we read some statistics concerning the common cold—the number of working hours lost by it, the pounds, the burden placed upon industry and the individual by reduced vitality, etc. There, are, indeed, few of us so constituted that we do not experience at least one bad cold during the rigors of winter or the changeable weather of spring and autumn. Usually, either at its first onset or after vain and ineffective attempts at prognostic doctoring, this leads to an inevitable one or two days in bed—accompanied with aspirin and physic, miserable from chills and fever.

But we are submit to our weaknesses, fretting at the discomfort, time lost, and interruption of routine re-sultant, a sense of quiet, of let-up-making itself felt. I know this is true because a friend has admitted that the one time in the year he enjoys genuine and complete rest is when he is stuck in bed with a cold. For when you are merely laid up with a cold you can be left alone, you experience no amount of attention—rest it the best medicine—and you are not disturbed much as usual as long as you are undisturbed, time matters little, and you get well.

Friends, be it rule, have the good fortune of keeping even-tempered, even-tempered, perhaps, that sympathy is no remedy for a cold. Then, if oddly enough that the nations denied at other times is more than happily poured them from all other countries. My friend was not genuine and complete rest in bed, he dreads the privations and discomforts of an illness so much that he immediately sets to Lisbon as vacation.

But though all this apparent confusion there runs an undercurrent of inner intrigue.

TRAGEDY AT MYRNAM

Mrs. John Dykstra, 35, died on Sunday from a bullet wound while being taken to the Sterling hospital. The body was found by her children, who saw her lying on the floor of the living room. She had sent the children out to play, locking the door on them. A 22 rifle was the weapon used in the tragedy. She leaves a husband and two children. Worry over straightened circumstances caused the deed.

Bells of Freedom . . .
Ring every Sunday, in Canada
"In many lands the very bells are silent—their use is denied."
Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King.
It is your privilege to attend the church of your choice . . . to worship as your conscience wills.
If Hallowed Institutions and all the liberties you love, it means standing against a form of worship prescribed by political dictators.
In the words of the Prime Minister, "When we speak of the preservation of democracy, of Christianity and of civilization, we are not idle words . . . the emotional will of these is at stake."
Freedom of worship is one of the priceless privileges that all Canadians enjoy.
That dearly-bought right is in jeopardy.
Therefore we must all unite in supporting Canada's great effort on under the Victory Bond standard.

One of the correlative passages from Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" is "The physical healing of Christian Science results now, as in Jesus' time, from the operation of divine Principle, before which sin and disease lose their reality in human consciousness and disappear as necessarily as darkness gives place to light and sin to reformation."

WORLD OF WHEAT

By H.G.L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan

Some 1300 Crop Correspondents of the Canada Grain Growers' Grain Company are estimating the wheat acreage that was sown this last year with great unusual responsibility, for on their estimates depends the amount of wheat that will be sold. The results were published in the Farmers' Guide and the Prairie Farmer, as a whole the estimates were very accurate, and that is per cent of the wheat sown in the spring of 1940 was harvested. Of course, there were a few who were a little over optimistic, and a few who were a little under optimistic, but on the whole the estimates were very accurate. Now we are asking the same correspondents to estimate the acreage that will be sown this spring. Of course, there is a great deal of uncertainty as to what the acreage will be, but we are asking them to estimate what they think will be sown, and not what they would like to see sown. Their estimates will be published in the Guide and the Prairie Farmer, and will be of great interest to the whole country. Of course, the acreage that is sown will depend largely on the moisture conditions that prevail during the next few weeks, and also on the amount of seed that is available. Some farmers have a little more seed than they need, and others have a little less than they need, but there is enough seed in the country to sow the acreage that is going to be sown this spring. Some farmers have a little more seed than they need, and others have a little less than they need, but there is enough seed in the country to sow the acreage that is going to be sown this spring.

Experience in the cheapest treatment has been the dotted line of the ordinary and the dotted line of the ordinary and the dotted line of the ordinary. Farmers, therefore, should make their purchases now, and should see that the strength remains unchanged by the time they are used.

We Stand On Guard

With the intensification of warfare on the European continent and over Britain, warnings appearing frequently in the daily press that Hitler is preparing the perfect conquest on this continent by his underground methods of subversive propaganda designed to soften up the people in the countries first of rendering them indifferent and apathetic and later completely militant if and when the time comes for overt acts, cannot be disregarded.

That this insidious and dangerous policy of paving the way for Nazi devised forces has proved successful everywhere in Europe except in Great Britain and Greece has been so amply demonstrated that the people of Canada and the United States cannot afford to be blind to its possibilities here, unless they are continually on the alert to detect the evil wherever ripples in underground channels indicate its presence, to reveal its existence wherever and whenever it is detected and to "smoke out the Nazis" in their lairs.

This does not mean that everyone whose native lineage is continental European is to be regarded as suspect. On the contrary thousands of them, the great majority are as loyal to the British cause as is the entire Anglo-Saxon world, but there is a small minority who are secretly or openly ready and willing to serve the Nazi destroyer as there are a few Quislings even among the Anglo-Saxons. For our own protection, it is the duty of all of us, to bring to the attention of the proper authorities the few who are indulging in nefarious practices designed to undermine our war effort, whether it be by word or deed. Unadulterated authority can be relied upon to take whatever steps may be necessary to render their machinations harmless.

* * * *

A Good Loyal Body

As already stated, the vast majority of Canadians of non-British origin in Western Canada are loyal to the cause of democracy to the core and dislike even Nazism, Fascism, Communism and all other isms which are inimical to the principles which form the imminent existence of liberty and freedom of the individual.

And why wouldn't they be? For did they not come to this country because they espoused the doctrines of freedom and liberty, because they wanted to be assured of these principles right to think and speak and worship as they chose and to take advantage of all the opportunities and privileges afforded by a democratic regime?

If proof were needed as to where the great rank and file of these new Canadians stand on the great issues which are now being fought out it is to be found in their own language newspapers published in this country and enjoying wide circulation among them. A few extracts from some of them indicate clearly what the great majority think about the issues of the war and the example which is being set them by their leaders.

For example, the "Nya Svenska Pressen" (The Swedish Press) Vancouver says:

"We believe that Canada has done well But the sooner that we realize that we must do better and that it is our struggle as much as that of the people of Great Britain, the better it will be for our cause We also believe that the Swedish people in Canada are as loyal to this cause as any national group. Hundreds of our sons and boys have joined the service and we believe our people generally are giving their fullest support in other ways."

Another from "Svenska Canada" (People's Gazette). Ukrainian weekly published in Winnipeg

"Farmers and workers cannot remain passive in the struggle Working people are most vitally interested, because within the British democratic system they have a chance to achieve a better life and greater prosperity, to struggle by legal means for their rights and to work toward creation of a new society of toilers, without exploitation and force. Workers and farmers of Canada must stand, together with the British working classes firmly and unswervingly on the defensive positions of our country And this must be manifested by deeds and not by words."

The Croatian Voice, "Hrvatski Glas," published in Winnipeg makes the following appeal to its people.

"We, Canadian Croatians, Serbs and Slovenes must prove to our new fatherland in the current campaign that we fully appreciate its hospitality and the freedom which we have found here . The salvation of the whole world depends on a victory of Great Britain and of democracy in general."

* * * *

For A Greater Faith

Nor is this sentiment confined to people from countries who might be suspected to be Allies if they had had the chance, as the following extract from an editorial in "Der Nordwesten," German language weekly published in Winnipeg, demonstrates

"First and foremost, let all of us who have taken upon ourselves the privileges and responsibilities of Canadian citizenship fully realize that whatever ties of kinship and sentiment we may have with other lands, that Canada must claim our first allegiance This will make it more easy to make undesirable elements to establish themselves among us. It will also help also, namely a greater faith in Canada and a much stronger unity of thought to bring about what the people in this country have long desired and purpose in making it a still greater and honored nation within the fold of the British Empire . . . Let us be ready to put into deeds and action the words of the National Anthem of our Dominion 'O Canada, we stand on guard for thee'."

Youth Training

Average Graduating Cost Of About 4,000 Each Month

Canadians will be thinking of 50,000 graduates of vocational schools and 50,000 graduates of plant schools for the year 1941 before the year will be attained was expressed in the House of Commons by Labor Minister McLarty

He said the war emergency training programme was the largest peacetime vocational training undertaking based on the requirements of the present youth training plan

Mr McLarty said present enrolment in the vocational schools indicated a average graduation of about 4,000 each month The output could be expanded as need arose and it was expected it would be larger during the summer months when high school students were on vacation

It was difficult to get figures for the plant schools, said the minister, because the government contributed to training to them They were the responsibility of the industries concerned with trained men to fill their own requirements.

Air Training Plan

R.C.A.F. Has Furnished Many Trained Airmen For Service

In development of air training, Canada has become fortunate in her proximity to the United States which had furnished from 300 to 400 trained observers for the navy and ferrying tasks. the air minister, Hon. C. G. Power said in the House of Commons

The had been an important factor in Canada's air force the United States had produced from seven to 10 per cent of the pilots in the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

Canada—and that listing included the Americans—had students as well—made up 30 per cent. of the pupils, the other 10 per cent coming from the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand.

Total Canadian air force personnel of all kinds in Canada at the moment was 8,000 officers and 48,782 airmen, the equivalent, Mr. Power said, of three infantry divisions.

Cleaning Up The Flower Garden

Some Timely Suggestions For Preparing The Garden This Spring

As soon as the snow has melted and the ground is beginning to dry work can start in the garden If the light of the perennials were not cut off in the fall they should now be removed and any branches or other trash that has collected on the beds should be carefully raked off If a mulch of manure was used in fall it should be dug into the soil If not, a dressing of well rotted manure should be scattered on the surface before the plants start to grow Artificial fertilizer of Dominion Experimental Farms

Any bushes or ornamental ranches should be removed from the shrubbery leaving careful to make a clean cut and not to leave any stubs which would spoil the effect Late-blooming shrubs can be pruned at this time

In the flower garden it is a matter to remove the protecting material as soon as the plants are showing signs of growth Once the mulch has served its purpose, and not a day longer, it should be removed from the crowns of the plants to prevent rotting

As soon as the soil is dry enough to be worked and then only carefully, it should be dug over and fine broken up Fertilizer should be worked in lightly around the plants, although less and less imported assisting stuffs are available."

In view of the importance of food production, the Minister of Labor and National Service, Hon. Norman Rogers agreed that farmers should not be called up.

"Agriculture is in the very front line of our defence," the Minister said. "As war spreads the fie demands on our shipping must become more and more severe

"The soil has become the nation's might and it must be made to produce food for man and beast."

A Thought A Day For A People Under Fire

Famous Phrase

Prime Minister Churchill's Statement Given New Variation

Prime Minister Churchill's famous phrase about the civilian population and the Royal Air Force "Never have so many owed so much to so few" is being extensively paraphrased Columbia Broadcasting system reported from London.

One example that has found its way into print, CBS reported, is this form Hitler's tribute would take to the Italian forces

"Never have so many done so little in such a long time."

Another variation cited was in connection with the Balkan situation:

"Never have there been so many who knew so little about so much."

Unanimous Response

When Winston Churchill became Britain's Prime Minister last May, the Commons in a confidence vote supported him His 4 to 1 is recor ded as the first time since then, another vote of confidence in the Premier was a unanimous shout of "Yes."

War Raises Crops

One reason why Germany and Italy desire to win their Balkan victories without fighting is that they hope to secure the crops of Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Rumania, which might be difficult if fighting began

"Are you Miss Vernon Raeburne" Startled, Dvenna turned, faced a pair of the bluest eyes she'd ever seen. "Yes—Yes, I am."

The tall young man studied her deliberately "Yes, of course. Same features, same eyes Same perfect mouth. Your mother over again—brunette version. I should have known."

Dvenna, still perched on the bottle stool repeatedly trunk where she'd been marooned for the last anxious hour, experimented with a smile and "Are you Lo Angeles' official greeter or is Bolstering Stengs welcome just a portentous habit?"

He grinned then and Dvenna felt her heart lighten.

"Re—neither. But if every country-raping something' Couldn t I take age- I thought she was the most age- I thought she was the most "Of course! Thank you so much for bothering." Dvenna murmured. She should have known her mother would be too busy to meet her. Pop her actress didn't go meeting steamships. Dvenna thought, pouting at her.

"Bother is all." Dale was saying. "I've played stand-in plenty of times but—never as parent. At that I'm not doing badly. "It's second discovering."

"Dvenna, I'm announcing the new play." Dale said. "Going to say it in Hollywood before they take it on to New York."

But she never had. The theatre claimed her, worshipped her, demanded her time and—Dvenna had become one dad. And—it may be a selfish thought—Dvenna was glad.

"Why? Is it against the rules to be attractive to Palm Springs?"

"No." His face sobered. "But it's dangerous."

They were pushing through crowded town traffic and for awhile Dale gave his attention to lights and cross ings.

Dangerous? Dvenna wondered. What was dangerous? And why had no one mentioned keep taking her name, thing wasn't just right? Certainly, Dale's manner, his words, his face had made a stab, a needle-sharp pain that gave the impression of held strength. Dvenna shivered. She remembered what an old Indian fakir had predicted to read in the cold thai happy life in these marvelous Hollywood years a month ago when she and her father had spent a holiday in Shanghai.

"Daughter of a strange destiny," the fakir had muttered, and the look in the white coal in his tray. "a great sorrow and a great love will enter your and before another moon. And the love will be more cruel than the sorrow."

"That's out for lunch," he said, smiling at her. "And I hope you don't mind if I shanghai you into a room with pioneers. After all, I'm just a poor, hard-working man, you know."

Dvenna glanced at the expensive, well-tailored suit, at the handsome leather brief case he pulled off the back shelf of the car and smiled. "Indeed, lunch his hand as to help her out of the car.

"Then that's good. I'll be on relief pretty soon if the shop in here doesn't come through with some of the dough I've been after. Dad's not exactly generous with his money

Cropping Methods

Four weeks ago we asked the question: "Will prairie soils wear out?" We answered, "Yes, unless present methods of crop production are altered."

Since the announcement of the Dominion Government Wheat Policy for 1941, it is apparent that our cropping methods will be altered. I have suggested on several occasions that the war, and the [illegible] carry-over for [illegible] largely responsible, could well serve us in a [illegible] By that I mean practices which will be better for the land, and which will check the wearing out process.

It is most unfortunate that steps were not taken last fall to prevent the exportation to the United States of the bulk of our 1940 grass seed crop. Had this been done, we could have undertaken a real soil conservation programme. Instead, government grass seeds might have been procured in great quantities will largely be used for increased cash-crop[illegible]

Extensive increases in commercial fertilizer usage will inevitably aggravate the soil drifting and water erosion problems unless adequate care is taken in tillage operations. Here, as [illegible] the conservation point of view, fallowing should be practised.

Weed control, feed reserves and [illegible] should be our watchwords [illegible]

We are starting [illegible] put the emphasis where it belongs—on the land.

A Morale Restorative

Whatever may be the ultimate outcome of the revolt of the people of Yugoslavia against the betrayal of their country by their erstwhile rulers, it is one of the most significant events that has so far occurred in the progress of the war on the European continent, and even if it does not prevent that country from eventually being subdued up by the Nazi hordes it will have a long-range and far reaching effect on the course of the conflict and possibly upon its duration.

The immediate practical effect of the unexpected turn of events in Yugoslavia, of course, it is here put a very bad string to Adolf Hitler's piano it has slowed up his triumphal march to the southeast at a time when rapid movement was a vital necessity to the success of his major offensive, the campaign to defeat Britain, before Russia could be knocked out and before material assistance from the United States turns the scales definitely against the Axis powers.

But the blow which Hitler has received at the hands of the common people of Yugoslavia can not be calculated to have an even more important effect on the functioning of morale which will be felt by the people of the three countries which have been brought under the Nazi yoke and who for six months or more have looked upon many the factors which some time will eventually be knocked off.

Further the magnificent example of the revolt of the Serbs will no doubt encourage the people of other countries who have been forced to bow to the yoke whose rulers Hitler might expect to use his powers to his gains of conquest by subversive methods, followed by display of unprincipled military might.

It is possible that history may eventually show that the stiffened resistance to Nazi demands put up by the population of Yugoslavia may prove to be the turning point in the war on the continent of Europe, not only because of its immediate result, but because of its effect on the other enemies being overrun by the Nazis.

Waiting For The Day

Out of the thick pall of smoke which overhangs the gloom of Non-ridden Europe sufficient evidence is trickling through to convince even the most doubt that millions of the subjugated peoples are anxiously awaiting the moment when from within, they can give effective help to their deliverers from without.

In every one of these subjugated countries millions are praying the gods of patience and fortitude will continue to endure the hated rule a little longer. Some of the more daring are ragging in secret acts of sabotage wherever and whenever an opportunity is afforded. In most of these countries secret and skillfully hidden radio transmitters are keeping the people informed of what is going on beyond their own narrow boundaries. As a result Hitler is forced to keep large standing armies at point in every one of the countries that he has added to his collection in the past 18 months, reducing equipment and personnel available for his program of further expansion and for carrying on his war against Britain. Even in those countries where the particularly harsh treatment as has been meted out by the Poles has been modified, the suffering of the people has been and is also sufficiently severe to make them "non-co-operative." Half-starved, while their conquerors live on the best that is available, robbed of all liberty and privileges, millions of these people are praying for the day of their release and only await the propitious moment to arise once more and strike.

Spirit in Three

A few incidents reported in the Continental press illustrate the spirit abroad in the conquered countries. Three thousand people, many of them from afar, attended the funeral of a Norwegian patriot who was killed by the bayonet of a German soldier when he resisted remarks made by the soldier while the Norwegian was walking with a girl of his own nationality in the town park of Molde.

A Dutchman was sentenced to three years when he seriously injured a German soldier in a cafe by throwing a beer glass at him. Another young Dutchmen were sentenced to 17 months imprisonment for expressing the sentiments to the German forces by taking the caps of German officers from a restaurant cloakroom and tearing them to pieces. "Certainly a costly experience for this great youth," declared the German court

In Brussels, Belgium, when Germans heard from all the other peoples' angers alight. The clamour which other German news reels are empty

In spite of tremendous privations and persecutions, Polish resistance is growing. In Kalisz, a Polish technician was imprisoned for publicly telling of damage by R.A.F raids on Berlin. In Lodz, a 17-year-old boy was sentenced to ten years imprisonment on the charge of insulting a German soldier. In Dortmund, a special tribunal sentenced a Pole to death who had left his work in Germany and roamed street. In a village near Magdeburg Germany, three German women were sentenced to 15 months imprisonment for giving food and cigarettes to Polish prisoners of war.

Incidents of these kind could be multiplied by hundreds and by thousands, if only all the information were available. It demonstrates the spirit that is abroad among these people, and the hardening effect upon them and the stimulus it will give to continued resistance on the part of those who never penetrates to the innermost corners can scarcely be over-emphasized

British Seamen Sacrifice Reelection On Pro-nazi Vote

The daughter indicated that the seaman was in a convoy attacked at night by a pack of U-boats.

Warning lights were signaled flapping from their yardarms, clinging to the rigging, ignoring depth charges, the seamen said.

Star shells "Lord Vesey lights" illuminated the sky. Machine guns swept the water. There was a noise of dull explosions as the depth charges were set off. Great columns of water were hurled up.

The merchant convoy had settled back before the first U-boat broke surface. Then the battle started.

Australian Flyers Find Weather Bureau Invaluable

Australian pilots are finding the Australian weather bureau invaluable in their operations against the Japanese, according to Flying Officer [illegible] Trenning plan.

The weather has not only been a great help to us, but has also been a source of much amusement," he said. "Some of the reports we receive are quite amusing. For instance, one report stated that the weather was 'fine, but with a few showers.' I thought that was a bit too much of a contradiction."

Vice-Marshal S J Gibbs, chief of the Australian Air Staff, said that the men had completed a tour of subsidy where they had undergone a "grim time."

Regulations do not permit a radio to marry while he is undergoing training, he said. He also revealed that the course was compressed. Although most of the Australian airmen have come to Canada from Britain, a number who left Australia before the war, they weathered the rigors of their first Canadian winter with a minimum of illness.

Discharge Liberty To Keep U-Boats Longer In The Depths

In extreme northern waters the boats abound in the late spring and early summer months, when Arctic daylight in the New York Times. They continue at one spot for submerged periods, even a period of days, in order to lower the surface. This, it is explained, will keep the submarines on the surface of the ocean where often and for longer periods than in these journeys. The men benefit from their galley at which aircraft carriers, and the long open days of daylight in these latitudes, offered to some extent the protection of darkness. Since are the watches for

Idea Not Very Popular

Prisoner Would Rather Be Hanged Than Escape

Apparently a tentative agreement has been reached between the United States and Germany on the exchange of American food in Europe and Germany. The deal was arranged by Spain. French "ships and will be interchanged under the direction of the American Red Cross. The Vichy government will be asked to give strict guarantees that none of the food will be diverted to military purposes.

Many Americans will regret that the country is to be deprived of the help of Frances No matter what the French may be supposed and whether they actually collaborated with the Germans or not, they have always shown that they sympathize with the underdog in their country's misfortunes. Many Americans will remember the kindness shown to the stranded people in France during the last war. Even the Germans were not molested.

Unfortunately the sentiment of the people in a conquered country has no effect on the policy of the conqueror. Germany has always been and will be ruthless in dealing with the people of those who subscribe to freedom, as well their sympathies and they that their future course will be governed by how they treat attempt made to the only man.

Chins Still Goes Ahead

Engineers Begin Surveys For Highway Across Mountains To India

The Small Daily Star says: There is no hanging fire about the progress of Chinese engineers has left Chungking for Assam, in Indian Bishop Province, to begin surveys for a highway from Ningyuan across Tibet and across the highest of the highest mountains in the world to Sadiya Assam India. If, constructed, the 1,000-mile highway would open a new back door to China and connect the upper Yangtze River with a railway running from Assam to India in Chitagong. The route would cross mountains 20,000 feet high and would be constructed under the direction of the Chinese Ministry of Communications. Work is to be started during dry season and completed by the end of 1942.

Canadian Talk That Does Not Add The War Effort

Ah, well, say the out-of-everything school, what is the use of worrying? Everybody is going broke anyway. We might as well spend while we have the money. If this school prevails we certainly shall go broke, and it will not be the rich who will suffer chiefly. It will be the great middle class, the vast majority of Canadians, the four million less and more who have savings in the bank, the three and a half millions who have life insurance policies.

They will be the victims of this out-of-everything theory, for that theory, if it should prevail, presents will surely mean the end of savings, of fixed incomes, of life insurance. But it need not be the end of everything if we keep our heads and tighten our belts.—Vancouver Sun.

Quoted By President Roosevelt in radio address, March 15, '41.

The President in his radio address warned the American people. . hat a half-hearted effort on these part would lead to failure and urged an all-out effort.

To us Canadians "AN ALL-OUT EFFORT" on our part is even more urgent. We must WORK full time and SAVE TO LEND full time for victory now and security after.

The Wheat Surplus Problem

With the approach of another season of seeding farmers of Western Canada are facing a serious problem, perhaps one of the most serious problems they have ever had to face since the plow was first put into the virgin soil of the province. It can be summed up in a single question — "How many acres shall I seed to wheat this spring?"

The question is not a new one. It crops up every season and each time it has to be faced, it has to be considered and reconsidered in the light of as many unknown factors, that it is always a difficult question to answer. This year it is fraught with even greater complexities, due to a very large surplus accumulated and at present undisposable, and other factors attributable to the exigencies of a state of war.

One of the greatest of these unpredictables, of course, is the duration of the war. How long is the war going to last before Hitler and Mussolini are crushed? If one had the power of occult vision and could peer into the future, and learn when unknown could be translated into a known, how unfortunately the cannot be done. Even if the answer to that question could be determined with any degree of certitude, there would still remain the unanswered: What demand will there be for this accumulating mound of bread grains among the liberated nations in Europe when they have been released from Nazi tyranny? That, too must go unanswered for the present.

It is the duty and the function of the Western Canadian farmer, as his contribution towards the war effort to provide enough wheat to feed the fighting forces of Great Britain and Canada and the civilian populations of both countries. To date this obligation is not only being met to the full but has been exceeded on magnificently that there is now a full year's crop or more in storage. After allowing for all these needs, the result of an increased acreage sown to wheat since the war started and a good all round yield. The question the farmer now has to ask himself is whether he should continue to increase his wheat acreage, permit it to remain stationary or to reduce it.

* * * *

Facing Alternatives

While producer needs to demand all, needing an answer now, the farmer is haunted by the possibility that the war might collapse suddenly and that what seems a tremendous surplus might soon be found to be only a hot summer sun to feed a hungry Europe.

On the other hand, if the war is protracted, and some of the biggest authorities, including Winston Churchill, predict several more years of conflict, the problem of continuing to pile surplus upon surplus is open to question.

Apparently the great majority of the people of this country, including the farmers themselves are willing to accept the production of a prodigious war, and, so far, events in the theatre of war justify their confidence. And there is a general feeling that the time has arrived when the burden should be put upon wheat production, in moderation, to relieve the farmer himself, as a body, appear to have come to this conclusion.

Assuming that there is general accord on the premise that a reduction in wheat acreage is advisable, the farmer is now faced with the question. How is it going to be achieved and what shall be done with the idle acreage?

The farmers and their organizations without exception, have decided that there must be no compulsion in the matter They have stated unanimously that wheat acreage shall not be reduced by government decree. In other words, by so doing, they have stated, in effect, that it is a problem which must be decided by the individual farmer for himself This means, of course, that there will be no uniformity of plan. One farmer may reduce his wheat acreage 5 or 10 per cent., another may reduce it 50 or more per cent. The only alternative would be for the farmers to come in an agreement among themselves, through their own organizations on a general percentage reduction, but it is doubtful whether that would be practicable.

* * * *

Other Considerations

However, when the individual farmer has decided to what extent he shall reduce his wheat acreage, he is faced with the question of the manner in which the cereals acreage shall be utilized. Shall it be needed to other cultivated crops, shall a larger percentage of it be summerfallowed, or shall some of it be needed to forage crops or grass for pasturage, or some of all of these purposes? Here, again, the problem can only be solved by the individual farmer who must necessarily be guided by his own circumstances and conditions, depending upon the uses to which he can put such crops .The suitability of the soil, the availability of labor, the disposition of the producer, the possibility of fitting them in with the existing conditions of the farm and many other factors.

A useful hint in this direction was given recently by the Saskatchewan minister of agriculture when he pointed out that a dangerous condition exists in the agriculture of that province, stating that along with increased wheat acreage there has been a marked increase in livestock production but a substantial diminution in provision for feed, and declared that with a continuance of drought there would be a serious shortage of feed and famine for their families. He pointed to the importance of every farmer who raises livestock, having a year's supply of feed on hand as insurance policy against such a contingency. For many farmers to all these points provision such a program would enable some reductions to be made in wheat acreage and at the same time would be a wise precaution.

Gardens in England

In Spite Of War People Still Will Have Flower Gardens.

A Central Ontario bulb grower has received an order from Hampshire for a large quantity of gladioli. It was for 75 varieties in lots of hundreds and thousands, and the recipient of the order had to call on dozens of growers in the district to help fill it.

The head of the English firm sending the order appealed that paragraph: "Although bombs may be spoiling our homes, we still are busy with our gardens. We are still carrying on. There will always be an England, and a floral one as well."

People who can think of gladioli when bombs are nightly visitors have to be admired. The Ontario growers —some of them from The Netherlands—say they are proud to be able to fill this order.—Ottawa Journal.

Amazing Episode

Brat Story That Seems With Fictional Echo Of The Sea.

All the sea stories of Melville, Conrad and Hichens seem to have a touch of the fantastic, but the following account of an amazing episode than that of the Windsor Castle.

In late November, according to one of her passengers, the Windsor Castle, outward bound for Australia was attacked by Nazi bombers. They sent a direct hit with a 500-pound bomb, which crashed down through her super-structure. For awful seconds the passengers waited for the end. But the bomb, having smashed its way down to the engine room, lay there grim and silent, but did not explode.

Nobody aboard knew how to remove the fuse. Nobody knew what caused, what caused, the bomb not to explode. Then one sapper, ex-coroner, said he could do it. And for two days the ship raced through the Atlantic, accompanied by the lifeboats, the engineers nursing their mighty engines with instructions to keep at least 10 knots an hour at wind second a time fuse, or some other unconventional thing which explained. For two days passengers and crew lived intimately with death.

Then the sapper, exploded, ex-coroner came hurrying out to reader the all-clear signal. He had removed the fuse. Nobody knew what caused, what caused, the bomb not to explode. And for two days the ship raced through the Atlantic, accompanied by the lifeboats, the engineers nursing their mighty engines with instructions to keep at least 10 knots an hour at wind second a time fuse, or some other unconventional thing which explained. The Mounting Toll

With the approach of the season when roads dry up under the gentle influence of spring sunshine when the birds sing their mating songs and all nature heralds release from the bonds of ice-locked winter, the time has arrived when grim death will appear on the highways with fresh sharpened scythe ready to mow them down.

On the one hand a joyous reawakening to new life and vigor, on the other dire destruction, injury and death.

How many people during the coming summer are destined to spend weeks and months of agony on hospital cots, how many more are going to be imprisoned in a wooden or metal casket and covered with a pile of flowers because of a moment of carelessness, a few seconds of reckless driving on the part of someone on the open road?

The fact that most automobile accidents are attributable to careless sense or recklessness on the part of drivers cannot be over-emphasized. More than fact can be driven into the motorist. Nonsensical nonsense in some type of accident told figures which constitute a black page in your motor records.

Analyses of statistics, whose enemy of conclusion can be determined, show clearly that at least two out of three accidents in which one or more automobiles are involved can be credited to mistakes made by the drivers and not the least of them is fast driving.

A survey of the toll of accidents in a recent year in the United States and published with comment on pamphlet form by one of the life insurance companies demonstrates the need for greater caution. Not only does it show the gets out on to the public thoroughfare and parties lately the still greater need for restraint when driving through built-up areas.

Reviewing The Causes

This survey showed that the rate of death per accident which involved exceeding the speed limit was 39 per cent. worse than the average death rate for all accidents due to improper driving practices. "In accidents resulting from reckless driving, the rate of death was 32 per cent worse and when cases run off the roadway because of improper driving, likely the rate of death was 37 per cent. worse than the average."

And some of this recklessness and the utter stupidity which it brought in its train were definitely attributable to the use of liquor by drivers of the cars involved in crashes, for we read, "Of all drivers in accidents, 8.1 per cent. were declared to have been under the influence of liquor. But of all drivers in fatal accidents, 6.3 per cent were declared to have been under the influence." Thus the fatal accident expert fee of drivers intoxicated was 118 per cent worse."

So we find that most of the accidents involving injury and death could have been avoided had the driver exercised reasonable care, that a very substantial percentage of these accidents would not have occurred had the driver travelled at reasonable speed, and that in too many cases, abstention from liquor would have eliminated much suffering and many funerals.

There is another factor which may be a contributing cause of an additional number of accidents in Western Canada this spring and summer and that is the condition of the roads. Due to lack of funds during the long period of years of depression, highways have not been kept in the same state of efficiency and good repair that would have been the case had the west been prosperous. The disintegration which has been hastened has been accentuated by an increasing use of heavy and heavily-laden trucks for commercial traffic. Thaws two common combined have resulted in highways which are not safe as they ought to be and this condition alone should urge the motorist to use discretion when tempted to press the accelerator flush.

* * * *

A Good Campaign

If the mounting toll of misery, suffering and death occasioned by the reckless use of the highways is to be curbed and brought down to less startling figures than appear in the annual statements of accident records it would appear that an all-out campaign of education must be carried out until every driver on the highway is thoroughly aware to the danger to which carelessness involves himself and others, and is willing to urged himself to the exercise of care, caution and courtesy on every occasion and at all times.

It is true that efforts have been made in this direction so far insistence that safety campaigns conducted by the R.C.M.P. over the radio. What has been done in the direction to date is not enough. Every agency must be pressed into service to carry on a mass educational campaign among motorists and the exercise of reasonable care in driving be regarded along their consciousness and becomes second nature as soon as they get behind the wheel.

Coupled with this there should be complete co-operation between the police and all other agencies and authorities to ensure enforcement of the law and the regulations which have been laid down to make the use of the roads safe for the general public whether afoot or afoot.

When public conscience is fully aroused to the necessity for this duty in effect it can be taken for granted that injury and death on the highway will be reduced to the minimum, but until then, it will not.

Women Are Like That

"Mrs Williams always asks the price of anything that I happen to be wearing," said Mrs. Brown. "Rather a check, don't you think?"

"Decidedly," replied Mrs. Black. "What has she been trying to find out recently?"

"She wanted to know how much I paid for this dress."

"What an inquisitive creature she must be. How much did you tell her?"

The Germans have managed to drag King Boris' fads into the indigenous, but it will be interesting to see what happens if they try to put their feet on Ottoman.

The Little Times

Oh, I would praise the little times
Where snow, by word of mouth, is cold;
Where men salt slender earnings down,
And sin themselves when they are old;
Where friends are proven, neighbors are,
If gladness comes, or grief is borne;
Where children learn to give and share,
And living rooms are family rooms;
Where one grows cemetery browse
The summer drought, and all the cold
Stay flower-fresh, and certain graves
Are favored with forget-me-nots;
Where help is always near at hand,
And honor comes to him who strives;
Where people know each other, and
The deeds of each other's lives!
—Jane Hoyes, in the Country Gentleman.

Must Be Treated Decently

Nearly every American in the submarine problem refers to the kind and hopeful fact that about 90 per cent of all the U. S. submarine officers and men have been to Annapolis. It is a point of considerable interest to the health of the American Navy to ascertain if the Annapolis training produces a type of officer and man peculiarly adapted to submarine warfare. Is there something in the Annapolis spirit which makes for success in this particular branch of the service? Or is it merely a matter of chance that so many submarine officers have been graduated from the Naval Academy?

Whatever the reason, the fact remains that the submarine officers and men are the pick of the service. They are the cream of the cream. Their standards are high. Only individuals of the highest type are accepted for submarine service. The training is severe, but the results are worth while. The submarine officer and man is a man of brains, courage, initiative, resourcefulness and self-reliance. He is a man who can think and act quickly in an emergency. He is a man who can be depended upon to do his duty, no matter what the odds against him.

The submarine officer and man

CANADA CALLS

Canada has reason to count her blessings in these days of trial.

Canada is three thousand miles away from the sound of guns which are devastating Europe.

The broad Atlantic Ocean rolls between us and the ruthless savagery of the German Armies.

The strongest fleets in the world—British, American and Canadian—patrol the sea between us and the enemy.

We have a great friendly nation, probably the richest and most powerful in the world, at our side.

CANADA CAN AFFORD HER SACRIFICES

This war is a mechanized war.

We have the nickel . . . copper . . . lead . . . zinc and other metals the war industries need. We have access to the iron. We can make the steel.

We have the organized industries to fabricate these metals and make the trucks, and tanks, and guns, and planes, and the ships.

We have skilled workers and the plants for mass production. Canada has the wheat and the food supplies.

Let us count our blessings, and tighten our belts.

Canada is rich—one of the richest countries per head of population in the world. Let us lend our strength to the utmost of our power. Our national future depends upon Victory.

We must win to live.

THERE WILL BE FURTHER CALLS

There have been many calls upon the people of this country for money since Canada entered the war at the side of Great Britain.

There will be further calls.

Let us face the future unafraid.

Canada can carry the load.

But every Canadian must shoulder his and her share.

This is the most critical hour in our history. Let the future historians say of Canada, as they will say of our Mother Country: "This was their finest hour."

Throw a jug of water in an old grain sack,
Hitch up the mules, slip down the lane,
Must get the hay in, looks like rain.

Weeds and Flowers

Last year our garden had a patch which would annual flowers and young seedling trees. I was faced with the usual task of weeding which I did from time to time, pulling those weeds out by hand. Of course I had to get down on my knees to do it. Then I got a hoe and cut down a few of the weeds. Then I got a rake and raked the weeds together and carried them away. The garden looked well on the surface but I noted the plants were not doing as well as I expected. The grass began to grow in the annual flower beds. We are preparing a summer garden with annual flowers, planting and labelling specimen trees, shrubs and vines, a complete display of which may be viewed during the Agricultural Representative Train, West Line Elevators Association, this summer.

We are planning now to spend more time and work on the garden this year. I intend to keep the weeds down and if possible to keep them out altogether. I intend to keep the soil in such a condition that it will be easy to work and will produce the best results. Salvaging To Serve

Canada's latest war effort is one to which practically every person in the country can make some contribution, no matter how poor he or she may be. Every head of a household, every housewife and even most of the youth of the Dominion can assist this effort in some form or another and that glory is helping to win the war and bring it to a successful conclusion at an earlier date.

Reference is made to the campaign recently launched on a national and organized scale to collect throughout the length and breadth of the land waste material, which would otherwise be allowed to rust or rot, to gather waste material, which would otherwise be allowed to rust or rot, to gather it together and deliver it at centralized collection depots where it can be shipped to factories and workshops for processing and conversion into war-essential munitions and materials to be used in the great task of stabbing the world of Nazism and of restoring freedom to the enslaved.

This is a magnificent effort in the battle for freedom in which practically every rural and urban resident of the country can freely participate and at very little cost with the exception of the expenditure of some time and energy, and yet it is an effort which can and will play a highly important role in the prosecution of the great adventure to which the people of Canada have committed themselves.

There is no lack in Western Canada which does not harbor its quota of scrap metal, discarded implements, waste iron and scrap metal of all kinds which have accumulated during the pioneer days and have been added to during the later expansion period. In every town and village are large accumulations of discarded and waste material are to be found lying on vacant lots, behind barns and sheds and outbuildings.

There are few attics and basements in villages and towns and on the farms which could not contribute materials, that would never otherwise be used yet if rescued would form a valuable contribution to the task in hand to which we have pledged our money and our energies, our time and our talents to the utmost limit.

Materials In Abundance

And what are these materials which are now being so eagerly sought for weapons in our fight against Hitler and his Nazi hordes? They are scrap iron and steel and non-ferrous metals, rags and waste paper, bones, tin foil and rubber, the last-mentioned being the basic name for bottles and glass, and other materials which Canadians waste to the tune of millions of dollars every year.

And what is going to be done with these materials, once they have been salvaged and transported at this junction where they can be converted into materials of direct and indirect use in the war effort? At the present moment the matter is going to be turned into sheet welding, fabricating points waste paper is going to be turned into sheet welding, fabricating points waste paper is going to be turned into sheet welding, fabricating points and bones are to be used in the manufacture of aeroplane parts scrap iron will be converted into shrapnel, bones will become glycerine for high explosives and other materials, which, perforce, will appear in other forms of war materials. For example sacks and fibre are needed for the manufacture of bags to replace bags from Canada which is now difficult to obtain because cotton bottoms are more urgently needed for other war requirements.

With the application of scientific methods to industry in more recent years, supplemented by the discovery of new and more scientific processes, it is surprising the number of valuable uses to which waste materials can be put. It is surprising the number of valuable uses to which waste materials can be put to, and the increasing needs of these materials in the war economy of the nation, no doubt would be surprised to hear that about ten pounds of tin foil, an amount which is easily procurable in almost any community will sell for sufficient money to buy a package of cigarettes. Eight tons of scrap iron will sell for sufficient money to buy a package of cigarettes. Eight tons of scrap iron will pay

Warning Against Mailing Cigarett Lighter Fluid

Despite the recent caution given against including inflammable substances in the mails, Hon. William P. Mulock, K.C., Postmaster General, states that this dangerous and illegal practice is still continuing.

Cigarette-lighter fluid is still being mailed in considerable quantities. The Police are advised that cigarette-lighter fluid must not be sent through the mails. The danger of doing so, especially under war time conditions must be apparent, for should this substance ignite it might cause great loss to the mails or postal premises, and if in transit, to the mail train or the ship as well as injury to postal employees. Some weeks ago attention was directed to the fire hazard caused by matches which ignited in a parcel already sorted into a mail bag at the Base Post Office.

Postal regulations prohibit the mailing of any substance explosive, dangerous or destructive substance or liquid, or any matter, etc. likely to injure any letter or other mailable matter, or the property of the officer or servant of the Post Office. Public co-operation is solicited in helping the Canadian Postal Corps safeguard the mails.

DAUGHTER OF DESTINY

Eleanor Atterbury Cohen

CHAPTER II

Wong led the way around a curved hallway past handsomely furnished bedrooms. His padded slippers made no sound on the polished floor. Only the click of her own heels as they made a little procession of two through the deserted hallway. Finally Wong entered one of the rooms set down her luggage.

"Will there be anything else Miss"? His standing Oriental eyes seemed too cold. Emotionless as impassive inscrutable.

Still Devona sensed the strange [illegible] As if he'd resented her coming.

No, that's all thank you she said, abruptly

"Very good Miss." He bobbed that still little bow at her again before he turned the door behind him.

Annoyed Devona tried to shrug off the rude-ness feeling of cold hostility. It was something like the sensation she'd known once when a devil's colors rained its hooded head out of her bathtub.

But that [illegible] little cheechie was far away India. This was Chilcrman and Wong was undoubtedly only a Hindoo well trained servant. Her strange life gripping into for places had made her super-sensitive She must remember she was no longer a [illegible] try where every strip was small, alien, horrible death, lurked around every corner

There could certainly be no danger lurking in this beautiful place. She glanced around the lovely room. Her very own. Cool blue drapes against soft ivory walls, rich carved ashes chest that might have come directly from an old Mission chapel. Even white fur on a lovely pin-kore.

And beyond, a startlingly blue bathroom with square fish and spicy aromas pervading from the mosaic of tile on the walls.

From a long window opening onto a grilled iron balcony she looked down into a garden. A formal, enlaced costly conservatory in the distance. For a moment she had expected some handsome, golden Hindoo—some Jon Hunter, guitar in hand—to serenade her from the fragrant patio.

Like a story book or a movie set or a dream. Perfect And all this —the terror into the room again—her mother's home And now her own home, too. A place where she could forget about trunks and storage bonus and passports. A place where she'd never have any baggages but her own. Never see Denton in war or pestilence stalking through the streets.

"I'm so lucky," she whispered aloud. "So very lucky."

Some one tapped softly at her door.

Vara Vadoo returned? Her heart rising. Devona called, "Come in."

The door opened carefully. A small, grim face in a gray sunbonnet smiled her way in. Devona's heart went back to normal.

"Buenos noces, Senorita." The girl stepped short, her big dark eyes with long lashes fixed on the small girl. "Have I a mistake? You are the Senorita Rochester?"

Devona nodded. "Yes. Why do you think you'd made a mistake?"

The [illegible] dark-skinned maid still hesitated. "I thought, they said Senorita Rochester is the small girl." Then, recovering her manners, "May I help you to dress, Senorita? Dinner will be served in one hour."

"Why—yes. Thank you."

After a maid to help her dress? Devona plushed herself to be sure she wasn't dreaming.

An hour later, when Margarita had unpacked the last touch of pencil over Devona's gleaming shoulders, tucked a tiny rhinestone comb into a rosebud coil, she stepped back, smiling, to see.

"Yes, too, are beautiful, Senorita," she said shyly.

"Thank you, Margarita."

Excitement thrusting through her veins like heady wine, Devona thrilled to the new version of herself the mirror gave her. Would any one ever guess this was the first time in her life she'd worn a real evening gown? Dad had always shunned society everywhere.

Time enough when you're grown up, he'd always say, and pack her off to another school.

Grown up. Devona pursued it closely. Her hair piled into a shower of satiny curls on top of her head, her face set with exciting the rich glow from the mirrored wall behind her. She'd grown up in new earnest. The dress itself was so sexy—and so subtle as the skill of a famous French couturier could make it. And as subtly as the Margitta had said dinner.

But she decided now it had been a gift. Soft shrugs that slyly clipped her breast long enough to [illegible] that followed the lithe curves of her slim figure. No one could call her "little school girl" now!

"Was there anything else Senorita?" The girl hesitated at the door.

"No, thank you."

May I say Senorita the little maid added shyly, "you look like a queen. I hope you will be very happy here."

"I'm sure I will, Margarita," and when she'd slipped silently away, Devona hurried her face in her hands and murmured a little prayer of thanks to the heady destiny that was making everything so unbelievingly perfect.

The sound of voices in the hallway, some one's footsteps, low-voiced laughter, jerked Devona erect again. That must be her mother. Impulsively instantly she was sure of it. No one but a beautiful woman would laugh like that And suddenly Devona was shivering

The footsteps came to her door

Brunhilda, Devona managed "Come."

The scene one opened the door—a gorgeously beautiful scene one thought. pened as if Devona thought irrelevantly waiting for applause to die down before she made her entrance.

"Vara Vadoo!" she murmured, unconsciously speaking the name that came first to her lips.

It wasn't until long afterward that she realized how very significant those first two words had been.

Then, almost as an afterthought—"Mother!" She took a step toward her

Vara smiled, slowly "So this is Devona."

She's beautiful, Devona thought. More beautiful than Dad said. No wonder he loved her."

Vara leaned against the door, every line a graceful curve. "I hadn't realized you'd be such a young lady. Her piano teacher had spoken of Devona's gown, coiffure. "Your photographs don't do you justice."

Conscious of her own awkwardness, the strange formality as if this were just a meeting of casual strangers, Devona scratched her mother's face anxiously for some sign.

"It's been more than 14 years, Mother," she reminded her quietly, her babbling stories of the moment before sliding away now.

Vara moved toward her and, as if it were a bit of much-rehearsed stage business, kissed her gently first on one cheek, then the other Cool, faintly little kisses that hadn't, Devona realized with a stabbing little pang, left even a rouge mark.

"Yes, of course." Vara dropped onto the deep-cushioned chair-lounge, shrugging off expensive sables. "I'm so sorry I couldn't meet your boat."

"I was disappointed, too," Devona said simply. "But—Mr. Denton? I mean—was very kind. We had such a pleasant ride out and—"

Devona bit her lip. She sounded silent here, talking to her own mother like this, as if she were a visitor September on a tour of grade. So stiff and formal and strange. Mother would think she wasn't really glad to see her.

"I'm glad to see you, Mother," Vara's voice handsome, took a cigarette from a gold [illegible] case. "When did you arrive?"

About an hour ago. Your maid was so kind about helping me unpack. I'm a—Mother" is no here and she began impulsively Then through a cloud of smoke, she saw the cool smile in her mother's eyes and so grateful for—every-thing she'd known Wong

Are you? Vara said sway — Vara resented the word "Hannah. And you'll no doubt remain my guests We aren't so elaborately formal here you know"

"I'm sorry, Mother" Devona's head flew to the fastening of the pearly red velvet. "Shall I change—something else —"

"Oh, never mind As long as you're all dressed up, wear it." Vara smiled carelessly Later when we've had time to make plans for you, we'll make more appropriate selections."

Cheeks scorching, Devona blinked back tears. "Yes, Mother."

Vara smoored over her cigarette "By the way, please don't call me Mother before the friends don't know about you. And none of my public Besides,"—her lovely lips twisted into a little grimace, "having you say that makes me feel so—middle-aged. You'll call me Vara."

"Yes Vara."

Vara smiled then—a lovely smile but somehow it never reached her eyes. Dan along devastating new and new off your guard years. I'll

A Valuable Weed

Common Shorebird Best Agency For Finding Gold In Ground

A weed which grows profusely in Canada and the United States—the common horsetail — "is the best agency yet discovered for finding gold in the ground."

At a recent meeting of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, Dr. Hans Lundberg, Toronto geophysicist, told the story of the horsetail as a gold finder.

Dr Lundberg said that many plants growing over ore bodies extract metal from the ground. "The horsetail, however, is the most efficient miner of the lot."

The chief value of the discovery, said Dr Lundberg, lies in the use of the horsetail to locate gold deposits However, it is conceivable that in an area where the gold deposit is thin—too thin to make—the horsetail could be planted and would extract the precious metal.

Horsetail can accumulate a gold content that many hour and a half ounces to the ton of horsetail, Dr. Lundberg said—Toronto Star Weekly.

The average, however, is brought down by those on the island youth who recognize a passerby only then necessary.

THE EIGHTH DECENNIAL
Census of Canada
June 2, 1941

THE Census is the stock-taking of the nation — of its men, women, and children; its agriculture, trade, and industry; its housing, and general social condition. By it, all Governments, — Dominion, Provincial and Municipal—are enabled to work more effectively and economically in the interest of every resident of the Dominion.

IN these days of increasing Government responsibilities, no Government can give the best service unless it has detailed and accurate knowledge of the people and their varying circumstances. That is why we request the co-operation of all Canadian citizens in the taking of the Census. When the Government's Enumerator calls at your door, receive him courteously and give him all the information for which he asks.

Remember that he is in your service. Accuracy and despatch in your replies will promote good administration in your country, now under stress of war and facing crucial post-war reconstruction.

ALL INFORMATION SUPPLIED WILL STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL
You can place absolute trust in the official Enumerator, who is sworn to secrecy. All the information which you provide will be held in strictest confidence both by him and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, and can never be used against you by any law-enforcing, military, or other agency, or in any court of law.

It is compulsory by law to answer the questions, but you will be assisting your Government in these difficult times by giving the information readily and accurately in the spirit of good citizenship.

Issued by authority of The Honourable JAMES A. MacKINNON, M.P., Minister.

EMPIRE DAY

Alix and the surrounding district forgot all about work and worry, and on Monday enjoyed Empire Day. The Holiday festival planned for months ahead was a tremendous success. In the morning the skies were watched anxiously for signs of wind or rain, but even the weather man was on his best behaviour, and arranged an almost perfect day.

At one o'clock the parade formed at the United church and led by the Red Cross Float (prettily decorated with white roses) swung through the principal streets of the village. Then followed the Girl Guides' motor lorry, the Boy Scouts, Knights of Pythias, Pythian Sisters, Rebekahs, Oddfellows, and Pipe Boys, and finally the members of the Alix Boy Scouts' Troop. The Band of the 19th 2 Calgary Regiment (mounted Rifles), Alta., playing martial music, some men, appropriately dressed Pierrots, Pierrettes, Gore and Bilkes completed the parade. Prizes were awarded for Alix school float, Boy Johnson's entry, and Billy Johnson's Alix, Pyke's Pharmacy for store window, Joyce Frye for tricycle. From the United Church the parade traveled along Second street to Findlater's corner, from there to Lake street and on to Main street, up Main street to the highway, along to the Alberta Lumber Co. corner, and then back to the school grounds where the May Queen was crowned in state. Then they Queen and her attendants walked to the platform under an archway of Red Deer and Golden and Boy Scouts. The May Queen, Dora Gore, and her two maids of honour, Bessie Wilton and Marie Pyke, and the two flower girls Gertrude Foster and Joyce Whitfield, the two page boys, John Wilson and Ronnie Wray, made a very pretty picture. Grandma Mitchell, the old lady of Alix, crowned the Queen after which the two flower girls, and the page boys presented bouquets of flowers to the Queen, Grandma, and the maids of honour.

One of the prettiest scenes which followed was the May Pole dance, twenty-four little girls of the Alix school dancing around the May Pole intertwining and long streamers of red, white and blue, in the form of the band.

The Bantam and Kicking school children, Margaret Wray, Ina's tug between Mary tender, and Hazel drill, the Girl Guides, Boy Scouts and Brownies, each contributing largely to a well rounded out programme.

The balance of the afternoon was spent in the various sports, girls' teams play soft ball, the Scouts basket ball, Bantam and Alix girls 50 to 4 in favour of the latter girls, Bantam boys 10 to 4 in favour of Alix. Senior boys 7 to 6 in favour of Alix. Bronco relayed our Alix intermediates score 30 to 16 in favour of Alix.

Mr. Bantam's pocket also contributed to the fun with some of the band left, and kept the public informed throughout the afternoon.

The popular Manchester Orchestra again put in an appearance in the evening, so in "Highland" words we sum up the day.

It isn't the game or amusement nor the

But the close co-operation that makes them win the day;

It isn't the band that's played, nor the money

as a whole,

But the overlaying team-work of every blessed soul.

Many thanks to everybody.

Sacrifices Here And There

The Canadian national income for the fiscal year ending March 31 1942 has been officially estimated at $5,500,000,000, time enough to call it an billion dollars. During the same fiscal year the people of this country will make a direct contribution towards the war effort of an estimated $1,650,000,000 and an indirect contribution of $1,100,000,000 representing what Great Britain has estimated as her account for war materials supplied by this country to her during the same period.

A little mental arithmetic shows that these combined contributions of the people of this country towards smashing Nazism during the current fiscal year will cost the people of this country approximately $1 per cent [illegible]

Would it then be added that we very substantial sums that have been contributed and one can be sure will continue to be contributed, by way of purely voluntary effort for the support and comfort of the armed forces and war effort of our country and of Great Britain, for the assistance of victims of aggression in the Old Land and elsewhere and for other kindred objectives? Canadians have every reason to feel that they are not holding a back seat.

Indeed, in the light of such a war record, to quote Prime Minister Mackenzie King, for the third reading of the war appropriation bill, "without boasting and without vainglory, we may all take pride in the vision the spirit, the resolution and the achievements of the Canadian people."

Yes, that is quite an achievement and entails considerable sacrifice, sacrifice when the people of Canada are quite willing to make to answer that ultimately right shall prevail over might, and there is no guarantee that Canadians may have to make even greater sacrifices then payment of 44 per cent of the national income before the goal is finally reached.

* * *

In Lesser Britain

After all, when one compares the lot of the average Canadian with that of his relatives and friends who are longing the brunt of the shock of battle in Great Britain, a continuation of 44 per cent of the national income is not excessive.

Despite this contribution, it is a fair assumption that practically every resident in this country will during the fiscal year 1942-43 enjoy more luxury, more meals a day with a free range choice of diet, not only in quantity but in variety; that every Canadian will be able to enjoy a good night's sleep every night throughout the year's end; that there will be ample to deal with the collapse of his house under a rain of bombs, that no Canadian will suffer from exposure for lack of sufficient clothing to keep him warm.

In the Motherland, on the other hand, not only are the people willingly and cheerfully devoting one half of their income to the prosecution of the war, but they are suffering dietary inconvenience which the well fed Canadian would find irksome to say the least. They are existing on ingenious rations of meat to conserve space in ocean bottoms for much needed war materials. Consumption of butter has been cut very sharply and the use of some other food commodities has been materially curtailed or entirely disappeared entirely. On top of that, they never know when they retire for the night whether they will live to see another day.

If in these respects the Canadian is better off than his friends and allies in the United Kingdom, has let a inducement to suggest, more tolerable and more enjoyable than that of the freedom-loving people of any other European country, now under the grinding heel of the ruthless Nazi conqueror.

* * *

And In Norway

In illustration one has only to cite the predicament in which the people of Norway find themselves after one year of Hitler's rule. In that country where conditions are not yet as harsh as in Poland, a large army of occupation estimated at 300 000 men, continues to requisition meat, eggs and other foods, and the Norwegian puppet-Nazis have first pick. A letter received in Great Britain from Fru Ose in Norway states that "meat is scarcely be found anywhere, and even farmers who have pigs are not allowed to use them for their own families." Bread is made with so many ingredients that it tastes like cardboard, and "as for real flour that can't be bought in the shops."

In northern Norway where fish is the staple support of the population, fishermen cannot get gasoline for their boats, and the country's supply of dried stock fish, 7 000 tons, has been seized without compensation. Cod liver oil pills have been stopped. Germany wants liquids to use in bartering for products needed by the Reich, so they have demanded 16,000 tons for themselves and 8,000 tons for Italy despite the fact that Norway's annual production of liquids is only 13,000 tons.

An inkling of the clothing situation in Norway is given by the author of another letter received in Great Britain in which the writer says "You can't think of buying anything without a ration card, not even thread, yarn or a long piece of cloth. We get 200 coupons per year in our card, but a dress requires 110 coupons and a little yarn 20 coupons. Men can only get one suit or overcoat a year. I am in luck now when I think how many coupons it takes just to buy stockings for the boys."

It is well that fortunate Canadians who are asked to contribute 44 per cent, of the national income to "fight the good fight" should think of the plight of these people in other lands, when they open their purse strings.

Sea Water Harmful

A person adrift at sea will live longer by taking no water at all than by drinking sea water. Sea water is so salty that, while the kidneys are eliminating the excess salts, water from the blood plasma is lost, thus hastening death.

An Efficient Organization

The parasites get into the mouths of fish and assory lions. The tiny butterfly fish swim into the mouths of these larger fish to remove the parasites while the "patient" holds perfectly still.

More than 4,000 earthquakes causing the death toll of a million persons, have occurred since the Christian era began.

Why CANADA MUST BORROW $600,000,000

A Statement by the Minister of Finance

In money alone, this war is costing Canada in round figures, $4,000,000 a day. That is three and one-quarter times the daily cost of the last year of the last war. This comfort comes so much more because it is a battle of plant, earth machines . . . as well as of men. And to build other than the very best machines would be fatile. They must be worthy of our men.

Canada does not . . . and will not . . . sacrifice men for lack in quality or quantity of fighting machines. Hence we must produce them on a scale hitherto undreamed of.

To do this, Canada needs now to borrow from her citizens at least $600,000,000 in addition to the revenues raised by taxes. To obtain this money Canada will on June 2nd offer Victory Bonds.

Fortunately, Canadians have the money to buy these Victory Bonds. This is shown by a greatly expanded national income and by record savings deposits.

If every person who has savings or who can make payments out of wages or income will invest in Victory Bonds, the Loan will be quickly subscribed. But the wholehearted support of every citizen is necessary.

What Canadians have done before, Canadians can and will do again. Our population is now less than nine millions. In 1918 and 1919, Yet in November, 1918, our people invested $616,000,000 in Victory Bonds. Eleven months later, in October, 1919, they invested $572,000,000. The total subscribed for Victory Bonds in these two loans was $1,188,000,000. This year, with our population increased to nearly nine twelve millions, the nation that did it before can do it again—and in greater measure.

The name of the Loan will be announced May 31st. Get ready to buy every Bond that you can.

Help finish the job!

DOWN ON THE FARM

Work all summer, till winter is nigh,
Then figure at the bank and heave a big sigh,
Worked all the year, didn't make a thing;
Lose cash now than I had in the spring.
Some folks say there ain't no hell;
Shucks! They never farmed, how can they tell?
When spring rolls 'round I take another chance,
As fate grows longer on my old gray pants.
Give me gallons a hitch, but another jerk.
By gosh! I'm ready for another years work!

Unemployment Insurance becomes an actuality in Canada from July first. For the Workers who are subject to periods of unemployment through no fault of their own it will mean the difference between being enrolled or charity and the self-respect of having provided for their own welfare through a plan of insurance savings.

The plan is one of co-operation between the employer, the employee, and the Government. Each makes a contribution based on the weekly wages earned by the employee. To the amount contributed by the employer and the amount deducted from the employee's wages, the Government adds one-fifth of the total, and pays for the cost of operation. These contributions are similar to insurance premiums, and accumulate against the day when the worker, either male or female, becomes unemployed. Then, in a very short time the worker begins to receive weekly the sum which will continue for a limited period of unemployment.

This, briefly, is the Unemployment Insurance Plan which becomes a law of Canada, just as it has been a law in Great Britain for more than thirty years. With the experience of the British Act as well as the examples of other Countries to draw upon, the Unemployment Insurance Commissioner has created a plan which should operate with the greatest inconvenience to the employer and to the greatest possible benefit to the workers.

A unique and simple system of making contributions to the Fund through the Employer purchasing special stamps from the Post Office and affixing them each week in a book designed for the purpose, is the record of each worker's contributions, as well as the employer's. In this way every worker can find out exactly at any time where he or she stands in respect to Unemployment Insurance.

There are some classes of workers who are not eligible for Unemployment Insurance, and there are certain conditions which effect all workers. Both employers and employees should familiarize themselves with the terms of the plan which will be made available by the Postmaster in the locality where you live.

Apart of the plan is the opening of Employment Offices throughout the Country, where workers may seek jobs and employers can seek workers. These offices will be opened as rapidly as possible to facilitate the most effective utilization of Canada's labour force during the war and in preparation for the return of workers to peace-time employment after war work has ceased.

FOR EVERY CANADIAN who sails the deep, for every airman who flashes through the skies, and for every other man in the fighting forces, the prayers of the nation "rise like a fountain, night and day."

In times of crisis our people stand steadfast. In daily devotions they renew the flame of faith and arm with unseen powers their warriors in the field.

Oftentimes they discern the Unseen Hand. Witness the miracle of Dunkirk. Witness, too, in the darkest hours the emergence of great inspiring figures to steady the ranks of Democracy and fire its courage and confidence.

Church bells are ringing throughout Canada calling men and women to worship and sacrifice in defence of our freedom, the sanctity of our homes and the future of our children.

Health With Wheat

As a stimulus to a more permanent agriculture, the federal government's policy of buying wheat may well prove to be a blessing in disguise, and the time may come when those farmers, if there are any left, who are inclined to indulge in a bit of grumbling at the government, will be impossible to satisfy unless they can grow a crop of wheat and sell it to themselves.

Winston Churchill has said that sometimes the prevented men lives of a set to the firm belief of Phyllis Mole whose book, "I Was Winston Churchill's Private Secretary" is off the press

As proof of her assertion, Miss Mole recited these facts: "At the age of four, he fell out of bed and broke his hand and suffered concussion. At 17 he fell 50 feet off a bridge onto a stony river-bed. When he was in his observer with the Spanish army in Cuba, a bullet whipped over his head just as he leaned over to reach for a sandwich!

At Omdurman, an injured right arm caused him to carry a Mauser pistol instead of a saber and thanks to the pistol, he shot his way to safety out of a gap by a group of maddened dervishes. On the western frontier in India and in the Boer War he came unscathed through engagements in which most of those around him were killed.

"In the first World War Churchill once left his dugout for a few minutes and was blown to pieces by a heavy shell," continued Miss Mole. "He has been private secretary to a number of prominent statesmen, but who considers her career one of the most unusual for a woman? She was quite secretaryship to and all private secretaryships are alike for no one is concerned. "He has been invariably in countless photo counties. DAUGHTER OF DESTINY

— BY —

CHAPTER IV.

That moment Wong announced dinner — and reprieve for Devona. The sudden stir of voices, the movement across the long drawing room to the big, cool dining room beyond gave her time to marshal her composure. It was so ridiculous, being upset like this just because a man she'd met less than 12 hours before smiled at some other woman.

Still she couldn't smother the little hope that at least she would be placed next to Dale at the table [illegible] tried Vera to catch some half-articulated remark. If Dale came in now with Vera——

Dinner finally dragged to an end and dancing was begun on the long verandah overlooking the garden.

At the end of the first number Talbot released her hand looking down at her as if for the first time I knew you'd dance well," he said abruptly.

"Did you? How?"

"Oh, you walk well. Gracefully. Few American women do. It's important! I think

The music began again, and Talbot took her back into his arms. "You've had an unusual education, haven't you?"

I've been exposed to education in some strange places if that's what you mean she smiled Swiss convent, French boarding schools. Big both hikers and a father who thought a trip to [illegible] would make a man out of me. Perhaps I've learned more important than a college degree."

And wasn't it."

Dale is [illegible] Vera in his arms, dancing past her shoulder. Maybe if she'd given up to the conventional sophistication of her mother's bright world it would have been easier to [illegible]

And when the dreamy waltz ended, Talbot said, "You're a very serious — Now long are you staying here?"

Devona started. "Why- I don't know. Indefinitely perhaps. This is my home."

Tal shook his head. "I'm not sure you should. I am afraid all this may prove a bit dull. Unless you're crowded room the shrill clatter of [illegible] and the din of [illegible] steamed glasses. You're rather perfect you know just as you are."

Devona flushed. Never had she resist between the lines of his words. Just what did he mean? A child, was she, not grown up enough to be interesting to her mother's worthy friends? Was Tal's way of telling her she wasn't wanted here?

In the middle of that thought, George Bernard tapped Tal's shoulder.

"Having a good time?" Bernard slipped his arm around her waist.

He danced well, with a sensuous, practiced ease that made Devona feel awkward and self-conscious. Presently, having coolly, cooked up at him. "Lovely Dear mother— Yes, I suppose you'd like to dance with me."

Devona looked down at her. "Happy? Yes?" Bernard shook his head. "Why?"

"Ambition, I guess." Then, abruptly he pulled disappeared behind a [illegible] "How long do you plan to stay here?"

Startled, Devona stared at him. "You've the second person this evening who has asked me that question. Why do you?"

"Because this is no place for you." "But why not?" Anxiously, she searched his face, as there shadowed her own most precious secret.

"You don't even belong to this generation—much less a gang like [illegible]

In that you're R. That you probably would have loved mother. That she was just one out of the Victorian era with about as much glamour as [illegible]

"Then I don't belong!" Devona's face [illegible] "I'm sorry I don't—"

Bernard ends indulgently. As if she thought, suddenly angry, she gave a little [illegible] rather [illegible] to stay or past her bedtime."

"You're [illegible] bored, suggested [illegible]

"And that means an [illegible]" Vera [illegible]

MARCH WITH CANADA'S CITIZEN ARMY!

Fleets . . . resolute . . . fired with the spirit of patriotic endeavor, men and women throughout the length and breadth of the land welcome the VICTORY LOAN as a personal opportunity to "do something real" in the war.

Not with the battle dress and weapons of our gallant troops, but armed with dollars, the great citizen army has swung into action.

For all those who have dollars laid by or dollars to come, now is the time to re-dedicate their faith in the Empire's struggle, and to hasten the time of victory.

Turn your money into VICTORY BONDS . . . . It works for the nation . . . . working and earning for you, too. Remember, the appeal is not for a Gift, but for a Loan.

DOWN THROUGH THE AGES

Britons fought and suffered and died in order that their children and their children's children might be free. Today the forces of darkness threaten to engulf us once more. Shall we give up those rights which our forefathers won?

Today our country must arm. No time can be lost. We must build the greatest war machine the world has ever known. We must accomplish in two years more than the enemy has accomplished in seven.

That is why Canada needs your savings — not as a gift, but only as a loan. Canada's army must be maintained and equipped with the most modern fighting machines. Scores of warships and merchant vessels must be built. Thousands of planes, thousands of pilots must be rushed to the scene of conflict.

So Canada needs the use of your money now. Later on, Canada will repay you in full. In the meantime, you will receive regular interest on your loan.

When you buy Victory Bonds, all Canada is your security. These Bonds are more readily turned into cash than any other.

HOW TO BUY—Give your order to the canvasser who calls on you. Or place it in the hands of any branch of any bank, or give it to any trust company. Or send it to your local Victory Loan Headquarters. Bonds may be bought in denominations of $50, $100, $500, $1,000 and larger. Canvasser, bank, trust company or your local Victory Loan Headquarters will be glad to give you every assistance in making out your order form.

Grain Mites

True insects, such as moths, beetles, ants, flies, bees etc., have six legs. Mites have eight—a fact which may help to explain why they have spread so fast! For this and other reasons mites are more closely related to spiders, scorpions, ticks, etc., than to true insects.

According to Dr. H. E. Gray the female grain mite lays three or four eggs per day up to a total of about thirty. At ordinary room temperature, the life cycle is completed in about seventeen days.

When conditions are unfavourable, young mites may assume a resting stage. In this condition they are covered with a hard crust which prevents drying out. They can then live without food for months, during which time they may be blown about with dust or carried about on mice or flies. When conditions favour they again become active and multiply.

Grain mites increase the moisture content of wheat. How? Starches and related compounds are formed in plants from water and carbon dioxide plus energy from sunlight. By feeding on dust, debris and wheat germ, mites digest these compounds thus gaining energy and giving off carbon dioxide and water. Infested grain may, therefore, become tough and spoil by heating. Infestations are particularly common in grain originally stored in a tough or damp condition.

Farmers should check their bins regularly. For further information, consult the local District Agriculturist or Experimental Station. Government literature has been distributed to all line elevator grain buyers.

VICTORY LOAN 1941

A. G. Ditto, Esq.,
ALIX, Alberta.

Dear Mr. Ditto:

We were again checking carefully last night's Provincial results to date, and you will be interested to know what the Provincial situation is at the end of the second week, with only one week to go.

In the whole, General Canvass results have been reasonably satisfactory but Special Names results are running short of their objective to an alarming extent, due to cancellations already beyond our control and in spite of the utmost efforts being made. There is an indicated Special Named shortage of about 32,000,000, and the only way we can make up this shortage is to increase General Canvass subscriptions by about 35 per cent of the amount already collected.

We realize that you in Alix are doing a good job but we are sure that in view of the Provincial problem we can count on your continued best efforts.

We suggest that you again check carefully all cards and prospects and emphasize at all times the instalment feature. As Mr. Spinney, Chairman of the National Executive, said the other day, "Surely, if Canada can buy on the instalment plan so many articles which depreciate quickly in value, they can be persuaded to purchase Dominion of Canada bonds on time."

We know that we have the valuable support of you and your committee in Alix.

Thanking you in anticipation, I am,
Yours Sincerely,
H. H. TAYLOR,
Vice-Chairman,
Provincial Committee.

The above is a copy of a letter in full from Mr. Spinney, and our committee will call on you if you will kindly resolve them and determine if the interest some will be greatly appreciated.

Conservation For Victory

News items appearing recently in the daily press appear to indicate that there was justification for the action of the federal government in devising measures for exercising some degree of supervision over the oil industry of the Dominion after the war broke out.

The importance of oil in the war economy can scarcely be over-emphasized. It must have occurred by this time to everybody that oil is the life blood of the type of warfare which is perhaps destined to be waged by the events on both sides. The extraordinary of oil for fuel to drive aeroplanes and tanks and propel submarines and warships may well be the ultimate factor that will decide the outcome of the war.

There is no gainsaying the fact that the largest need of oil is over production in the centre of the enemy and that the necessity is largely behind the moves that Hitler is making on the European continent. It is true that the Germans know how to make synthetic liquid fuel and that they are doing so to an increasing degree because at present at least, they are unable to secure nearly enough in the cheaper and more readily handled natural form, for the requirements of their war machine.

While it is true that the British and their friends control the great bulk of the world's supply of oil as it comes from the ground, it is imperative that a certain supply within the Empire be developed and conserved to the utmost degree with the thought in mind that every gallon that can be husbanded may play its part in the final and decisive battles of this conflict.

* * * *

A Costly Process

A recent dispatch from Washington referred to the success of experiments which have been undertaken by the U.S. Bureau of Mines to convert coal into gasoline and as a result it was stated that there is sufficient gasoline from this source to supply the nation's needs for 5,000 years. Also, from experiments in Germany and England, it has been demonstrated that the hydrogenization process of converting gasoline from coal is considerably greater than through the use of crude petroleum.

As is well known there are enormous supplies of coal in the ground in Western Canada, particularly in Alberta and Saskatchewan, from which unbelievably huge quantities of gasoline could be extracted, at a price. But the answer seems to be that for other war purposes so commercially can from this source would be only called considerable delay in setting up plant and in producing machinery to handle the process but would entail much expense so to constitute an economic waste, as long as crude petroleum can be drawn from beneath the earth's crust.

Because of this and because of the increasingly important role which petroleum must play in the drive to victory, as much as possible of control of the British sources of supply falling into Nazi hands before the tide turns, the importance of conservation of all Empire sources of gasoline, in Western Canada, or elsewhere can scarcely be stressed too much.

* * * *

Stop The Waste

When the fact is realized it seems to be necessary that G. S. Colcelle, the Dominion oil controller should have to find it necessary to issue a public warning that millions of gas, which is now allowed to escape daily in Alberta to kill the crude, must be stopped. The warning was inspired by the fact that the destruction of natural gas in the field by allowing it to waste in the air, is not only reducing the total power pressure necessary to force the crude oil to the surface, but, to be pointed out, "the only in energy being wasted but the gas burned contains gasoline."

The reason which makes the stoppage of this waste highly necessary also makes it essential that existing fields of crude petroleum be developed to those maximum capacity and potential now available.

Despite a rapid increase in production in the Turner Valley field of Alberta in the past few years, production is not sufficient to meet the consumptive demand of Western Canada. During 1940 Western Canada produced 4,184,852 barrels of crude oil and a recent survey showed that west coast provinces alone consumed 10,884,000 barrels, or more than twice the barrels more than were required for the home market, without taking into consideration potential war requirements further ahead.

This means, in effect, that last year American dollars had to be purchased to supply three million barrels of gasoline for Western Canada consumption, entailing not only the loss of the dollar exchange but the consumption of Canadian dollars but also dissipation of Canadian exchange which is needed in other directions for the war effort.

As long as this situation exists, conservation of oil and Canadian exchange permanent requisites in our war economy, governmental control is not only advisable but it is imperative.

Urge Your Menfolk to Buy Victory Bonds NOW

You can no longer depend upon the Atlantic Ocean for protection. Any day between breakfast time and noon, a bombing plane can fly from Government House in your own Maritimes and Quebec—a mere matter of 5 hours; to Winnipeg in less than 9 hours, to Vancouver in 10½ hours. From German-occupied France, bombladen planes can carry destruction to Toronto, Niagara, Ottawa and Montreal in less than 10 hours. Night and day, in the British Isles and on the sea, in sad out of uniform, men defend your home from attack as surely as though they stood and fought at your own doorsteps. Will you help to supply them with tools to carry on the fight—now fight? Will you help to make certain that there shall never be an "occupied" Canada?

Your Government needs some of your savings to buy more ships, planes and tanks—implements of war that will hurry the return of our men to their homes and insure our way of life. Lend your money by buying Victory Bonds NOW!

The money you invest in Victory Bonds will come back to you with interest. Lend your money. We can win this war. Lend to preserve the things that money cannot buy. Urge your menfolk to protect your home by investing in Victory Bonds now. All that you hold dear is threatened.

HOW TO BUY

WEDDING

A wedding of interest to both Alix and district took place at the Evangelical Church in Didsbury, at 11:00 Friday morning, when Vera Lorrie, eldest daughter of Mr. I. D. Lovegood of Didsbury, became the bride of Mr. Leonard David Johnson of Alix.

To the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Mildred Dendrick, the bride entered the church on the arm of her father. The bride was lovely in a pale pink ensemble with contrasting accessories. She carried a bouquet of gladiolas and sweet peas of delicate colors. The bride's only attendant was her sister Marian, who wore a street length dress of aqua blue with white accessories and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations.

The groom was supported by his brother Roy of Alix. Rev. A. Ammeter of Didsbury, officiated.

After the ceremony much excitement was caused when the young couple were taken for a lengthy ride around Didsbury in the oldest Ford that could be found.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's father. About thirty-five relatives and friends were present. The room was tastefully decorated with large bouquets of pink and white peonies and centered by a three tier wedding cake.

A toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Harry Reading of Calgary, and replied to by the groom.

The happy couple motored to Banff enroute to Vancouver. Upon their return they will reside in Alix.

Build For Post-War Era

Canadians who are interested in the national welfare and the conduct of the country's business (and who isn't?) must have experienced some satisfaction in reading the records of Canadian transportation during 1946, recently published.

It was very gratifying, for instance to learn that the gross revenues of the Canadian railways during 1946 reached their highest point since 1920 and at the same time a new system of transportation which has come into the field in the past few years and to some extent in competition with the railways namely commercial aerial traffic as represented by the Transcontinental carriers, recorded a new high and reported a surplus on operations.

The figures revealed in the reports of the two trans-continental rail way systems and of the Trans-Canada Air Lines constitute an excellent barometer of the state of health of business generally. When business is on the upgrade that fact is necessarily reflected in increased traffic for the country's transportation systems both in goods and passengers

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics recently reported a combined revenue of income of $271 500 000 in 1946 over the preceding year for the two transcontinental railways the gross revenue of the two systems being nearly $335,000,000. At first glance it would look as if the railways were overtaking the debits under which they have been operating for the past decade but this hope vanishes with the concurrent announcement that operating expenses of the two systems have also increased by $20 000 000 so that a balance leaves the railways $2 100 000 worse off than in 1945

Up In The Air

From the financial viewpoint the annual report of that infant transportation system of Trans-Canada Air Lines makes better reading for we find that against a gross revenue in 1946 of $4,502,893 in offset operating expenses including depreciation of aircraft and ground facilities and interest on investment of $4,605,688, leaving an overall surplus of over half a million dollars. And it is all the more gratifying to note that "notwithstanding strong gross operating profits from enlarged fleet of aircraft, debt is 67 p cents, or 13 per cent."

It is interesting to note that the budget for 1941-42 as presented in the House of Commons by Hon C D Howe anticipates a revenue of $5,575,000 of which over $3,000,000 will be earned by carrying air mail and over $2 000 000 revenue from passengers and freight. Here is a decision to reduce the air mail rate from 60 cents to 50 cents per unit. The actual cost of carrying the air mail last year was 13 cents.

"The Government has the cost of carrying airmail to be written down to about the cost of the United States and Mr Howe This is something of a limit as we have to pay 60 per cent more per unit for carrying mail than Americans mean do."

The increased business brought to the railway companies and the transcontinental airlines is of course largely perhaps entirely attributable to our production directly and indirectly Much of the increased freight traffic which the railway companies enjoyed was heavy goods these materials and finished utilized in aeroplanes guns munitions and other fighting gear Who serve furnished by Trans-Canada Air Lines consisted of traffic largely arising out of the war for the armed forces and that section of Canadian business engaged particularly in war time production.

Economic Insurance Policy

Considerations of these reports while meaning a measure of satisfaction that the transportation system of the country are presently enjoying an upsurge also leads to some speculation as to what is going to happen to this improving financial position, not only of the concerns devoted to the carriage of merchandise and passengers, but to all business, public and private, after the war

One cannot but be led into a false sense of security because things are going well just now nor into the false assumption that investors in revenues will continue after the war agree policies are now shaped and plans now laid to ensure this result

It would seem to be the part of wisdom while revenues are buoyant for government and public and private enterprise to continue to keep expenses down to the minimum just as they would have to do during a depression, consistent of course with efficiency This will enable equipment and reserves to be built up against the time when they will be urgently needed

In addition apart from expenditures necessitated by efficient and maximum prosecution of the war, it behooves the governments of the country federal provincial and municipal, to curtail expenses for services and enterprises to the greatest possible degree in order that any surpluses and reserves which may have been built up as a result of war time prosperity may be available for public works and services, during what will undoubtedly prove to be in the post-war period, urgently needed employment and urgently required expenditures.

Private business and the private individual will follow the same policy if they are wise. No one can predict definitely what financial and economic conditions will follow in the train of the war, but the adoption of a wise and strict adherence to such tenets will prove to be a safe economic insurance policy

Keeping Up With Times

Canada like Those For Training Parachute Troops This Summer

Parachute troops may be trained in Montreal this summer Premier Adelard Godbout announced. The scheme would be carried out by the army in co-operation with the RCAF Hon Hubert Laframboise is Minister of training centre

Many methods of warfare make parachute troops as vital as armored troops and Canada is anxious to be up to the minute At first it is likely that a picked group of junior officers and perhaps non-coms will be given jumping instruction They in turn would pass along the theoretical part of the instruction to their men. Also spending the teaching of larger bodies should the policy be deemed advisable

Thirty thousand R. Hobert will be turned over to the RCAF, with the new Dorval airport handling all civilian traffic so there will be lots of room for army jumping training Training of parachute troops involves first a long course of theoretical and failing to teach the men how to jump, went being hurt on land up. Then the men learn to jump without equipment and afterward with full pack and kit.

Major-General's Advice

In his advice to 61 young officers of the Canadian Army overseas, Major-Gen. Victor Odlum said "Be human with your men. Their lives are important to you and so are their hearts. It's not hard to win the love of men, but you first have to be a man yourself and prove that you're with all the challenge." Such fine principles should produce splendid officers all the time.

CHAPTER VI.

The week that followed stretched interminably. Full of routine to learn the pattern of her mother's life, Dennis found it impossible to emulate the lovely Vera when she was practicing economy of her own. Difficult pens of those where and how to begin to please her temperamental mother.

But Vera seemed never to be alone. Hours exhausted and conferences with advertising managers or servants, and the steady stream of visitors left her little time for her own interests at luncheon and each afternoon at tea-time. Even enough were free.

Only once did Dennis muster courage to ask Vera if she knew Dr. It was late in the morning, and Dennis had just finished her breakfast when Vera came into her room. Vera was just taking in Vera's breakfast tray. Surely Dennis thought, Vera couldn't be too busy now. On impulse she knotted a ribbon around still-wet curls brushed a powder puff across her nose and stepped across the hall to Vera s room.

"Come in." Vera called to her knock, a note of annoyance discouragingly audible in her voice

Trembling, Dennis pushed open the door Lovely as some fragile bit of Dresden in champagne satin negligee, Vera sat buttered by mounds of lacy pillows, her blond head against the padded satin head-board of her Louis Quatorze bed sipping her coffee and flicking through the sheaf of letters on the bed-table tray.

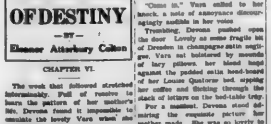
For a moment, Dennis stood admiring the exquisite picture her mother made She was so lovely to look at Even the tired circles under her eyes were becoming and the faint puffer of her face gave her a sort of delicate sweetness

Vera glanced up from the letter she was reading "Oh, it's you, Dennis dear. I'll ring for more coffee."

"Please don't bother I had breakfast quite early," Dennis replied eagerly as the echo of the blue satin chaise-longue

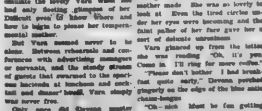
"Oh—ooh Must be fun getting up early." Vera smiled vaguely, went back to her letter "Not that I've had to do it before now since Mother knows when Tried the post yet?"

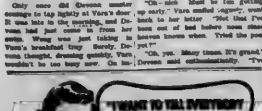
"Oh, yes. Many times. It's grand," Dennis said enthusiastically "I've



The 13 years I had suffered from constipation, headaches, indigestion, and a bad complexion. I tried all kinds of medicines, but they only gave me temporary relief. Then I read about All-Bran. I ate it every day for 3 weeks, and now I feel like a new person. I'm grateful to All-Bran for my good health."

If you have been doing yourself an injustice by suffering from constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in your diet, eat ALL-BRAN! Get it every day, in the cereal bowl, or in delicious muffins. Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN supply "bulk" to help relieve constipation in most cases. Get ALL-BRAN today! Made in Canada by Kellogg's in London, Canada.





"I didn't know you sang," Barnard said, his eyes roam to bury her ankle in the

"Sing," Vera drawled, his slim fingers playing on the chord absently. "Only when I must have words with Dresser here."

"Dresser as such," Dennis said before she fled. "I'll try not to let you down."

Then, even before the click of her heels on the tiled entryway had died away, Vera was speaking.

"What's the Miss, Barnard? You

Keeping A Diary

Things Noted By Princess Elizabeth Are Interesting Memories

A little girl's writing in her diary, says the Boston Post, may well prove to be one of the greatest historical documents of the present times. The youthful diarist is Princess Elizabeth of England. Three years ago she began making daily notations in a diary and the pleasure she has derived from with drawings. She is taking during the present year a course in what the child of royalty must, what goes on in her mind, her innermost thoughts, her reactions to the events during times of stress—all of these things in her diary may prove to be invaluable historical recording in future years.

Dr. E. W. Macdonald

Minister of Education

Province of Alberta

It is a pleasure to me that even in these days of stress and strain, the Province of Alberta has been able to maintain a school system which has been the envy of many other provinces. Our schools have been kept open, our teachers have been paid, and our children have been educated. This is a record of which we may be proud, and it is a record which we must maintain. The education of our children is the most important work we have to do, and we must not allow it to be neglected. We must continue to support our schools, and we must continue to support our teachers. We must continue to support our children. We must continue to support our education. We must continue to support our future.

Royal Canadian Air Force

No. 4 Training Command

Facilities for overcoming educational barriers to many keen young Canadians who desire to enlist in the Royal Canadian Air Force for training as pilot, observer, or wireless operator (air gunner), are announced at Headquarters No. 4 Training Command, Regina, Sask.

The Canadian Legion Educational Services are prepared to provide courses of study for pre-enlistment education of the eager youth of the prairies by the organization of classes, preferably night classes, in the relatively larger centres of population.

Through no fault of their own, a considerable number of young men have not been able to complete their education. Their eagerness for service in the air is common knowledge and it is expected that the valuable work undertaken by the Can. dian Legion Educational Services will lead the way to attainment of the goal for which so many are striving.

Heretofore such educational service has been given through the medium of correspondence courses. The new method of personal instruction is expected to attract much wider interest and more rapid progress.

Much disappointment among young men has been observed in the past because they could qualify in all respects other than educational. For the information of those interested, the following qualification standards are announced:

1. To be enlisted, candidates must have obtained the age of 18.

2. Have successfully completed the first year at High School.

3. Be physically fit for flying duties in the R.C.A.F. (all have to pass a medical examination prior to being accepted for the course).

4. Be suitable in other respects.

An early response to the worthy effort of the Canadian Legion is anticipated. Applicants should communicate as quickly as possible to the R.C.A.F. Recruiting Office located nearest to their place of residence. In No. 4 Training Command these are located at the following addresses:

1208 First Street East, Calgary, Alta.

Provincial Building, Edmonton, Alta.

Legion Trading Co. Bldg., Regina, Sask.

RIPLEY

The funeral of the late Mrs. H. Hilsenbeck, who passed away June 15, was held on Friday afternoon from Clive Baptist Church, and was largely attended by friends and neighbors, both from Clive and Ripley. The beautiful floral tributes were silent testimony of the respect held for the deceased.

Mrs. Hilsenbeck was born in Russell County, Iowa, sixty-one years ago. She came to Alberta with her family and settled in the Clive district. Five years ago Mr. and Mrs. Hilsenbeck came to Ripley, where she has resided up till the time of her death.

Mr. Eastwell of Clive, assisted by the local minister, officiated both at the church and graveside. Mr. Eastwell, who had known Mrs. Hilsenbeck for years paid a glowing tribute to the memory of one whom we all knew to be a loving wife and mother and a wonderful neighbor.

Miss Mary Bell of Clive, sang two solos, that beautiful hymn "There is no disappointment in Heaven". The pall bearers were old time friends.

Besides her sorrowing husband, she is mourned by four daughters and two sons. Mrs. Murat of Pence River, Mrs. L. M. Glenville of New Westminster, B.C., Mrs. L. Hankins, Texas, Mrs. Munson Clive, George and Henry of Lacombe and Clive, and a host of friends who keenly mourn her passing.

Farewell dear friend we shall miss your friendly smile and outstretched hand, but may God take away what makes it hard to say "Thy Will Be Done".

There was a hand in Heaven
That wasn't quite complete,
God called another mother
To fill that vacant seat.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Carr are rejoicing over the birth of a son, born Sunday, June 15.

The High Road To Health

Comparatively few people in Canada, except those engaged in public health work and the medical profession, realize the tremendous improvement in the health of the people of this country which has been achieved in the past twenty years and perhaps even fewer appreciate the immense advantage all of us have enjoyed health in giving the Canadian war effort a flying start.

As a result of the general advance along the health front in the past two decades, the average Canadian to-day, not only enjoys the prospect of a longer life than he did about the time the first Great War came to an end but he is better equipped to enjoy that longer life span and during the period of his full-time a better chance he has of greater service to himself his family his fellow men and his country

Much of this improved health which the Canadian of to-day enjoys is attributable to a wide extension of public health services on the part of the provincial and municipal authorities of the country. Much of it is due to the education of the public as to the importance of health and the steps which can be taken to ensure a wider distribution of the blessings of good health. Had it not been for the realization of the value and importance of health instruction, born of educational campaigns, the public would not have tolerated some of the health ordinances and regulations imposed upon them by those in authority. Measures which are now taken for granted would have caused a riot a quarter of a century ago

It is only by taking a retrospective glance back a few years that one is able to appreciate how far Canada has travelled along the road to better health, but the comparison of conditions a few years ago with those of to-day is of real value, for not only does it graphically reveal what has been achieved but it brings home a realization of how much more can and, no doubt, will be done during the next decade or two in pressing towards the goal of happiest health and a long disease-free life.

* * *

Cancer Research

Much of the gains which have been made during the past 30 years must also be had at the door of advancement in the realm of medical science. The discoveries which have been made in this sphere are truly remarkable and with the appreciation of an enlightened public are resulting in the rout of many diseases which, a few years ago were regarded as inevitable, though preventable.

Serums have been discovered which have had many of the communicable diseases flat on their backs. Sources of contamination, processes of other diseases, have been revealed and removed. New medicines with amazing good properties, new anaesthetics and new methods of surgery have rendered many diseases almost innocuous and have robbed operations of many of their former terrors.

To-day no one need die of tuberculosis or diabetes. Typhoid fever and small pox can be prevented, as well as diphtheria and a number of the less dangerous communicable diseases. Even cancer and diseases of the heart can be combatted, and if discovered in the infancy stage, checked in time to enable proper precautions to be taken, even though these killers have not themselves yet been killed off

Some of the results of improved living standards and readily available health services in recent years were indicated by data given in the House of Commons recently by Minister Mackenzie in connection with the national health and pensions, when he compared the proportion of recruits to the armed forces who had to be rejected for physical unfitness since the outbreak of the war to September 30, 1940, as compared with the percentage of applicants for enlistment turned down during the first great war

The comparison in all the matters remarked upon is very favorable to that health standards required for military service in the first great war were not nearly so rigid as they are to-day. Mr Mackenzie quoted figures to show that rejections of recruits for the army in this war during the first period under review totalled only 30 per cent, whereas during the first great war a average was made of 1,000 recruits from an agricultural and semi-rural country revealed that 58.6 per cent. suffered from physical defect in greater or less degree.

Another startling comparison of the "then and now" type was made recently by Hon. J. M. Ulrich, Saskatchewan Minister of Public Health, when he announced in the provincial legislature that during the first great war while 68,000 Canadians gave their lives in France another 65,000 died at home from tuberculosis. Such has been the progress in the battle against that scourge since that time that the death rate from tuberculosis in 1939 was 53.5 per 100,000 of population and in Saskatchewan slightly less than half that figure.

* * *

Mass Co-operation Needed

Such results indicate that the public and public health authorities are on the right track, and that still is required to yield even greater results is continued and increasing co-operation with the medical profession and public health authorities in such measures as sanitation of the air, the population against communicable diseases, and early diagnosis of other diseases which cannot be combatted by serums, anti-toxins and other preventative devices.

When this co-operation is 100 per cent. even greater advances in general public health will be made.

CORRESPONDENCE

Editor Free Press,

Dear Sir,

My attention has been called to several items recently appearing in your esteemed paper which tend to create the impression that local truck owners have been discriminated against in the matter of being given employment on the Lacombe Airport work. Such is far from the truth. Standard Transport and Sterling Trucking Co. have the contract, and we, and our subcontractors are giving preference to local truck owners in the matter of employment. We are pleased to say that these local truck owners are doing a splendid job, and are giving entire satisfaction. Some of the dump boxes used through material which is being hauled from the hill are owned by the Department of Public Works, and not ordered by the writer of the preceding paragraph. Some have been used for the past two years on the job, and are of local manufacture, having been built in the shops of the Department of Public Works, and not by the writer of the preceding paragraph. Some of the dump boxes have been used for hauling gravel for roads on all government gravel contracts in this district for the past two years, and are owned by local truck owners. Approximately 50 per cent of the hauling on the Airport work is being done by local truck owners, and we are pleased to say that we expect to be able to maintain this percentage throughout the completion of the work. Even though we have been able to secure a number of trucks from outside points, we still feel that we have been able to secure a number of trucks from outside points, we still feel that we have been able to secure a number of trucks from outside points, we still feel that

A Continuous Effort

The campaign recently launched and promoted with considerable vigor to drive home to citizens and through-out the countryside, to salvage waste materials which can be converted into munitions of war or used indirectly to that end, purposes will rank as one of the many splendid enterprises which Canadians have made and are making in the all-out fight to give Nazism a knock-out blow.

With the completion of the first onslaught on heaps of hidden but useless treasures useless to those who have been harboring them, it will be found that thousands and thousands of tons of materials which could not possibly serve any useful purpose stored in attics and basements and lying in waste heaps have been recovered and made use of as an aid to the grand-est objective in Canadian history the defeat of Hitler and consequently the preservation of freedom and liberty.

A careful appraisal of materials which can be of value in the war effort reveals an astonishing variety and range of commodities which have been regarded as debris in industrial life such things as bottles, paper of all kinds, old rags, old rubber and many other materials and discarded articles which can be rehabilitated and made to serve a useful purpose.

Wastage has undergone a transformation that is hard to believe. After this type of rags reaches industry through the voluntary salvage groups, the transformation begins. They are thoroughly washed, sterilized and then shredded. The shredded material is next mixed with five wool and the combination is woven into several kinds of heavy cloth which makes blankets and underwear as essential to the comfort and health of the armed forces. Collecting used rags and turning them back into industry is definitely a direct contribution to the war effort.

Next to cotton rags less valuable to the cause which the people of Canada are supporting White or colored, cotton rags find their way busily to factories which make "waste" for machinery purposes. Ash and Birch dust, which consist of so little use if contributed to the local salvage campaign, may eventually be used to wipe the oil and grease from a bullet that is burning out a bomb to be dropped on Berlin.

* * *

Other Textiles Valuable

Other types of secondary textiles can be used in the war effort. Linseen for example are being turned back to industry to make the fine grade of paper needed for important military and state documents. Even old silk stockings may be turned to good purpose, as is now being done in the United States where they are removed and the fibrous base that still has some strength are being used a second time a possible use which is now being investigated by the Canadian department of national war services.

Jute bags are still another type of secondary textile having salvage value Owing to the slow delivery of jute from India and the problem of getting shipping space, there has been difficulty in supplying the needs of the Canadian market with new bags As a result, second hand jute bags have appreciable value

The value of old machinery and metallic waste in other forms such as discarded iron, steel and other metals is almost too well known to need comment. They can be remoulded and processed for the use of the manufacturers of munitions and other forms of war material and equipment

In a country which consumes large quantities of canned goods, it seems unfortunate that the salvage of tin cans is not on a commercial basis. Tin is at least at the present time, and especially in view of the fact that tin is one of the most valuable of war materials

Some time ago the Canadian department came to the conclusion that nothing could be done to make use of discarded tin cans, due largely to the fact that the proportion over long distances and the necessary shipping to battery the old cans can be turned into a useful material. Even in the United States, where conditions are rapidly more favorable for collecting and converting tin cans into useful material than in Canada, it has been found impracticable to do so, after experimentation in de-tinning factories in New York, Chicago and San Francisco. A committee of the National Academy of Sciences in the United States has regretfully recommended against the establishment of more such factories "unless and until an emergency in the supply of tin ensues in opposition to economics tin without regard to its use."

* * *

An Astonishing Need

The work that has been done to date is undoubtedly of untold value to the Canadian war effort, but after the first enthusiasm has worn off, the effort should not be allowed to languish. On the contrary the collection of salvageable material should be a continuous process, not only because there will be less of it available, once the first great accumulation of years of waste material has been disposed of, but because the need for it may accelerate as the war progresses and becomes more protracted.

Women can continue to serve their country well and further promote the war effort from now on, everything that could possibly be used in the war to be not made sorted out in the process of laying it up for future use and build until sufficient materials are available to make delivery worth while or until the call again goes out for more waste

Air Force Radio Mechanics

Western Canada Took The Lead In Subscriptions

Figures given by Canada's air minister, Hon. C. G. Power, showed how western Canada took the lead in subscriptions of air force radio mechanics when an urgent call came from Britain a few months ago for radio specialists.

The air ministry combed the whole country and so it obtained all avail-able men with training. Then the call was issued on April 8 for 2 500 young men to train for the special radio work Regina Saskatoon Ed-monton and Calgary led all Canada, after the initial quotas had been re-ports from all R C A F recruiting de-pots showed that by April 15 there had been 1 619 enlistments and 1 136 pending a total of 2,955 in 10 days than the call was filled

Actual figures obtained from the air minister showed that South Win-nipeg and Vancouver achieved re-cruiting rapid was 89 enlisted and nine pending But by April 18 the Vancouver stand-ing was 167 enlisted and 127 pending a total of 294 to 146 enlisted with 54 waiting The quota was raised to 200 and it was filled by May 15

In both Winnipeg and Vancouver many enlistments came from uni-versity undergraduates it was re-ported. There have already gone to temporary training posts The western points being the air school at Dor-val Portage La Prairie and Calgary to special courses at universities and after 12 weeks training they will go overseas for additional operational training and actual service They then start out as ai-rcraftsmen class 2 at $1 30 a day receive promotion at the end of the course to looking six-teen men at $3 50 and about five per cent may qualify for commissions

The air ministry will pay the uni-versity $300 tuition for each radio volunteer and the classes in elect-tricity include 250 at the university of Manitoba, 80 at Saskatoon, 150 at Edmonton and 150 at U B C Vancouver.

CHAPTER VIII

From the library window below Dake stood watching the same shadowy, pasterned garden that Devens studied dreamily from above But it wasn't dreaminess clouding Dake's eyes as he tamped brown curls of tobacco into the bowl of his pipe

Vara, her bright head resting against the tapestried back of her carved chair, watched him covertly "So you see, darling," she said smoothly, "the net is at it is will be quite impossible"

Dake looked toward her, a faint scowl drawing fine lines between his dark brows. "How does it happen you're on the finding list at all?"

"Because Talbot had to rewrite part of that second act. It simply didn't play well. My scenes were entirely changed."

"And the original act can't be re-built?"

She shrugged a masterful little gesture of disdain matching the soft pout of her lips. "Oh, Dake. That would be awful. It's so important to have a play well mounted. You know that."

"I know this will cost a neat little sum, too. Have you any idea how much?"

"Oh, not more than 2,000 or 2,500," she took a cigarette from a carved ivory box at her elbow. At it slowly, her eyes clouding as they watched the smoke curl over the delicate arc of the match.

"Good heavens, I should hope not," Dake's voice was edged. "Two thousand or 2,500 more on top of what's it's already cost me! That will put the show clean on out."

"Don't be ridiculous, Dake." She let a puff of smoke trickle down charmingly "You talk as if you were penniless."

But Dake wasn't laughing. "I am —just about."

Then, dear and grassful as a cat, Vara moved toward him. "Don't be your best sweetie, and say you'll be kind, mashing his grey-ness. Sly. "But think how much money our play will make for you every day."

His lips twisted into a grim smile. "Maybe. I'm not counting those chickens yet, however. If it grows any bigger, I shall start all the profit I'll ask."

"I know, darling." Vara's mood changed instantly. "And we simply must have that new set or he'll worry himself to death."

"If worries too damned much." "Pal is an artist, darling. Sensitive, high-strung, artistic, crimson-tipped fingers against his cool lapels. "His temperament, his moods, his triggers that nerve—all that is part of his genius. And if we are to protect, help him develop that genius—"

Vara left the question in midair, watched Dake's face dirty as she stopped a blossom off a bouquet on the desk, fastened it into his coat lapel.

Then, when Dake didn't answer, she added softly "And all that we are doing is for his sake, isn't it?"

His glance at her sharply "You, of course. Sometimes I wonder why I do it. Dad would have got him a job in a bank and tied him to for-get his artistic temperament."

"But your methods—." Vara sug-gested quickly following his every flickering change of expression "Like you she had faith in his genius didn't she?"

A muscle along Dake's jawline jumped unmistakably For a min-ute he only passed the room silently Then the shot Shed have given anything to have him succeed.

And you know him don't you that I wouldn't have considered do-ing this play except to please you?" she persisted, moving toward him again.

Pushing him faced her his eyes sudden-ly hardened.

"You know that don't you dear-ling?" she repeated softly stopped about at a startling sound from be-hind her other.

I understand he had quietly G. about with the net Vara I'll need you a lot.

There is relaxing himself from the circle of her white arms he walked quickly from the room. Not back but through opened French windows into the dusk-filled garden beyond.

Vara watched his retreating figure with a slow, deeply frowning gaze. Then she turned to the mirror, touched her hair lightly with her fingertips, and smiled.

Devens, dressing for dinner, heard the sound of voices in the garden, where Dake still paced rhythmically Shortly she nodded Yes, I guess you're right. Dake will have her around much longer

In the room just above Devens sat still drowning smiling happily as she watched Dake pacing the shadowy garden as long-pened strides.

"Dake" she whispered softly to the dusk-filled room, and it seemed to answer to everything

Doctors who examine candidates for the British postal service have found out these facts by examining statistical records. Present day candi-dates are healthier than ever they used to be. They are also more slender, well and better developed.

Doctors who have carried out a special investigation into the effect of the war on post office girls say they have all received some kind of mental uplift. Many have left their homes in the countryside, to have to-tal war duty in cities and ignore dan-ger.

The British blockade of the North Sea is hitting the Norwegian and German fishing industry and thus impeding the manufacture of war materials by the Nazis The latter have developed ways of using the humble herring for the manufacture of explosives and other materials of war and have commandeered thou-sands of tons of this fish every week. The Most information between ac-counted recently that from 130 her-rings their chemists have been able to secure explosive for a small bot-pedo. Dried and treated by chemical processes herrings furnish nitrates and glycerine colloidne and fats. all of which are essential for explosives Colloidne is the base for plastics, which can replace metal in airplane wings The fat extracted from her-rings is used in making soap and the fish constitutes also a high per-centage of gelatin.

How Bicycle Chums Apart And Can Be Pulled Up

A new bicycle may be taken apart and the component parts carried in the boots Because it has no top-cross bar The frame of the machine is the invention of both sexes Because of its compactness when folded up, it can be carried comfortably in an ordi-nary cabin trunk, trains and other con-veyances. The bicycle is an advan-tage in these days when many people must travel to the country for anything

The single cross bar of the bicycle is curved to permit a lady to mount or bare to a point on the rear half just above the sprocket, has a dip just with a small rubber cushion tightened. The machine breaks apart at the point so that the two halves may be folded together while the handle bars will swing downward for greater con-pactness.—Scientific American.

People in British Dial Their Radios Up In The Middle Hours

Women who for years have been trying to find a diet which would re-duce their weight without harm, have been concerned that rationing is the ideal thing.

Many women are regaining slim-mer they thought had gone forever. They are not only getting slim-mer, but also fitter, as is generally agreed by medical men. factory wel-fare officers and dietitians.

People now are in a better state of health than they were before the war, and many older people who suf-fered in health during the last one or two years have come to their own.

For Joint Defence

Representatives of the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan and of some of the mid-Western states of the American union met recently in Regina to urge the construction of an inland highway on the eastern side of the frontiers to provide a new means of communication between the United States and Alaska appear to have some very potent arguments in support of their contention

Broadly the argumentation that was set up decided to make representations to Washington and Ottawa that the road should be built via that route rather than along the Pacific Coast, as recommended by the Alaska International Highway Commission. The latter had just then requested the Secretary of State Cordell Hull for an appropriation of $25,000,000 for the construction of the highway along the Pacific Coast, a distance of 1,500 miles, "as a precaution against invasion by Russia from Siberia".

Just how serious a menace Russia or Japan may be to Alaska is difficult to say, but invasion of this far flung territory of the United States is unlikely, however, not both combined is by no means beyond the bounds of possibility. It is not surprising that the Alaskans appreciate their proximity to the Orient. It is quite obvious that the whole of the western hemisphere only 50 miles wide should be unsafe in the light of the recent understanding between Japan and Russia. It is the rule of the Japanese, according to Hitler's partner in the Orient, to make things so uncomfortable and difficult for people for the United States and to hamper American and to British trade by any device that may seem good as opportunity arises.

If a large part of the American navy were withdrawn to the Atlantic it might provide just the opening that Nippon apparently seeks to keep the American navy on the fleet busy while the Russian armies overrun the invaded Alaska and in so doing constitute a menace not only to Alaska but to contiguous Canadian territory

* * *

Have Big Ideas

That is just the kind of game that Hitler would like to see played in the Northern Pacific and it would be in keeping with his tactics to induce the Japanese to represent the situation as affording a golden opportunity to the cunning—a repetition of the Finnish and Polish adventures with a chance to get something for very little effort

Because of the geographic and strategic location of Alaska, the question is one of almost as great import to Canada as to the United States and in view of the defensive necessity set up by the two countries by the safeguarding of this continent from anti-democratic from it is a subject in which Canada has a vital interest. If it can be shown that a highway which should be built on a defence measure would be of great benefit to Alaska on the eastern side of the Rocky Mountains instead of along the Pacific coast, Canadians are canvassed in taking more than an academic interest in the matter.

A highway route to Alaska from the industrial section of the United States centering on Chicago, where munitions are manufactured in quantity would follow a general northwesterly course across the province, via the Yukon paralleling the new international airways route, if directions short cut distance and minimum of cost are important factors and survey, whether the route is to be used for military or commercial purposes, or both, there are considerations of minimum support

When to these considerations are added the fact that such a route would be a protected route as compared with a comparatively vulnerable route along the Pacific coast, the western Americans and Canadians who are urging the adoption of this course would appear to have irrefutable arguments in support of their contention

* * *

Shortest And Cheapest

There is no gainsaying the fact that a highway across the province would be less costly to construct and to maintain than one that follows the difficult route along the Western side of the Rockies. The fact that such a route would be less accessible to enemy damage than the western route cannot be denied. It could not be reached at all by naval action and would be less subject to aerial bombardment than a coastal highway. Indeed, it could be better protected from attack from the skies since it would be mostly patrolled by Canadian and American aircraft with short range machines of the airfields now under construction along the companion route.

Military action nowadays demands speedy movement and roads supplied with the shortest possible distance means speed of movement. When these things are combined with economy of cost, there seems to be little left unsaid in support of the request that favourable consideration be given by the authorities of the two countries for construction of the direct highway

Depend On Hearing

Psychologists Tout Ability of Blind To Avoid Obstacles

Cornell psychologists stated that they had found the solution of what constitutes the so-called "radio sense" in the blind which enables them to avoid obstacles. The blind avoid obstacles through the sense of hearing according to the psychologists.

It is believed that the discovery will not only bring hope and confidence to the newly blind, but will provide techniques for those who have been blind for many years and enable them to obtain a freedom of movement once denied them. The Cornell findings were said by the scientists to have supplemented also for sonorous warnings sonar being used now where sound is reflected in many aeroplanes in England. As a result of the new findings those blinded by accidents or by war need not resign themselves to utter despair once upon their higher standards of the psychologists say

In a series of carefully controlled experiments consisting of more than 1,000 trials, three groups of blind and four subjects were totally blind and two with normal vision. The latter however blindfolded so that they would be incapable of perceiving the presence of objects through vision. But from the very outset these subjects who were now completely unaccustomed to utter darkness the presence of an artificial wall which they feared to run into.

In the first series the subjects were disoriented and startled at varying distances from a three foot wall. Toward the wall stop as soon as they felt its presence and to turn as soon as close to the wall as possible without running into it. The ratio of the record to the distance from the wall at distance at which the wall was perceived was as close as they thought possible was recommended to the Committee on a measurement of the acuity of hearing and showed that the greater the ratio, the greater the acuity.

* * *

The blind and sighted subjects were greater than those of the blindfolded normal subjects. Both the subjects walked on a carpet, with and then without, and the ratios dropped proportionately in all cases

The blind subjects could detect the presence of the wall on the screen when it was fifteen feet away and could walk up within three inches of it. The sighted individuals, when blindfolded detected the presence of the screen when they were two or three feet away on the average, and walked within six inches of it. In several series of trials both the blind and sighted persons obtained perfect scores in avoiding the obstacle

Germans Are Sensitive To Attitude Of Their Capital

It has not escaped notice that the Germans are peculiarly sensitive to attacks on their capital They make out that when the United Arts Garden is hit then when the shipyards at Kiel are smashed up by bombs in the latter case they do not talk nonsense about repairing the giving of buffet for buffet to in the diverse centres of war But they become hysterical with fury and indignation when bombs fall as Berlin is it because they fear the damage done to their morale more even than damage to their equipment? If so morale becomes very like a military objective

DAUGHTER OF DESTINY

—BY—

Eleanor Atherbury Cohen

CHAPTER IX.

Dressm had no idea how long she had been sitting there, face pressed against the cool iron balustrade, shocks fanned by the warm, fragrant breeze that blew from the garden But before the dreams in her heart snatching the beauty of the star-spangled night. Then, as if hot dripped right out of that dream Dale had come striding across the empty patio to her

Dressm recognized him instantly even in the darkness No one else walked with that same, long, even stride Instantly she felt the breath stop in her throat.

Dale stood for a moment beside the block, then, removing one hand from his pocket, he stood watching the lighted windows below If only he'd look up, she dreamed on, he'd not really believing she wouldn't open her eyes. Look up and speak to her.

As if he'd heard her thought, Dale did glance up, take a step nearer Then he grinned, waved at her.

"Hello, there, Juliet on your balcony," he called in husky, boyish whisper "You are Juliet, aren't you? Or am I seeing things?"

Laughing softly, she nodded. "And then, dear Romeo. Who let you in?"

"I scaled the wall, my pet, just for a glimpse of thee"

"Then that's what comes of having real kinsmen," she said, not realizing how neatly she spoke the truth.

Dale looked down, then waved the lighted windows below. "It's much too swell an evening to stay inside. And perfect for a swim. Look, why don't you slide into a suit and come on down?"

Dressm hesitated. It was pretty late Still, why not? I'll be with you in a minute."

It was only a minute before she slipped out of her evening figure still fumbling as she stalled her soft hair under a bathing cap All the hand of the stairs she hesitated. Below, in the main hall, she could hear Vara bidding the guests good night. Then he saw the servants' stairway at the back. It would serve any painful encounter with Vara. And she couldn't bear any more of that. Not to-night, anyway. Not with Dale waiting.

Feeling, tight-footed, along the narrow hall behind the kitchen and servants' quarters, Dressm came, unchallenged, by to her room Wrapping a very roomy Wrap in bright-striped sport coat and sabby pumps. Obviously started to meet her, he hid surprise almost instantly behind a bantering bit of love, pulled of the pumps.

"I'm, mm. Was there anything for you, raise?"

"Oh, thank you Wong." Again that strange feeling of repulsion. Instinctively, Dressm pulled her bathing cape closer and hurried past him.

Dressm nodded. It wasn't the cold night, however, that chilled her, but the fact that Dale had been so cool across the gram, the sound of a voice suggested Then Dale's voice came from the balcony off Dressm's room.

"Dressm! Come in at once, please."

LOOK OUT FOR YOUR LIVER

Should Be "Up" Most of the Time to Feel Your Best

Your liver is the largest organ in your body and most important to your health. It pours out a liquid bile, pint, pint of it, every day. Bile is necessary to digest your food. If your liver does not pour enough bile into your bowels your food just decomposes in your intestines. You suffer from constipation, stomach acid, bloat and gas. You feel "rotten" and "down in the dumps." You lose your appetite. You may have a bad headache. Or you may suffer a dull pain in the right side. For over 30 years Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has been used by thousands to relieve such troubles. It is one of the best known liver stimulants. Ask your druggist for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Tablets or liquid. Write Dr. Pierce's Clinic, Buffalo, N.Y., for free medical advice.

Canada's Naval Strength

Number Of Vessels Will Be Doubled By Next April

The Canadian Navy's strength in ships will be doubled by next April in comparison to the number now in service and 4,000 more men will be added to the Navy in that time, Navy Minister Macdonald said in a recent address.

"When our Canadian Navy now has 300 ships and a total strength of 15,000 officers and men, we shall have 600 ships and 30,000 men in naval service by next April," he said.

Mr Macdonald praised the Canadian sailor saying that there is not a port in the world where either a Canadian sailor or ship cannot be found. He said that Canada's speed up in shipbuilding was satisfactory and added that there "never has been any question of shortage of men for volunteers."

The minister compiled a declaration that this war is one "of machinery and not men" with the assertion that Canada will be ready as much in 1942 as was spent by the nation in the entire four years of the First Great War.

Some people, said Mr Macdonald, make more money in war time, but some men get more chips and men. The Navy minister said that in the last two trade wars, and years to train a man fully for command of one of Canada's larger vessels.

Saving Tea In Britain

Chemists Find That Tea Can Use Ten Leaves Over Again

Tea may soon be able to supply your teapot, Sir it up again with fresh water, a little of which goes a-one—and get a second brew out of it better than first.

The British War Office wanted to know what to do with 35 tons of spent tea leaves collected in a single day in the Army messes.

Scientists said they would take the tea for experiments, and now they have told the War Office that if the Army keeps the tea leaves instead of throwing them away after use, adds a little chemical and some water, they can get a second brew and have their tea again as good as new.

The brew may be made available to the public if the objections of the customs and excise department can be overcome.

The department has told the war office that instead of the chemicals to prevent the growing or deterioration of any tea leaves which have been used.

Scientists say the chemical that must be added to the tea leaves to keep it from going bad is cheap. By using it, millions of pounds worth of valuable shipping space will be saved.

Jews will not be allowed to return to their homes in occupied Poland after the war, Governor Frank is reported to have declared in a meeting at Winsbor, Cat., recently.

Arrangement Is Reciprocal

Oddity Of War In Connection With Right To Use Inventions

This interesting story by Cutbert Webb appeared in the London Daily Herald

We are still awaiting news in Germany for the privilege of making use of German inventions Some of these inventions are so closely allied to our war effort that they are undoubtedly directly responsible for the deaths of British soldiers. That is the last thing is happening in the reverse direction—Germans are paying Britons for the right to use inventions through which Britons are being killed and maimed.

This is how this oddity of the war works

Certain firms in this country acquired, before the war patent rights from Germany enabling them, on payment of a fixed annual sum, to manufacture articles invented by Germany Each year their license to manufacture these goods was renewed also on payment of the agreed fee These annual fees are still being paid through neutral countries to inventors in Germany

"Certainly" an official at the patent office in London told me that there is "no complete answer." The arrangement," he said, "was originally the result of the door's closing behind her and fell, somehow as if a trap had shut its jaws on her

Invited Guests View First Public Show In New York

The first public showing of large-screen television, utilizing apparatus developed recently in the R.C.A. Manufacturing Company's laboratories, was staged at the New Yorker Theatre, New York, before more than 1,000 invited guests.

On a white screen, 30 feet by 40 feet, the guests watched the fifty famous Rockettes

Image-table documents by sports executives, theatre managers and engineers also were shown on the screen. The speakers discussed the possibility of a radically new era of near future, it extended in that by video many theatres instead of one, and that sports events will be available sports fans instead of a few thousand to witness a major athletic contest.

Alix Free Press:—As I am writing a letter home to the wife I came to my mind that I neglected to write you in answer to your kind note in writing me the paper with the good old news in it. Yes, news seems so good to hear that all the people are back. This weeks ads, in this column, the importance of regular visits to experimental farms and stations was stressed. Farmers and others wishing to visit government institutions in the good time arrangements can be made for with various crops and varieties to be inspected in the plots and being grown by grain growers and elevator companies associated with this department.

Recommended and safe plans for summerfallowing of all of the provinces, have been worked out and are being maintained by grain growers in the three prairie provinces. The work of 40 various stations and annual crop only. These will be found in addition to the experimental sheet clover, brome grass, timothy, alfalfa and other crops.

In order to secure the best results in the growing of crops, it is necessary to grow plants of a pure strain, adapted to the conditions of the district. Much attention and a adaptations of all varieties of grain, grasses and clovers are maintained. In addition to experimental work, the department carries on a great well-known distribution of corn, sorghum, brome grass and alfalfa seed, which is distributed. A Greater Incentive

Following the recent declaration by President F D Roosevelt of the existence of an unlimited national emergency in the United States one may expect to read of frequent announcements of steps being taken, perhaps almost weekly to stimulate the developed objectives which inspired that important decision namely the defence of the Western hemisphere and aid to Britain.

The proclamation of the existence of a state of unlimited national emergency by the chief executive of the great neighboring nation with its enormous industrial and natural resources and its virile manpower is bound sooner or later to exert a very profound effect upon the course of the war an effect which probably will not be appreciated to the full until it can be viewed in perspective at a later date And this prediction can safely be made when one realizes the enormous emergency powers which have been vested in the President by Congress and the depth and breadth of the conviction that the whole resources of the nation must be bent to the task, if democracy is to be saved from pagan Hitlerism and if the existence of civilization in this continent is to be preserved inviolate

In some quarters disappointment was expressed that President Roosevelt was not more specific in his declaratory statement to the people and would have liked to hear him say that the declaration of the existence of a state of unlimited national emergency meant that he intended to take the necessary steps to bring about abrogation of the Neutrality Act or that her country would transmit American convoys to ensure delivery of war ma-

• • • •

His Broadcast Effect

This, however was not necessary The president's emphatic declaration that means must and would be devised to ensure that the production of American armaments, workshops and yards was delivered where it was intended to go was all-embracing and that in the light of Roosevelt's record since the outbreak of the war should be sufficient assurance that whatever may be necessary to ensure that result will be made operative

It must also be remembered that as on his third term election his people better than F.D.R. He knows just how far he can go without dropping behind the boundaries of public opinion in his own country He is evidently more keenly aware of the extent of the peril to the United States than are very many of his people and the primary purpose of his proclamation was to drive deeply into the public consciousness the grave manner which threatens their liberty their economic institutions and their spiritual existence President Roosevelt knows precisely well that once the people of the United States realize the danger they are in and the very short time they have in which to prepare to meet it on both sides of the Atlantic, every sentiment will be immediately converted and all resources necessary to meet the situation.

When the speech is analyzed in the light of this interpretation of its objective it can truly be described as an educational effort of the first magnitude and one may expect it to bear fruit in repudiation of public support and approval for far more advanced steps than have been taken to date both in provision of additional assistance to Britain overseas and all-out preparation for home defense of the Western hemisphere, in consideration of national unity and in stiffening morale.

• • • •

His Economic Effect

Outside the boundaries of the United States President Roosevelt's announcement is already having a valuable effect in democratic circles, for in the hard pressed and the oppressed it has brought realization that task is to be rapidly translated into constructive action What promises stated or implied, are to be implemented with increasing acceleration and that a real all-out effort with the full power of public opinion behind it is to be the order of the day, with nothing left undone to hinder it

Such a declaration however, is not to be construed as an invitation to Canadians to rest on their oars in the prosecution of their share in the fight for the preservation of a democratic civilization. On the contrary, it should be an incentive to bend lower to the oars, to renew the burden with increased vigor and to marshall all the resources of man, money and machine at its maximum effort

With a full appreciation of the power and resources of the foe we are fighting it should come as understanding that no matter how far the United States may go in the next few months or even years in assisting the combatting democracies, every last ounce of Canadian effort is needed to turn the scales of warfare in our favor.

With this knowledge and a full appreciation of the world wide aims of Nazidom there will be no let up in the part that Canada is playing and must continue to play in the greatest and the most devastating conflict in all history

Japs Cutting Shortfall

The Nation press warns the Japanese that the United States is plotting against them. There are signs that the Japanese are getting part of it, bit skeptical about friendly tips from these Axis partners.

Origin Of Wall Paper

In Early Days People Hung Draperies On The Walls

Even medieval times saw decorated wall coverings, their rude draperies and paintings of animals and gods. Then in the first "interior decorating" of which we are aware The ancient Greeks, ever though they had walls of lovely marble hung with draperies over them for decoration

In later times kings and nobles were intricate tapestries to record historic events to decorate their walls and to keep out draughts which came through holes in the wall Peasants could not afford such drapery even but used paper or a substitute made of numbers

Guerrilla Is Spanish But Other Countries Have Word For It

"Guerrilla" bands of factions are still fighting the Germans The word is commonly used in the Balkans for guerrilla forces, and came originally from the French comite committee It was first applied to a member of a revolutionary committee, and later to bands of irregulars. "Guerrilla" is a Spanish diminutive form meaning a little war, and was originally used only in that sense.

CHAPTER X

"Sit down, please," Vara said coldly, indicating a little straight-backed chair.

Devona, obeyed, feeling as if she were a prisoner before the bar. Though what in hell's name could be Vara's charge? Daily her mind went around and around searching for a key to this strange tight-lipped mood of Vara's.

Tapping a cigarette rhythmically against her thumb nail, Vara moved slowly to her chaise-longue and sat down, head flung back against the pillows so she lit the match and blew the first shafts of pale blue smoke carefully. Again, Devona had that feeling of waiting for a cue Every nerve, every gesture measured. Timed as if for an entrance.

Finally, Vara turned toward her with a grave-silence a cool pause that made Devona feel tortured, too tall, too young too everything that was different and out of place

"I would much prefer," Vara began slowly, anger gone from her voice now and replaced with infinite coldness, "that you didn't go cavorting by moonlight at this hour—either alone or in the company of Peter."

Flushing, Devona bit her lip. "I'm sorry. It was such a perfect night and Dale——"

"It a very charming young man, I'm sure," Vara cut in, "but not considered. "But, I'm afraid unconventional behavior will by you open to criticism. And that wouldn't be quite fair to me, do you think?"

Miserably, Devona shook her head, murmured, "I'm sorry."

"I'm really surprised that with your experience, your maids devoted attention, that you would be guilty of such things."

Hot tears came into Devona's eyes and made it impossible to speak from weight together "I didn't suppose there was any harm I'm sorry It won't happen—again."

"Only a window," she said aloud and slipping out of bed, ran barefooted across the cloth-gilled carpet to the window.

As she stood, hidden by the heavy draperies, one silken arm crooked around the window catch, she saw someone cross the patio below A figure in white, with one shoulder strap fastened pale, walked noiselessly on the green velvet lawn.

Devona's heart stood strangely still. His jaunty white pajamas replaced by a woollen cap, His finely kept hair exchanged for dingy thin sheet and a torn sweater. Under his arm he carried a bundle wrapped in newspaper.

Through the nearby half-light of early morning, Devona saw him hurry into under the palms facing the ocean, saw him disappear from sight. Then, turned her very slender white body

Vara stood in the door watching Devona in Dale's arms. Devona was unaware of Vara's presence until she heard a cool voice behind her.

"Sit down, please," Vara said coldly, indicating a little straight-backed chair.

"He. We'll hope not." Vara crushed out her cigarette and clasped her hands behind her perfectly coiffed head. "And now that you're here, I want to discuss another little problem with you."

Devona crossed right in her lap, met her mother's eyes levelly. "And that problem is?"

"You. The one concerning your future."

"My future?"

"Because, of course, you can't stay on here, you know. You realize that, don't you?"

Devona felt the walls recede and then rush back at her. "But stay here? When did her mother mean?

Vara was smiling now, that slow, careful smile. "You don't suppose I'd put you, my dear, if I just two like this is only a temporary home for me, too.

"Well hope not." Vara crushed out her cigarette and clasped her hands behind her perfectly coiffed head. "And now that you're here, I want to discuss another little problem with you."

and feel like a million!

sure that Vara didn't believe a word of what hed said.

"I see." Her lovely lips curled a little and the warning was plain in those hard grey eyes as she looked at Devona. "Well, run back to bed, Devona. It'll still a hideously restricted hour."

"Yes, of course." Devona managed, and I'm sorry to have disturbed every one But I did enjoy——"

"Never mind," Vara interrupted curtly "You'll rouse the whole house And I think we've had enough for one night."

The thrust went home with sharp-edged cruelty Devona knew. If she'd needed further proof Vara's cutting words gave it to her then. Daily, Devona nodded, started down the hall to her own room.

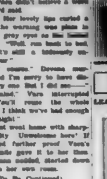
LEARN ENOUGH OF WRITING FRIENDS—WRITING LETTERS



Put Warmth Into Your Notes

Getting a letter from some girls is an exciting affair; from others it is a boring chore. Why? Because the former much a girl is dear to be entertained by the latter. "CALLING ALL CARS"

Save Gasoline

A NATIONAL EMERGENCY

Canada is right up against an acute shortage of gasoline and fuel oil. Tankers that normally supply our country have been commandeered for vitally important overseas service.

The Commonwealth Air Training Plan, the rapid development of Canada's mechanized army units and the great work carried on by our corvettes make the demand for fuel urgent.

Our crude oil intake is limited. There is just one thing to do if our fighting forces are to carry on with a "full tank". Every Canadian motorist is asked to cut his daily gas consumption in half!

There are many ways by which this 50% saving can be made . . . ways and means to give you more mileage per gallon. You can drive slower so that you will use less gasoline. You can go fifty-fifty with your neighbours, inviting each other to share cars . . . for business, and for pleasure. People can readily go to and from work together, using one car instead of four . . . using one gallon of gasoline instead of several. Women as well as men can make these savings.

The amount of gasoline used in Canada for business, social and non-essential activities is exceedingly high in proportion to that used by our fighting forces. One look at the figures would convince you that this situation must be reversed.

17 easy ways towards a 50% GASOLINE SAVING

(Approved by Automobile Experts)

Reduce driving speed from 60 to 40 on the open road.
Avoid jack-rabbit starts.
Avoid useless or non-essential driving.
Turn motor off when not in use, do not leave idling.
Don't race your engine but let it warm up slowly.
Don't strain your engine; change gears.
Keep carburetor cleaned and properly adjusted.
Tune up motor, timing, etc.
Keep spark plugs and valves clean.
Check cooling system overheating wastes gasoline.
Maintain tires at right pressures.
Lubricate efficiently; worn engines waste gasoline.
Drive in groups to and from work, using cars alternate days.
For golf, picnics and other outings, use one car instead of four.
Take those short shopping trips ON FOOT and carry parcels home.
Walk to and from the station.
Boat owners, too, can help by reducing speed.

[illegible] DO SO WITH OUR FIGHTING [illegible]

Canada does not ask or request you to put your car up. She merely asks for your help . . . asks that you walk sometimes when the distance isn't too great . . . that you take a shorter drive on Sunday afternoon . . . that you look after your car and keep it in good condition . . . that you say to your neighbour: "Let's use my car today. Say we'll use yours tomorrow."

Every day, in greater and greater quantity, we must release gasoline and oil by the thousands of gallons to our throbbing munitions plants . . . to our tanks and armoured cars . . . to our fighting planes and bombers . . . to our corvettes and merchant ships that ply the wild sea-lanes . . . so that the day of victory may sooner be at hand.

WILL YOU help?

●

It is also vitally important that you reduce the use of domestic and commercial fuel oil.

A Valuable Contribution

Without Forever No Country In World Would Be Prosperous

I am a farmer and the provider for all mankind. I am the every business being constantly depends. A world as built upon by toil, my products and my honesty. Because of my industry Canada my country is one of the leading countries of the world and one with the brightest outlook for the future. Her prosperity is maintained by me. My reaper brings food for to-day my grocery hold promise for to-morrow. In war I am absolute to peace. I am indispensable my country's surest defence and constant reliance.

I am the very soul of Canada the hope of a race the balance wheel of civilization. When I prosper more are happy, when I fail all the world suffers.

Dangerous Necessity

In London the Minister of Home Security has declared that "any pigeons, monkeys mostly collected by amateur naturalists, have killed 12 persons and injured six.

At key points all over Britain an intensive and casualty evacuation drama stood ready for combat use. Had for end, the drama would extend for seven more

A Great Undertaking

It is difficult to consider of any federal organization that is doing or is capable of doing, more for the permanent welfare of Western Canada than the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Administration

The word 'permanent' is used because unlike many administrative organizations that have been set up from time to time it is designed to reach down to the roots of the agricultural problems of the west and its efforts are intended to effect a permanent cure for the defects, which time has shown, have impeded the development and prosperity of the major industry of the west, the industry upon which depends the welfare of the country as a whole. That problem, in a nutshell, is economic stability of income and when it is required to promote growth and sustancy.

To some degree and in some areas of this vast west, the problem has already been solved by the P.F.R.A. and as a result of its activities, thousands of families who a few years ago were unable to wrest a living from the soil, are now able to provide the necessities of life for themselves and thousands more are on the high road to achievement of the same objective—self sufficiency.

The results already achieved are so well-evident as to warrant further expansion of the efforts that have been made in these directions. But Prairie results will only be limited by the amount of money made available for further extension of this excellent work, and because of the importance to the improvement in agricultural prosperity which these activities create, there should not only be no curtailment in worthwhile expenditures but, if it is at all financially possible, more money should be made available for this valuable undertaking.

Program In Danger

Reference must be made more specifically to the appropriation made available for the rehabilitation of individual and community projects and to the loan for the individual farmer or small groups of farmers, small dams for the provision of water for farm gardens, for stock watering and for minor irrigation projects; for the extension of the community pasture plan, for the transfer of families from marginal or sub-marginal areas which cannot be improved and made productive for the encouragement of more conserving methods of cultivation and for expansion of tree planting projects to provide shelter for livestock, in each area so, to trap and conserve moisture, to protect gardens and to convert bounce into a thing.

Of all organizations on the North American continent devoted to the doctrine and practice of monetary conservation, P.F.R.A. is the most outstanding in scope in its development, application and expansion of the small individual and community project. The United States is the habitat of the spectacular scheme which harnesses the productive potentialities of great rivers and makes it available to by use of machines in terms of thousands of kilowatts of electrical power and in terms of thousands of square miles of cultivable area.

It is true that in Western Canada also, P.F.R.A. has developed a limited number of larger irrigation projects and has more mapped out for the future but, to date its major effort has been devoted to a multiplicity of small, inexpensive projects, and it should not be overlooked that while these measure undertakings are not of sufficient magnitude to draw large headlines in the daily newspapers. Their cumulative effect brings equally beneficial results to large numbers of people and to large areas in the aggregate.

* * * *

Sound Economy

It is not intended to convey the impression that money required for the work of rehabilitation should be diverted to extension of P.F.R.A. activities. On the contrary The war is, and must be the first and the great consideration. Unless that is won the work of the P.F.R.A. and the country generally, upon it goes for naught in its beneficial effects upon the welfare of the people of this country. It would only be of advantage to the Nazi conqueror. The most obvious cannot be kept out, however, that there is ever some curtailment in other domestic activities could be effected without serious impairment of vital essentials to enable the prosecution of the national project to be continued on a more extended scale it would pay long term dividends as well as bring almost immediate results.

The large scale project, valuable though it may be, involving expenditures of millions of dollars, can very well be deferred until after victory has crowned the efforts of the armed forces and the civilian population. Indeed, projects of this nature, will be required to stem the threat of widespread unemployment after the guns have ceased to fire, and to have plans of this nature in prospect for post-war reconstruction is an essential part of economy

On the other hand, it is equally sound economy to push the small project in the field of national ability to finance, as long as it does not encroach war needs as measured in manpower materials or financial resources.

Lady Assor Asks Canadians To Help Air Raid Victims

Lady Nancy Astor, wife of a member of the British parliament, asked Canadians to collect furniture to send to Britain "when Hitler is finished," in a letter to Capt R. A. Davis, stationed at Bolton Military hospital.

The Holy City

Jerusalem In Now A Wartime Metropolis

Refugees streaming into Jerusalem have made the storied, Holy City a teeming metropolis where all Allied uniforms can be seen and there is a babel of tongues races and colors

Not since the days of King Solomon has the city been such an important Middle Eastern centre Progressive German privateers in the Mediterranean have brought activity cabinet ministers diplomatic parleys more and students to Jerusalem

For the first time since the crusades Christians of all denominations unite under one flag and in a common cause But since the crusades of 800 years ago the brotherhood of arms now includes Moslems Jews

Religious mindset persons see in this the beginning of the fulfillment of Isaiah's who said prophets in which the Lord's hope was a sign to the nations upon and nations flowed to it.

They believe there also will be fulfillment of that part of the prophecy which says "They will beat swords into plowshares spears to pruning hooks nation shall not lift sword against nation and they will not learn war any more

The mood of Jerusalem is evidenced by the fact there is a dearage of Hebrew in the European language

The Holy Sepulchre in the Saint point of daily life where appointments are made and kept where carefully-groomed society women walk with sharp Bengalines where dramatic meetings take place between brothers and sisters who have not supported one another's presence in Palestine

Most refugees are energetically engaged in night-seeing One tourist manager conducting Hebrew clients had them as "tourists" in their own notion."

Jerusalem is so overcrowded that monasteries convents churches synagogues and even the Hebrew university an Hebrew Institute are receiving all space available into refugees regardless of their faith

During the day the population appears to increase steadily as refugees, contention, coal native tamarins, Arabs, Jews and Britons Automobiles purchased from street hawkers shouting their wares in all languages

The remaining hours of the evening through the old city taking in the sights and sounds. The muezzin's voice mingle with church bells sheep bells and the evening prayers in synagogues.

Claimed Made About Hitler By Late Ex-Kaiser

The British Broadcasting Corporation told this story about a command made by the late ex-Kaiser Wilhelm of Hitler

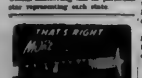
Last year at the time of the fall of France, the ex-kaiser said that Hitler had planned the whole operation.

The kaiser spurred his shoulders and said "It only goes to show how well we trained our corporals in the last war"

Quite True

The butcher was trying to impress on the children how important bad was been the discovery of the law of gravitation. "Sir Isaac Newton was sitting on the ground looking at the tree An apple fell on his head, and then that he discovered gravitation. Just think children," she added, isn't that wonderful?—

The juvenile scrub boy replied "Yes'm, an if he had been sittin' in a wheelbarrow it would have been worse n't never have discovered nothin."



The woman has complete faith in Canada . . . in the rightness of our cause . . . and the greatness of our future, our victory is won. And she wanted as much to "do her bit" in the Victory Loan. But she didn't have $50

Then a Loan Adviser explained how she could buy a Bond by instalments To-day she is the proud and happy applicant for a $50 Victory Bond!

Here is how she will pay for it: $5.00 on application, $7.50 on July 15th, $7.50 on August 15th $15.00 on September 15th, $10.00 on October 15th, and $30.00 on November 15th

You, too, can buy a bond this easier way. And remember, Victory Bonds are as good as cash. You've seen it's all of Canada. Your return—the satisfaction of having struck a blow for freedom from Nazi tyranny

DAUGHTER OF DESTINY

CHAPTER XI

Devona would have fled immediately to the safety of her own room. But as Vara closed the door behind her again, Dale caught her hand.

"It may be an unwritten hour to be up hunting bellykars, but it's a swell hour for a ride out on the desert to watch a sunrise," he whispered. "Shall I?"

Perfectly aware that Vara probably stood just inside that closed door waiting to be obeyed, Devona hesitated.

"Please. You've no idea how lovely it is." The blue eyes pleaded.

And only when she nodded her acceptance did he release her, stood grinning as she raced down the hall, closed her own door with a muted little click.

Half an hour later, Dale was waiting for her at the stables. The eastern sky was just beginning to flush a lovely pink and except for the occasional sleepy cry of a horse's head in the stalls, the world seemed wrapped in a blanket of deep silence.

Devona felt almost as if she should whisper her greeting in the eerie half-light of morning.

"Did I keep you waiting?"

Dale swung down off the corral fence where he's been perched, shook his head. "Not long. And—" his grin teased again "—it was worth it."

"Maybe we'd better leave a note," she suggested.

"I did." Dale held out his hand. "Up you go."

Devona broke just as they rode out of the canyon, came onto a level mesa. The unbelievably blue sky broke into a brilliant prism spreading fingers of green and soft purple and orange across the sky like giant searchlights.

For a moment they just watched the lovely miracle, feasting their eyes, breathing deep of the crisp, dry air. Even their sleek, well-groomed mounts stood quietly for a moment.

And Devona had the strange sensation of their being alone in some infinite, remote world—just she and Dale together. If only it could always be like this.

Then the rim of the sun pushed over the horizon and it was morning.

"Glorious, wasn't it?" [illegible]

Dale didn't answer and when she looked up to see why, she found his eyes on her, grave, almost tender. And for a fleeting second the old fear, the instinctive, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

VOLUME XXX — JULY 31, 1941 — [illegible]

Royal Canadian Air Force No. 4 Training Commenced

[illegible] by day the Royal Canadian Air Force grows bigger—in many ways.

More hands are entering into operations, aircraft for training are being supplied in increasing numbers.

A big expansion is being completed in the materials themselves. And here the most will be noted in the services such people of the near future.

Requirements now announced set out the minimum heights and weights for Wireless Operators (air gunners), Air Observers, Pilots and Observers as well as persons for ground duties.

Air Force authorities consider it preferable that many candidates who applied prior to the recent announcements regarding height and weight and who were found unacceptable at the time, may now fulfill requirements, provided they are qualified in other respects. For the information of young Canadians eager to enter the Air Force and who may consider themselves ineligible, following is a list of the new requirements:

(i) The maximum height and weight for Wireless Operators (air gunners), and Air Gunners are now as follows:

(a) Maximum height, 6 feet, 3 inches.

(b) Maximum weight, 210 pounds.

(ii) The maximum height and weight for Pilots and Observers are as follows:

(a) Maximum height, 6 feet, 3 inches.

(b) Maximum weight, 210 pounds.

(iii) The minimum height for Airmen for ground duties is five feet, two inches, except in the case of skilled tradesmen who are acceptable at a minimum height of five feet. There is NO maximum.

(iv) The minimum weight acceptable for airmen for ground duties is 105 pounds for those five feet in height; 108 pounds for those five feet one inch in height; 111 pounds for those five feet two inches in height; 113 pounds for those five feet three inches in height.

But long new strong words were announced when by the Canadian Legion Educational Services are prepared to provide facilities for the pre-enlistment education of keen young men qualified in all basic requirements other than educational for enlistment in the R.C.A.F. for training as Pilot, Observer or Wireless Operator (air gunner).

Information respecting such courses is available at Recruiting Centres in No. 4 Training Command, location as follows:

2200 1st Street East, Calgary, Alta.

Provincial Building, Edmonton, Alta.

Regina Trading Company Building, Regina, Sask.

The combination of new regulations respecting physique and educational qualifications is expected to open the doors for many prospective airmen.

Post Office Department Canada

The incomplete addressing of mail handed in by soldiers at training centres in Canada is the cause of numerous delays in delivery. Memorandum William Mulock, K.C., Postmaster-General, to obviate this situation, again requests the full co-operation of the public in bringing out in full the correct and complete address on all military mail.

It is essential that the Post Office place-name should always be included in the address of mail passed to soldier in Canada because their mail is handled by the civil post offices and not by the Army Postal Service.

The reminder of the name of place where the soldiers is sent has resulted in many such letters and parcels being forwarded to the Dead Letter Office, where it is found that the Units named in the addresses still in Canada. The Provincial delay then ensued, and the extra work thrown upon the Canadian Postal Corps in locating the address of this mail would be entirely eliminated if the units at current addressing were indicated.

Mail for Delivery in Canada should be addressed with the usual complete particulars—Regimental Number, Rank and Name, Name and details of Unit (i.e. Company or Battalion, Battery, Squadron, Unit, etc.) and NAME OF THE POST OFFICE WHERE THE SOLDIER'S UNIT IS LOCATED.

Mail for delivery Overseas should bear Regimental Number, Rank and Name of soldier, Name of Details of Unit, (i.e. Company or section Squadron Battery, Holding Unit, etc.) Name of Regiment or Branch of the service in full—and the words Canadian Army Overseas, but no place name should be given.

All letters should be fully prepaid, and a return address should be given in the upper left hand corner.

A German soldier confessed on the Eastern front he regretted he ever took the Bundeau that he might have remained in world "alive in London to Annie" to throw a return romp in the British capital!

The railroad children running to town hear a shout and a hoot. With a "P" passenger on, to might be modified to three short and a long.

Nazi "Christianity"

To-day the people of Canada are permitted to worship God in the manner which conforms to their personal beliefs. That is a heritage which they possess as one of the dearly purchased liberties by their forebears, along with the right to oppose any form of political, economic and social doctrines they may see fit. To-morrow what?

Thousands of people who crossed the broad waters to make the Canada the home of their choice, did so because they valued highly the privilege of religious freedom. What will become of this precious right if the ambition of Hitler and his Nazi hordes is allowed to prevail on this continent? "Nazi Nazis" declared—a Hitler's manner "supremacy" it is clearly set forth in Mein Kampf beyond dispute. Even now he is well on the road pressing towards this goal, and will reach it unless he can be stopped.

It is of vital importance that the people of this country consider well what will happen to them and their cherished liberties, should ruthless Freedom seems Hitler is stopped in his tracks before it is too late. It is well to contemplate the type of "Christianity" that Canadians will be forced to accept if Hitler's will prevails. It is set forth in a resolution recently issued by "The National Church," organ of the National Church Union of German Christians and reads in part as follows:

"For us only one God exists. Who created from the very beginning of time and Whom we have revealed again through National Socialism. We say: In struggle against Jewry we are obeying our Lord God. Obedience to the words God means obedience to the manifestation of his orders through Adolf Hitler. The word Germany is part of our religious faith."

• • • •

Hail to Hitler

There can be no misconception as to the meaning of this manifesto. It means, in short, that every citizen obeyed by Adolf Hitler in the word of God, as such, must be implicitly obeyed. It means that Hitler and Germany are the keystones of the spiritual world and those who do not bow to this contemptible authority must be subjugated and destroyed, or, for it is obvious that this doctrine and Christianity as we know it cannot exist side by side.

Hitler has announced his determination to dominate the world and to choke that Russian down the throats of every nation in the world. Those who rested must perish. There is no alternative.

And how is this "Christian" doctrine manifesting itself in actual practice? Can we not say by look at what is going on in the countries already dominated by the Nazis to appreciate what is in store for Canada, if the Nazi religion is permitted to fasten its slimy tentacles around the people of this country. The "Christian" National Socialists of Germany have set out to partially appeasing in some of the subjugated countries and in others it is full force and effect.

Poland affords an excellent illustration of the practical application of Nazi Christianity, as the following extract from the Polish Ecclesiastical Review, issued in London, tells:

"Nazis are driving panic-stricken Poles from their homes in Polish territories now incorporated in the German Reich. The deportations affect all districts, all classes of people. In the districts of Cracktyan and Kalisz small landowners have been expropriated, indefinite peasants driven out. Five hundred persons, Polish business men and merchants, were expropriated in Kalisz in one night. Children were separated from their parents and hidden from them.

"Throughout the most severe part of last winter, deportation from the Pomeranian province of Lodz and Poznan continued. From the small district of Konsway, 600 peasants were taken to the General Government in cattle trains. Their journey to Rawicz lasted five weeks during which they received no cooked food and remained endless periods at wayside stations where 40 children died.

"Out of one single consignment of 1,200 Poles from the west to Pistrzow 250 children died, besides several adults. Only 17 children survived the journey."

What is Nazi "Christianity," with Herr Hitler as the mouthpiece of its God, in action.

• • • •

Heathen Heretic

It is true that the full force and severity of Nazi "Christianity" has not yet been applied to some of the other subjugated countries, but that is only because it suits Hitler's policy has dictated the temporary application more slowly in these countries. If the claims of Reformer remained fastened upon them indefinitely, there is no reason to suppose that they, too, will not ultimately feel the full weight of Nazi religious doctrine, unless their peoples are prepared to bow down and worship the Nazi God.

Is there any reason to suppose that the same will not be true for Canadians, when the time comes? And the time will come, unless the people of this country are willing to sacrifice to the Nazi superiority.

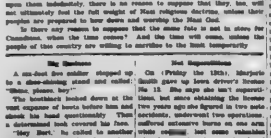
Hot Gospeller

A six-foot five soldier stepped up On (Friday the 13th), Marjorie to a shoe-shining stand and called: "Shine, please, boy!"

The bootblack looked down at the vast expanse of boots before him and shook his head questionably. Then a determined look covered his face.

"Hey Bert," he called to another boy, "Gimme a hand!" I've got a hot army contract!"

A writer in a daily paper expresses his fear of a sudden German invasion of B.C. via Alaska and Yukon. Hitler I hasn't even signed a pact of non-aggression with Dr Value yet.



The Only Cause

In Your Long Strength Of Steel Nerves, "TRY THAT"

While you should not underrate Hitler, you need not overrate him either. His strength is going. His power is on the wane. He is destined for extermination just as surely as any rat that ever sang its song in the gutter. The only question is how long?

This can be a short war or a very long one. It depends on us. It depends entirely on the force and speed with which we hit him now in the place where he is vulnerable.

And the most vulnerable place is Germany. Every German killed in Germany is the next few weeks will spread far greater terror there than a thousand Germans slain in the Balkans or even in the Atlantic.

Every factory every house has been blitzed down in the towns in consequence of defeat. Every bomb that crashes in a street will mean the crash of doom.

Remember that all middle-aged and old people in Germany today know what defeat means. They remember the grim days of the early twenties. Many of them know what it means to be plunged from comfort to complete destitution in a day and to be driven from a well-laden table to one where food is scarce.

If Germans can suddenly be made to realize that instead of victory to-day will mean defeat to-morrow, the end of the conquest of the world is almost in sight. Germany is not prepared to be a German soldier on guard at every door.

Having A Tough Time

Days In England Are Filled With Danger And Excitement

He is having a tough time. Sergeant on the shortage of food has been cut down. Rationing, which began on Monday, 8th, has been much more serious than the public realizes. Here is a recipe for dog food, taken from the Dogs' Bulletin, the journal of the National Canine Defence League, which is interesting.

"Wash and cut up pack of real tripe, simmer in large saucepan of grease; stew gently in enough water to cover until tender; the addition of a few bones will help and improve the stock. Add enough vegetables, such as potatoes, carrots, onions, etc., to thicken, and also well for a minute or so over the fire." Over 100,000 people have already written for the recipe and are trying to keep their four-footed friend, the dog, from too much hunger.—Our Dumb Animals.

Blitz Buggy

Light Armored Scout Car Has Speed Up To 80 Miles An Hour

The Canadian army is studying one of the most terrifying adapts some of the latest mechanical combination on plane to weapons that can be imagined. It is the light armored scout car with speed up to 80 miles per hour. This car would certainly supersede the motorcycle shock troops developed by the German army to rut the Polish hell. Troops armed with their scouts in their machine gun carriers in this war.

The Canadian army we found has its eyes on two types, the American M-new and one-ton-and-a-half and the British Universal carrier. [illegible]

A group of parliamentarians saw these types of vehicles during a visit to Petawawa Camp recently. A few little United States scout car went through its paces over a tough rough ragge dotted with thickets, while the visitors watched from a nearby hillside. It stole the show and the members of Parliament came away talking like the officers of Fire mission to very affectionate terms of the "little buggy."

Later the blitz buggy was demonstrated in a mud pit, and Hon J L. Ralston and F G. MacKenzie (Moose Jaw), M.P., went aboard as passengers. This is something in which for in the news room, but what the public does not know is that Ralston at Petawawa will be one of their number in any more possible crumbling of the empire. He is supposed to be a German soldier on guard at every door.

Lord Winterton, British jam lord leader, is selling the public chestnut some match of H. Gorman—and bomb-battered Britons are shouting for more.

DAUGHTER OF DESTINY

CHAPTER XII.

The sun was already high, a cooling light not directly overhead, when Devona and Dale with fresh zest on the means on mounts weary and docile at last.

"Darling, let's not go right back to the house," Dale suggested as they came to the edge of the cliff where they could see the green-flowering mass that was Palm Springs spilled into the little valley below "I don't want to share you with any one—not yet. Can't we have this day just to ourselves?"

"Yes—let's." Devona smiled happily, still scarcely aware that there was a real world to go back to, everyday problems to solve.

Dale sent their tired horses back to the stables by means of a roving Mexican lad and a silver coin. Then, solemnly, hand-in-hand, they wandered through Palm Springs' little main shops where dark-eyed Mexicans tried to sell them everything from cheap serapes to tasseled silver necklaces.

"The flowers will like this, Senor," one sly, dark-eyed girl insisted, holding out a bunch of purple lupine in the palm of her hand.

Dale grinned, turned to her. "How about it, Devona?"

Devona tried to pretend unconcern. "Why, I suppose so, Dale," she said, but her voice was lovely as this paying at being Dale's wife. Just make-believe now. But soon—oh, very soon, it would be real.

Her heart beat so hard it made her hands tremble as she picked up the lovely basket, pretended to examine it closely.

"Put it on, darling," Dale insisted, grasped the basket and tossed the money toward where she conserved. "Like it?"

"I like it, too," and calmly laid down bills on the counter.

"Date—please. You mustn't—Her fingers fumbled with the slender clasp.

"And why not?" His caught her hands, held them prisoner. "If I want to buy you something to—remember this day by, why shouldn't I?"

As if she'd need anything to make her remember this day, Devona thought, smiling But she didn't have the chance to tell him that. The Mexican shopkeeper was back now with the change.

Thank you, Senor I'm sure Senora will always like the basket."

Dale grinned, nodded to the Mexican, "Senora," he said, and he laughed almost when she flushed again, shyly.

They had dinner in an Hispanic little Mexican restaurant on the edge of the palm-grove under a crooked, ruby Hills place where they were served delicious tortilla soup and [illegible] the tiny tostada that followed them.

Devona had no idea when they were eating she was only aware of the tenderness in Dale's blue eyes every time her hand rested for a brief light moment. And then slowly, fingertip by fingertip, he crossed her length her hand on the table and twined his fingers with hers. Then his hand, and a little shopping in the morning."

"All right." Devona agreed dutifully, but there was a little wistfulness in her voice.

Dale's own voice was tender. "I'm sorry, darling, but I've got to get back to the farm. I've been away entirely too long. Trying hunts ache—but you don't think I'm going to [illegible] one day?"

"Of course not and her mother's eyes shone. "There will never be anyone else."

"Not for me, child," she contradicted brightly. "I'm sure you can bring up your son to be a good girl.

For an hour, Devona passed her pretty fingers nervously together to end no answer to the awful question that she knew must be asked. Then she gave [illegible] and took her self-control and [illegible] Dale's own voice was [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

PLEDGED TO SAVE GASOLINE

Let Your Car Wear Proudly This Patriotic Sticker!

Go to your friendly neighborhood service station or your local garage today. A complete overhaul job has been planned for you—and your car will benefit 100 per cent—everything has been done to help you. But let us forget a possible emergency. He is a possible TRAITOR. He will advise you to buy gas instead of more. He will point out ways and means of saving gasoline.

He will tell you all about the "50/50" Pledge and read your gas consumption by filling out. He will invite you to sign. This pledge will not jeopardize either you or your car. It will merely put you a member of the vast army of motorists of our common co-operating with the Government to serve gasoline.

This is entirely a voluntary movement. It is not rationing. This the Government hopes to prevent. But we are faced with a critical shortage of gasoline due to the diversion of tankers for emergency service and to the growing needs of our Fighting Forces.

There is no call for panic—no need for alarm—but this war is being fought with gasoline—and you are fighting for our very lives. Sign the Pledge today and conserve as more like per cent of your gasoline consumption.

It is also equally important that you replace the use of domestic and commercial fuel oil.

REMEMBER: The slower you drive, the more you save!

Is It Enough?

In the daily press, from the platform, over the air, through government pamphlets, Canadians are being reminded daily with surveyed terms of statistics detailing in various forms the part being played by each municipality of the Canadian war effort covering now nearly two years of the greatest fight in the history of the world.

Much interesting information has been issued by the Director of Public Information at Ottawa, entitled Canada at War." A summary of Canada's part in the war since September 10 1939. It is handsomely gotten a pamphlet, is terse in a measure of material for speakers and those who ask for up-to-date information about Canada's participation in the war. It will be revised monthly and will contain the most recent of available facts and figures.

Dealing with all aspects of the Canadian war effort, including contributions which have been made to date to the supply of men, materials and resources, the elderly being put forth by Canadians in the theatre of war as well as on the home front, with the result of voluntary organizations, national departments and boards, the booklet affords a valuable, yet concise compendium of information on the Canadian war achievement to date.

Although apparently designed principally as a handbook for speakers and possibly writers, it is a booklet deserving of study by the general public. Issued in a pictorial, the information it contains can safely be regarded as accurate and the data can be used as a basis for arriving at conclusions without fear of being convinced on false premises.

This letter is highly important, for while it is possible to arrive at false conclusions based on facts whose veracity cannot be questioned, finally premises can never lead to sound opinions. In the gigantic struggle in which this country is playing an important role, it is important as never before, that the people be given straight facts, in order that they may be able to arrive at sound conclusions, for it is only on such a foundation that they can unite in maximum strength for the maximum effort absolutely necessary to ultimate victory.

Unsound Isolation

There can be no gainsaying the statement that Canada entered the war relatively unprepared with a comparatively weak military establishment and an industrial plant ungeared to war requirements. Despite that time great changes have taken place and much has been accomplished in altering the country on a war time basis and in building up the armed forces necessary to impressed upon the country as a partner with others in the Allied drive against world domination by Hitler and his hordes.

It may bring a sense of comfort and satisfaction to read for instance, that "Since the outbreak of the war Canada has devoted an ever-increasing portion of its manpower, both human and material, into the war effort. The 1941-42 budget provides between 35 and 40 per cent of the national income for war More than a quarter million Canadians are serving in the active services and scores abroad and at home are engaged in industrial capacity has very largely been turned over to war production in the months since the outbreak of the war."

These are undoubted facts and Canadians are justified in taking some pride in what has been achieved to date, but that pride and satisfaction must be tempered by the knowledge and unquestioned belief that much more must be done, that the tempo of effort must be raised to a higher degree, before it will be possible to say that nothing has been left undone that can be done and that every last morsine that can be made by every individual in the nation has been made

"Canada's war plans for the balance of this year have been made on the basis of considerations little more than now with the heads of Britain's Army, Navy and Air Force, with Prime Minister Churchill and with other high officials in Britain." says the concluding paragraph of a general summary in the booklet referred to, and adds "Canadian ministers hold these officials that Canada's object is a full-out contribution with everything Canada has and as fast as she can give it."

Complete Politicians

These words denote that a solemn promise has been made on behalf of the Canadian people and they naturally inspire the question whether or not we have yet reached the stage in our war effort when we can say that this promise is being fulfilled. That is a personal question to each and one which every Canadian must ask himself or herself. Is there something more that I could do that I have not yet done? Is there not some exercise that I could make that I have not yet made? Upon the answer to these questions by every individual in the land depends the ultimate outcome of the war effort.

As the Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, said in a recent speech on behalf of the Victory Loan campaign:

"We are in a war, we must work, fight, win, or perish together."

Lumps Order For Aluminum

The United States expects to buy 200,000,000 pounds of aluminum from Canada as part of a plan to double the world's available supply of the essential wartime metal by 1942. A few weeks ago the United States placed a 200,000,000 order for aluminum with the Aluminum Company of Canada.

Egg Market Strong

Britain May Require A Large Supply Of Eggs

Unfortunately for Canada that Great Britain will require an increasingly large [illegible] of eggs from Canada during the war, both of the war and The Dominion Department of Agriculture believes the time has come to prepare for this demand through the purchase of baby chicks but a great deal can be done by a suitable organization and carrying over of all available laying stock. There is a notice able tendency at the present time on the part of poultry producers to reduce the laying flock, as the marketing of [illegible] quite heavy during the first few weeks in June.

While systematic culling is desirable at all times the present situation would not appear to warrant heavy reductions There has been no break in the price of eggs and all indications point to a particularly strong egg market during the summer and fall of this year

While it is true that a great many hens were kept over last fall and in the ordinary course of events at the time when new pullets and birds that have completed their lay should go to market Poultry producers however would be well advised to make their yearling flocks as complete as possible by culling and purging all hens to be retained from the market of the fall.

But when Britain's laughter is over there will come over there baby chicks by the million to start the poultry industry all over again. This meeting can be hollow ceremony Confidence and confidence in the future. From 3 to 4 members booked with hope went toward the Atlantic. Those were not overseas to conquer or bestow men. In service as in valiant words they were to conquer or bestow men. Under the fields of fate democracy has come awake When we give our hearts and our minds to the cause we join in no mean sense Beyond to-day's blackness the [illegible] of victory will stand. Primitive Literature

Very Aptly Describes Many By Young Advertiser Boy

As the ultimate in simplicity—or as an example of primitive literature—or the highbrows call it—there is this letter from a boy correspondent of 10. It is reproduced from the current issue of Country Life in BC The lad was asked to write an ad for Pitch and this is what he wrote

Dear Sir I want to write about to the owl The owl can not see at all in the daytime, and at night is not so that I am a fraid of it. I do not much about the owl, so I will go on to tell you about Pitch. I am going to choose it is the row

The row is a mammal and it is like a dog. It has a long tail, five feet back and upper and a head. It has a tail on which it hangs a brush With this it sends flies away, so that they will not fall on the milk.

The head is for the purpose of covering heard and so that the mouth can be somewhere. The horns are to butt with. The mouth is to mow with.

Under the cow hangs the milk bag. Some cows have two bags, and when people do not come the milk does not come How the cow gets milk I have not the faintest idea. Millions more and more. The cow has a fine sense of smell and can smell it for away This is the reason for the fresh air of the country

What the cow eats is grass, hay and when it says nothing it is because its mouth is full. It is always eats turtes so that it can get enough Calgary Albertan.

Bacon Price Increased

Export Basis Jumps 25 Cents Per Hundred Pounds

Close on the heels of a request that Canadian eat less bacon and pork products to help Britain, comes the news bound announced an increase of 75 cents per 100 pounds in the price to be paid for bacon exported to the United Kingdom. The recent increase brought the price for grade A No. 1 steadily Wiltshire sides on May 25, and a previous rise of $1 per 100 pounds on May 1

The new price is applicable to all products put into cure for export, according to previous announcement of the price control expert [illegible] Malcolm Gaudin) will do anything that with help the Made to victory," he emphasized.

Suited To Our Time

Prayer Made By Canada's Double Hero Then 300 Years Ago

One April day more than 350 years ago a man prayed to God. He was about to set forth upon a great and hazardous expedition His name was Francis Drake and he was bound for India where lay many ships intended for the Spanish Armada. The havoc he wrought among them is history His prayer before setting out is not. Drake set right do tell us how are your with and children?"

"O Lord God when Thou grivest to Thy servants to endeavor any great matter, grant us also to know that it is not the beginning but the continuing of the same until it be thoroughly finished which yieldeth the true glory through Him that accomplisheth the finishing of Thy work laid down His life."

That prayer of Drake's was used in many churches in Britain during the recent national day of prayer Here is a phrase in it which may well serve as the Empire's motto at this time: "Continuing of the same until it be thoroughly finished." Toronto Star

Gone Too Far Wrong

Prince Bernhard Seen No Chance For Success Of Old Conspirator

Prince Bernhard husband of Crown Princess Juliana of the Netherlands, is one of the oldest families in Germany who harness 100 per cent. Dutch when he married the Crown Princess of the Netherlands, declared at Boston that the German people have gone so far wrong that the Nazi regime that in he opinion, it is virtually impossible for the community of culture and learning to to return even after the Reich's "Dream" is dead.

The Prince Consort who was the guest of honor at a luncheon before he reported the horrors in the Netherlands throne in the pre-war days of 1937 asserted there was nothing but bitterness in his heart for his former friend Hitler. He is a Royal Air Force officer in Britain's Royal Air Force and works from morning to night for the Allied cause.

"I don't think there is any chance for any German country both," he said "It would take years to get the German people straight.

"They had their chance before Hitler came into power. Since they didn't take them—since they have gone along with what has been done

I think they are going to have to take what is coming to them when Germany is defeated."

Prince Bernhard's first tribute was to the English people. He said that "everything you read of their courage is true."

He related, he describes three times a day in connection with the distribution. "I'd try to comfort them and they'd say: 'We're quite all right do tell us how are your with and children?'"

"Yours, DEVONIA."

Folding the torn white paper into a square, she turned back to the door, opened it softly, and heart beating a frenzied fourath against her ribs silently she stepped into the deep-carpeted hall, started toward Daisy's room.

But—she stopped short. Some one else stepped silently along that hallway. A tall, fair-haired woman out of the shadows and into the light. It came one who stood, even now, her hand on the door knob of Daisy's room.

Softly her body moving without conscious direction Devonia went back to her room

It was after midnight when she finished packing. She lovely red velvet, the pretty blue chiffon and the other things that had carried her to the pinnacle of happiness was now packed in her bags. And within the space between two dawns

Hands steady now she took her father's picture from the dressing table packed it into the big bulging bag. Then, with a last look around everything she'd brought into this room that she'd entered so happily she would leave behind. Everything, of course she would not stay She'd have need to wear the pretty things. The only thing left now was to get out of it as quickly and quietly as possible.

First the note to Vera Semple Vera would find that on her desk. A mistake in coming This was no mistake she was leaving Vera to the completely forgotten And good-by

With a little sigh, she slipped the note and her key on the polished surface Here Margarets deliver it to him after she was safely gone And then came the hardest part of all—another unnerving incident!

CHAPTER XIII.

Devona wept until exhaustion brought a kind of calm. Without turning to look behind her, she knew that the day's happiness came but to a bitter end. Then, remembering where down sweet over the horizons The look in Dale's eyes when she'd told of the news of Vera's return. The sudden touch of his arms that tender moment she'd thought she would fall to her death. That glimpse of paradise when he'd whispered

"Darling, I love you. I don't ever want to lose you."

Suddenly she sat bolt upright Hard and that, didn't he? Hadn't Dale taken that for granted? Or had she dreamed it? Tortured she sprang off the bed, crossed swiftly to the door There was one way to find out. She'd ask him. Demand the truth and end the horrible nightmare If her mother had been right, then everything was over that much sooner If she had been wrong—

Hope leaped like a new flame in her heart. But, head on the door, hand, she hesitated. She couldn't go to his room at this hour. But—she must talk to him If she waited, Vera would be sure to find her downstairs—

Turning back to the pretty carved desk, she pulled out a sheet of notepaper, wrote rapidly——

"Darling,

"Something has happened. I must talk to you at once. Meet me in the library right now?

"Yours, DEVONIA."

Folding the torn white paper into a square, she turned back to the door, opened it softly, and heart beating a frenzied fourath against her ribs silently she stepped into the deep-carpeted hall, started toward Daisy's room.

A child that has been well nourished and cared for is less liable to become infected. It is important to avoid fatigue, chilling, constipation and indigestion. Don't wait until you are sick to call a doctor. Consult him early and keep in touch with him. Many doctors have had many disorders show significant at an early stage, stiff neck and spine and pains in the neck, arms and legs. A MESSAGE... To Alberta Farmers

The suggestion is offered to Alberta grain producers that wherever possible they should deliver their grain to Alberta Pool Elevators, thus strengthening and building up a purely co-operative organization owned and operated by Alberta farmers.

Alberta Pool Elevators has been singularly successful in developing on co-operative principles the largest grain handling organization in the province; establishing an equitable and fair standard of service for the benefit of all farmers; and in obtaining, in conjunction with its sister Pools in Manitoba and Saskatchewan, through constant contact and intercession with the government of Canada, a measure of price protection and other benefits for the farmers of the western provinces.

It is of the utmost importance at the present time that farmers should have a strong organization to speak for them. The greatest weakness of the farmers' position, from an economic standpoint, is individualism. Individualism must unite if they are to escape being completely submerged.

The Wheat Pool offers a natural rallying point for the farmers. Being founded on true co-operative principles, it is not concerned with politics, religion or national origins.

Every individual farmer is welcome to the ranks, of patrons of Pool Elevators. It has only one objective, namely, the welfare of agriculture.

Why continue to contribute to the support of capitalistic organizations whose only concern is profit for themselves?

Why not arouse yourselves and support an organization whose sole concern is improvement of the lot of the farm family!

The huge surplus of grain in country elevators has complicated the grain handling problem this year, but if you have the opportunity to patronize Pool Elevators, do so. If not, formulate your plans, to use the facilities of this excellent elevator system as you can.

Remember, if your industry is to be aided and sustained, it must be done by yourselves.

The Surplus Wheat Problem

Three totally unrelated items appearing in the daily press within a few days of one another afford an excellent example of the dominant fact that situations and conditions can change so rapidly that they may result in the unanticipated solution of problems which have hitherto appeared insurmountable.

The news items referred to all have or may have actual or potential relationship to the solution of the surplus wheat problem that has, in the past year or so, sorely perplexed the governments of former organizations, business and the individual farmers of the country.

One of these items is an announcement by Hon. J. G. Gardiner of the possibility that some of the huge surplus of Canadian wheat may be utilized to assist Russia as a result of the unexpected contingent of Bibles which the Soviets have got U.S.S.R. and particularly on the Ukraine granary of that country. Another is the announcement that the Australian government has devised a plan for the conversion of the wheat in that country into 22,000,000 gallons of power alcohol as a substitute for gasoline. The third is an expression of hope by the Dominion Council of Health, that the Canadian consumption of 400 international units of B1 per pound in its natural form will appear "sooner or later" on the domestic market.

All three of these items point to the direction towards at least a partial solution of the immediate problem of how to dispose of the tremendous surplus of wheat which, if left to the operation of the economic laws of supply and demand, must eventually result in the lowering of the price of wheat to the point where it would be unprofitable for the farmer to produce it. Such a solution would mean starvation and misery for many millions of people in the world who are now in dire need of wheat.

Many Unknown Contingencies

While the use of Canadian wheat to feed the Russians depends largely upon the course the war will take within the next few months or maybe not so many other at present unknown factors over which this country may have little control may, in fact, be the deciding factor, it is at least possible that the value of a portion of the surplus wheat could not be disregarded. If and when time and circumstances make such disposition of some of this huge surplus a possibility and an economic possibility

The provision of wheat to the Russians, however, is hedged around by so many unknown contingencies, that little or no reliance can be placed upon this proposal as a partial solution of the problem at this date, and it would be the part of wisdom, for the present to concentrate on other methods of disposing of these excess wheat crops and increasing the domestic consumption of this surplus commodity. Both the Australian plan to provide for conversion of wheat into power alcohol and Dr. Newman's proposal fall within this category.

The economic feasibility of substituting power alcohol derived from wheat, in whole or in part, for gasoline in Canada with its apparently large reservoirs of petroleum not yet exhausted is highly doubtful until some cheaper method of converting wheat into alcohol has been found than those experiments conducted elsewhere have shown this to be. Experiments conducted elsewhere have shown this to be the case at the present time. The expansion of war, however, may make the demand of alcohol for power purposes from wheat so great that the price for wheat, the cost, or, shrinking supply of petroleum and cheapening of the process of converting wheat into power, or a combination of both, may open the door for the economic use of the latter. In any event, it is another possibility which should not be overlooked.

* * * *

An Economic Possibility

Dr. Newman's suggestion, however, is one which has the merit of economic possibility and, insofar as domestic consumption of bread is concerned is one in which the Canadian people have complete control. It is a bipartite solution to the problem of wheat congestion which should appeal to the neglected, but one which should be pushed in the least of its possibility.

Dr Newman intimated what has been voiced on at least a suspicion in this column, namely that the life-giving health elements in wheat. Bit is of greater value for human consumption when furnished in its natural form as found in the wheat germ, than when provided synthetically in the form of chemicals. Moreover, he pointed out, that the 150 international units per 100 pounds provided in some of the commercial flours used by industry is not sufficient. The average adult requires, he said, at least 400 international units per pound.

To objection to the incorporation of the readily assimilable B1 vitamin as found in the germ of the wheat has been removed by the comparatively recent discovery of a milling process which retains this highly valuable content without overheating it. Flour that will not lump, and is not pasty without additional cost.

If the people know that they were getting all the B1 they require in the natural state from in their bread, they would not have to seek it in other and more expensive foods or to purchase it in chemical form and this would result in increased consumption of bread, the staff of life.

Greater consumption of bread, impregnated with one of the most important necessities of life and health to be had from wheat would be of real importance both for the nation as a whole and, as Dr. Newman prompt ly points out, bread would again become the "staff of life," in its highest accepted meaning.

Editor Of London Publication Continued Active 58 Years Service

Winston Churchill is one of the busiest men in the world, and enjoys almost the heaviest burden of responsibility, but he took time off to attend a luncheon and make a speech in honour of the Society Dorr on the occasion of his fiftieth anniversary as editor of The News of the World. Unique Advertising Is Kept Up To Preserve Buying Habit

Col. Willard Chevalier of New York, publisher of Business Week, told the Toronto Advertising and Sales Club that unique advertising during the present emergency will have a disturbing effect on business. "Even if it does, a complete scheme of things becomes normal again.

Col Chevalier suggested manufacturers of every business operating under the present conditions should look beyond existing conditions, and that they should be prepared to retain to effect the period of re-establishment is some

Increase In Marriages

Canadian Town And Cities Show Big Increase In Marriages

In Canadian towns and cities of 10,000 population and over, the number of marriages in 1940 increased 15 per cent in 1940, in all Canada, 19 per cent. In the first third of 1941, the number of marriages were up 25 per cent compared with the same period two years ago. In 1940 the number of births in the towns and cities represented an increase of 12% per cent, in all Canada, less than 8 per cent. While the figures for the Dominion as a whole show therefore somewhat smaller than the reports from urban centres indicated might be, they are nevertheless significant enough. As a result of the higher marriage and birth rates, increases in the Canada's population (excess of births over deaths) rose from 139,017 in 1939 to 152,588 in 1940.—The Toronto Star.

Vitamin Bread

Hope To Establish A Standard Grade Of Flour For The Purpose

Hope for establishment of a per ormance standard grade of bread of flour and bread containing a minimum amount of vitamin B1 was expressed in an address prepared for delivery at Guelph (ont.) by Dr. H Newman Dominion cereal chemist.

He spoke at the annual convention of the Canadian Society of Technical Agriculturists.

In Newman suggested the vitamin should come from the wheat itself and not by artificial means. He said that increases in personal income that these offerings in flour or bread for sale would be enlighting with legal minimum requirements.

"We hope that if and when such a bad comes to be considered by the millers people it may be established and sponsored by our own department of health that our white bread will contain a minimum of the vitamin," the real staff of life be continued.

We feel that we increased consumption of the new type of bread when we feel sure will answer the inter during the next few years. We will soon reach to the health of our people and our milling industry in increasing the consumption of bread and therefore wheat

"Part of the material flours used by bakers at present showed vitamin B1 content of from 100 to 200 international units per pound Dr Newman said while the objective deserved a goal of 400 international units per pound.

SEED TIME and HARVEST
By
Dr. L. E. Hinds
Provincial Agricultural Representative
Stettler, Hanna and Drumheller Districts

WHEAT

In the future, prairie producers should not particularly object to a little rain during harvest. Due to the shortage in the acreage of fall and summer fallow in most parts of the province, there is a large acreage of stubble to be harvested for wheat purposes. It is estimated by wheat experts that a rainfall of one inch during harvest would increase the grade of the crop from one to two grades. Therefore, a rainfall of one inch would increase the value of the crop from four to six cents per bushel. This is the part our weather plays in the grading of the crop.

Due to the past and present crops, the farmer is not in a position to take a risk, and to that purpose can do the proper things to protect the crop. Such things as proper cutting, shocking, stooking, stacking, threshing, etc., are all important factors in the grading of the wheat and oat crops. Therefore, the farmer can do much to help the grade of his crop.

The Provincial Government has been co-operating with a very large number of farmers in the matter of binder twine. Many farmers have been able to secure a small quantity of twine through the Provincial Government. Others have been able to secure twine through the Dominion Government. Still others have been able to secure twine through the Co-operative Wheat Producers. Many farmers are handling this matter themselves.

Will the last man of our city, town and district please turn out the lights?

POLIOMYELITIS

As a result of the present outbreak of Poliomyelitis in different parts of the Province, the Provincial Board of Health wishes to bring the following information to the attention of all residents of the Province.

Poliomyelitis is transmitted by contact, the infectious agent being present in the discharges from the nose and throat and in some cases in the discharges from the intestinal tract as well.

The name "Infantile Paralysis" is a misnomer. A large number of cases of the disease are being reported which are abortive in type. Such cases recover in a few days without any paralysis of any kind. Many of these cases resemble ordinary Grippe and some have been diagnosed as Intestinal Influenza. These are most dangerous cases in so far as the spread of infection is concerned. It is therefore a matter of vital importance that all such mild abortive cases should be seen by a physician at the onset, and isolated at once.

Persons may harbor the cause of the infection in the nose and throat without themselves developing the disease. These "carriers" as they are termed, may be a real source of infection to others.

The most effective means of preventing the spread of Infantile Paralysis is to keep children entirely by themselves within their own yard. They are likely to be much safer there than if taken to some other point either within or without the province where one has no knowledge as to what local conditions with respect to the disease are now or may become.

Children giving evidence of any kind or any kind or any departure from normal health should be put to bed at once and medical advice promptly obtained. Keep all such cases in bed until the attending physician considers it safe for them to get up.

All patients suffering from the disease are required to be quarantined for a period of three weeks from the onset. The period of quarantine for contacts with cases is two weeks. The hand of the household may be permitted to live outside the premises quarantined providing his contact with the patient has not been intimate and his occupation does not bring him into contact with children, and providing, further, that he is not employed in the handling of foodstuffs.

The co-operation of all parents is earnestly sought, regarding their children from risk of infection. The Provincial Board is of the opinion that where cases or suspected cases of Poliomyelitis have developed, operations for the removal of tonsils and adenoids should be deferred until such time as the present outbreak has abated.

The Provincial Board of Health.
The Stettler Health District.

TO LOCAL BOARDS OF HEALTH

At a meeting of the Provincial Board of Health held on August 13, at which all members were present, it was decided to issue the following order:

"Whereas cases of Poliomyelitis are being reported from orderly districts in the province, and

"Whereas, under Regulation 72 under the Public Health Act, the Provincial Board, in order to reduce the spreading of any disease to no end, may issue order to publish the presence of any disease to spread, may issue orders requiring the closing of specified schools, buildings.

Now therefore, the Provincial Board hereby orders that any or every church, school, theatre, playhouse, dance hall, pool hall, public entertaining pool or wading pool, or public park, grounds or any other place of public assembly be closed to all children 17 years of age and under, until further notice be rescinded by further order of the board.

Upon the above notice being published in the newspapers of the district, it shall be the duty of the local boards of health to post notices in conspicuous places in the district, and it shall be the duty of the local boards of health to see that the orders are carried out.

Two copies of this order are being submitted to your Board of Health, one to come to you by mail.

Lacombe Loses D. MacMillan

Lacombe, Aug. 8.—Father of Hon. D. Evans MacMillan, minister of agriculture, Donald MacMillan, pioneer farmer of the Tees district where he had lived for 60 years, died in hospital here Friday morning.

Mr. MacMillan had been in failing health for some months.

Mr. MacMillan was in his 85th year, having been born of Scottish parents in Victoria County, Victoria, Jan. 28, 1856. He married Miss Annie Mackay of the same district July 13, 1878, coming west in 1890 for the Manitoba harvest. Mr. MacMillan pressed on to British Columbia where he remained for a time. In 1894 he moved his family from Ontario and settled on a farm 20 miles east of Lacombe, near the present site of Tees. That same year also he blazed the tourist road now known as Shaw Trail Rte. from Red D. to Sylvan Lake. During the years 1910 to 1916 he was employed by provincial government and blazed the trail from Red Deer to Rocky Mountain House.

In 1916, when two of his sons Ernest and Wallace were serving in the Great War, Mr. MacMillan moved into the village of Tees, where he grew up sheep and a half miles west of his farm, after the railway went through, and has since resided there. He was a member of the Old Timers Association and annual competitor in the old time fiddling contest which has been held each year since 1927, at Lacombe. in fact he was the oldest entrant in the contest. On Jan. 17 of this year, he played at a concert which was sponsored by the Soldiers Club to raise funds in aid of war work.

Taken ill March 26 he was taken to the University hospital Edmonton, returned to the Lacombe hospital June 7, where an operation was performed, amputating the left leg just below the thigh.

His wife pre-deceased him Jan. 28, 1935. He is survived by five sons and three daughters Mrs. Mabel Eadie, who has lived at home with her father; Malcolm A., of Vancouver Island; John B. of Red D.; Mrs. D. Brown, both of Edmonton; Wilfred Wallace of Tees Mrs. Maurice Jaclyn, Edmonton; George Douglas, Camrose; A. R. G. and Mrs. J. F. Ballard of Tees.

There are also four grandchildren and two great-grandsons.

Foster officiated at the services and Mr. J. Davies sang, "Home Day Well Understood" accompanied by Mrs. R. Hoffman at the piano. Pallbearers were: John Bullard, Sr., John Coulls, G. H. Maclaren, P. Another Hitlerian Ally

As the late summer and fall months approach, and especially if the temperature be dry, one may expect to read in the daily press and hear over the radio of devastating fires taking toll of valuable stands of timber in all parts of Canada, including the prairie provinces.

The annual loss of merchantable timber and young trees not yet ripe for harvesting from fires many of them caused by the carelessness of unthinking persons is a matter which should be of real concern to every resident of the country even to those who live in the upon grain-growing sections of the tree-barren prairies.

When a heavy toll of valuable trees is taken by flames, the loss accrues in far-reaching. It not only represents a loss to the company or the individual who owned the berth on which the timber stands, but it means depletion of a national asset which cannot be replaced over a long period of years.

Unnecessary loss of timber in serious wastage at any time but in a period of war when timber is urgently required for construction of vessels is a direct contribution to Canada's war effort and for the construction of buildings to house war factories and munition workers and others taking direct or indirect part in war work in this country, the gravity of such loss, even though not immediately appreciable, can scarcely be overestimated.

For this reason, every Canadian who takes all the necessary precautions to prevent the outbreak of fire in timber areas, is engaged in a patriotic undertaking whether he is aware of it or not. It is the duty the urgent duty of every Canadian whether he lives in the timbered country or is a visitor to timbered country for holiday or business reasons to see to it that anything he does, is not responsible for the outbreak of a conflagration which may be disastrous.

A Damaging Service

That forest fire outbreaks are beyond human organization to prevent and to cope with and subject to extinction only by a deluge of rain, is an erroneous idea which published reports of recent forest conflagrations did nothing to dispel according to the Canadian Forestry Association an organization which has done much and hopes to do more to protect this most valuable national asset from unwarranted wastage

The Association has recently stated that out of more than ten thousand forest fires started annually by public carelessness, a very large majority also detected immediately by the forest protection services, government and private, and in some instances with protection crews on the spot. Only a few, it points out, little or no publicity is given to these thousands of conquests by the fire ranger forces. Only when a major disaster or a period of dry weather gets under way with the forest floor a mass of tinder, does the power of organized protective systems seem temporarily baffled and certainly in need of the ally of rain.

"The fire ranging systems of Canada," says the Forestry Association, "have usually not enjoyed any special attention and support, but during the time many areas are short-handed, owing to enlistments, and the job of protecting Canada's forests against devastation therefore rests upon the people who travel or work in wooded districts.

"Last year more than twenty-two hundred wholly unnecessary fires were started in Canadian forests by campers and smokers which," adds the Forestry Association, "is about as damaging a service to Canada as enemy parachutists might hope to bring about."

* * *

A Call To Arms

These statements should afford food for thought for every Canadian who is interested in the conservation of one of the greatest forms of wealth with which a beneficent Nature has endowed this country, and for every resident of a country which is pledged to an all-out war effort.

It would appear to be almost a work of supererogation to enumerate the specific precautions which should be taken by campers and others and workers in timbered districts to prevent loss by fire as a result of their activities. They have been published and given wide publicity with suggestive help and treatment by the Dominion Forestry Association, provincial departments into whose ears the asset has been committed and by others. They are posted in prominent locations wherever timber areas are visited by the thousands.

The sad part of it is that, despite the knowledge so widely disseminated, despite the repetitions and admonitions of forest rangers stationed by the danger spots, there should be so many unnecessary fires and so much unrecompensed loss as indicated by the figures.

As the Forestry Association points out the duty of exercising the utmost care is imposed more heavily upon the present public to-day than ever before in view of the depletion of the man-power of the protective services by the country's call to arms. To-day, the call to arms is pressed unnecessarily conservation to forest wealth, is urgently needed in the war effort, should ring with clarity and insistence to all care. Let all those who are called by duty or pleasure to traverse the timbered areas of the country, remember that their carelessness may make them an unwitting ally of Hitler and the Nazi will to conquer.

New Air Propeller

Type Of Adhesive Designed To Improve Efficiency Of Aircraft

A contingency a new type of air screw designed to improve the efficiency of aircraft may be fitted to Royal Air Force planes if it survives rigid tests in workshops and in the air.

The contingency or eventual air propeller, totally rotating screws with controllable pitch blades resembles two aircrews arranged tone together and mounted on the shaft to rotate one ning inside the other and turning in opposite directions. Bench tests were started in 1939 and flight tests in 1940 but they have not been completed.

Capt A G Forsyth and C J Smith-Barker British engineers who developed the new dough claim it is the first controllable aircrew in the world and that advantages are obtained by using it with modern highspeed engines.

By reducing the overall diameter of the aircrew the developers said underarrange design problem are less troublesome especially with tricycle undercarriages the pull of the aircrew is true to the aircraft doesn t attempt to swing while taking off and there is an improvement of the aircraft s power of maneuver at low speeds.

A special arrangement details of which are kept secret enables one of the blades to be feathered in the working if the other is put out of action and in effect new original reliability is obtained. Cannon can be arranged to fire through the centre of the contraption

The Army Catering Corps is the newest formation in the army. so now it hasn t decided yet whether the cap badge it will wear a pot or a kettle First hint of its formation was given when the commission of three officers to the new corps was published in the London Gazette

The A.C.C. will be responsible to ensure that the feeding of the troops is up to the highest standard as their equipment and training It takes over as ulf independent body of experts. The cooks will be drawn mainly one of the army's maid-of-all-work jobs at present.

The three first A.C.C officers were all from the Royal Artillery but that doesn't mean the gunners have all the ways he like cannon-balls in future As far as is possible it is intended to get recruits direct from civilian catering sources

The cooks will receive commissions as second lieutenants Serving soldiers who have passed qualifying tions will be transferred from fighting units and promotions from the ranks will be recommended for suitable men. The strength will be completed by the transfer of qualified army cooks

Sir Isadore Salmon, the army's catering adviser, is to be colonel of the corps "I was glad when the army decided to have a corps of cooks and put it to try to raise the standard of cooking in the army." If it does, Sir Isadore thinks won t need if the cook has brever rank as cook-general.

Bravery Of Two Little Girls Who Spent Eight Days In An Open Boat

Bravery at two little Belgian girls was rewarded the medal award of the survivors of the Belgian freighter Meester as they drifted on the Atlantic for eight days in an open boat.

Nine-year-old Yvonne Chantelle and Jeannette Blaisgens, aged seven and 11, came through the experience without a murmur "couldn t wait to cover member went delirious and several others were in a state of near collapse.

The girls, daughters of A Blaisgens, a Belgian diamond merchant who with his wife and a son was on the ship, were taken to Canada a group of survivors picked up by a freighter Their ship was sunk on June 3.

"I don t think children could be so brave," the seaman said.

"We were 420 miles south from land of water The food and water was rationed from the start. Each passenger receiving one biscuit and a little water each day. The boat bailed so that we had plenty although it was sometimes a job.

"For two days, hundreds of sharks kept close to our boat. We scared them away with boat hooks but they were always there.

"It was very cold, and water in the boat kept us wet. We made it pretty miserable to eat.

"After eight days and four hours, a ship with a big Canadian ensign sent up to attract her attention. She took us aboard, but conditions were almost as bad as on the lifeboat, with no sleeping quarters and little food."

Later, the two little girls were taken to a canteen and family were brought to Canadian aboard a naval craft.

Industrial Alcohol

Might Use Surplus Wheat To Save Consumption

Fresh interest is reported in official circles in the project of manufacturing industrial alcohol from wheat or sugar beets in Canada as a wartime plan to enlarge the farm market and to cut down the foreign exchange drain involved in importing large amounts of gasoline fuel

An experienced British technician is reported to be in consultation with government officials regarding prospects of a new Canadian power alcohol industry and the latest reports indicate that the idea is feasible However if the Canadian chamber of commerce recently reported that production of power alcohol would have to be subsidized by the government The report said that 15 per cent mix of wheat alcohol in the annual Canadian consumption of gasoline gallons (1,500,000,000) would require 5 bushels to manufacture and 50 million bushels

The new line of inquiry is directed to use of by-products at country and terminal elevators and grades of wheat One report not immediately confirmed a that a pilot plant could be built at a location to be selected in the west the funds being provided as a war project

Government officials agree with the national study committee's warning that extravagant claims have been made for power alcohol from farm products but the feeling persists that a great deal more research should be done immediately both to ease the surplus wheat problem and to conserve United States dollars

Churchill Says Nobody Would Take Foods Sent To Europe

Mr Hoover's project for feeding the Belgians and portions that, he claims will guard against the blocking of the food by the Nazis gets a new blow from an unexpected quarter Lord Moon, the American chemist who was in Belgium during the first six months of its occupation, says in his just-published book not only that no such plan could be exercised but that from what he was told by scores of Belgians in all walks of life s major part of the food sent to Belgium from America would be looted and distributed under the watchful eye of Mr Hoover himself was distributed by the German army of occupation

As for Mr Hoover's present scheme, Lord Moon writes "I have never talked with a Belgian who believed seriously that the occupied areas could be fed without a great deal, and perhaps the bulk, being brought from new resources." Nor does Mr Moon think that the proposal of American relief workers in Belgium which is an essential part of the plan, would be permitted. "From the German point of view," he says, "they would be bringing mischief with them."—Winnipeg Free Press.

French-Canadian Show British Theme Camels Their Weapon Think

Helping home guards with defense problems is a specialty of the Royal Canadian French-Canadian regiment gave 500 members of Britain's huge training army a demonstration on use of platoon weapons. Bring small arms, mortars and hand-throwing grenades for several hours.

The home guards had a chance to test their own skill with live ammunition and explosives and blood curdling yells, calculated by the Canucks.

Under a new company commander, Lt.-Col. Cloutier, Cap. Chevrette of Montreal, the French-Canadians were on a three-day training manoeuvre when they halted for a night in a valley to show the home guards their weapons in action.

During the three days away from their regular camp, the company operated on a self-contained basis, providing its own defences wherever it stopped as well as its own rations. One of the stops was Windsor castle.

CHAPTER XV

When the real world came back and Donna could open her eyes again she looked straight into Marcus' quiet smile.

"That's better," he said, and one arm under her head, raised her up a little, pressed a brandy glass into her hand. "Now drink this."

Obediently she swallowed the searing drink, felt the blood surge into her face, felt strength returning to her trembling legs.

"Thanks," she gasped. "I—must have—fainted."

He smiled, nodded. "You must be very hungry. He drew her to her feet, pulled her arm through his. "Come, you must eat something. For the color back in those pretty white cheeks."

The big dining room was still virtually deserted. Minutes ordered quickly, sat watching her, sipping a glass of red wine thoughtfully, as she devoured the thick steak, hot vegetables, the cool-warming, sweet food a waiter set before her. Caruso even of what he might be thinking, she was only grateful for the dessert meal she'd had to days.

"Thanks so much," she said when she'd finished. "I—told you I was—hungry."

He nodded. "Can say you speak three languages?"

Some lingering premonition of danger warned her from the outskirts of the truth, but she turned it aside, determinedly. "Two Spanish, French and a little German."

"Good," he said. "Then you will be able to translate for me."

"I—beg—a little. Not very well."

"Ting!" He pounced on the word. "Let me hear you. Come this way." Behind him, he led the way down a hall to the orchestra platform where a slim, fair-haired man was sitting at a piano, thumbing through sheet music.

"Manuel," Marcus called to him. "This is Miss Donna Devona. Miss, this is Manuel Sandoval."

The man looked up, smiled, rose to his feet, bowed over her hand. "I am very pleased to meet you, Miss Devona. I hope you will sing for us."

"Donna," Marcus corrected him. "Miss Donna Devona. Manuel is a composer, but Donna sings only for her friends. Isn't that so, Donna?"

"Different from what we usually sing!" Marcus thought about 'but not bad at that. Now try something with more—swing Hatter — you know."

Manuel began again. A lovely song this time. One she'd never seen before. Stumbling she did her best to follow.

"Swing it sister Like this." Manuel sprang from the piano, his rhythm

"Oh the chorus again please," she begged. "I think I can do it better this time."

It was better She baited it, but Marcus smiled, nodded. "Manuel could teach that stuff all day. I'm afraid he helped her down off the platform.

"I think I can use you all right," Marcus went on when they were back in the table where they had dined. "Manuel, he said, build it boldly a moment. "Would you like to work for me?"

"Why—I'm sure I'm—inviting you."

"Good! We accomplish his wrist-watch. "I think I have time to help you select your costumes right now. Come."

Rising he slipped a hand under her elbow, steered her toward the door. "Manuel is very pretty dude to dress up in when you sing for my guests. Tonight something—Spanish. You're going to be a very beautiful young lady when I get through."

"Oh, no!" Even Donna knew she had to admit that to herself on how much she cared about the man's opinion of her appearance. Pretty or something out of a Goya painting? Or—a—walked skirt of red rose petals over layers and layers of petticoats, a wispy bodice that declared the curves of her pretty bust and shoulders, a red rose tucked in her hair, they red slippers to replace her embroidered shoes.

"Perfect!" the dressmaker stepped back to enjoy her own handiwork. "The prettiest costume you ever had, Senor Hatter. And, I guess—" the wrinkled little creature smiled coyly. "The prettiest girl to wear it."

Donna winced at that but how many girls before her had accepted Marcus' generosity trustingly? And just what was she getting into?

"Very nice," Marcus approved, but his eyes were on Donna's face, not the costume.

Finishing, she pretended not to notice. "It is a lovely costume," she murmured, grounded again to escape the searching scrutiny of his dark eyes.

"O.K. And Miss Rasbourne will need a couple of changes, so let's see what else you have." Marcus ordered briefly.

In all, he bought her three costumes that day, a blue velvet, a lovely white lace, a daring black net —all Spanish in style all provoking in effect.

The costumes would help her get her new personality of Donna Devona realized as she paraded poochi fashion up and down before the critical eyes of Marcus and Manuel during match up?

"You will you're—inventing too much in me Mr Marcus," she protested, conscience-stricken. After all, I've had no experience. Maybe your patrons will think——"

"And see—I'll take you back to your hotel. That will give you time to change your dress."

"Thanks," she glanced at him. "Change?"

"You're having dinner with me, of course. We have so much to talk over."

The big car was rolling to a stop in front of the modest Brownstone that Donna remembered from across the Atlantic. With the tassels of their red fezzes swinging rhythmically together, they stood on impregnable refrain of ancient Egypt while the mysteries of the most modern machinery of the West-ern world.

Food Parcels

Parcels For Australian Prisoners Of War To Be Shipped From Canada

The Canadian Red Cross Society at the direct request of the Australian High Commissioner, is making to pack and ship five thousand parcels per week for food parcels each week for Australian prisoners of war in the enemy in the East. Dr Fred W Routley Director of Communications announced This undertaking has been turned over to Canada because of the difficulties that have arisen in the Pacific area. The Australian society will pay the costs.

The Australian parcels will be packed in Montreal where a building and equipment will be in operation by mid-summer three weeks. Dr Routley said. The Canadian Red Cross will then ship the five thousand parcels each week to Lisbon along with the British parcels. The Canadian Red Cross Society sends weekly in British parcels to Germany.

The five thousand food parcels are an indication of the number of Australians held prisoners in Germany, Dr Routley said. The Australian Red Cross, through their Commissioner in Canada, Alfred G. Brown, has set the figure until the exact number of their prisoners is established.

The Price Of Wheat

With the cost of manufactured goods and most commodities rising steadily the price of wheat is at a ridiculously low figure. In the base of 70 cents a bushel for One Northern at the terminal, the average price to farmers at local shipping points in Alberta, after averaging grades, will be around 56 cents a bushel. Even with a big crop such a price is profitless. Alberta's wheat crop this year is less than half of last year's outturn, which makes the price situation even more acute. The Wheat Pool of Western Canada are endeavoring to induce the federal government to increase the price of wheat to $1 a bushel. In the United States, wheat farmers are obtaining approximately $1.16 a bushel through a guaranteed minimum price and export bonuses. That figure is considered on a parity with other prices. In Western Canada, farmers have higher costs than in the United States and $1.35 a bushel could be considered as a parity price. The figure of $1 a bushel is not at all unreasonable.

Beyond a doubt, the safest place to store grain is in a licensed country or terminal elevator. However it is not infallible. Unquestionable construction will, of necessity, be stored on the farm.

If sound weather-proof farm storage is inadequate, temporary or unstable inexpensive structures will be necessary.

Mr. Thomas Anderson, assistant "Storing Grain on the Farm," has been issued by the Manitoba Department of Agriculture and Immigration. Whatever several types of temporary and permanent structures are described and illustrated, together with details on construction There are few if any, farmers to whom this bulletin will not be of use Merits him, more than any other person who aims are not costly and, if properly constructed, will keep grain in good condition. They must, of course, be covered with hay, straw or canvas.

Circular No. 94, distributed by the Agricultural Extension Service, Department of Agriculture, Edmonton, contains many practical and useful suggestions, particularly regarding coverings for temporary bins and protection against dampness to grain at the bottoms caused by soil moisture.

It is unwise to leave grain on the field in unprotected piles. It can be protected at very small cost by methods described in the two above-mentioned publications.

For special problems, information can be obtained from Department of Agricultural Engineering at the Universities of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba (Edmonton, Saskatoon and Winnipeg, respectively).

ADDRESS SOLDIERS' MAIL IN ISH.

Postmaster General Wm. F. Maclean has always shown a keen personal interest in providing a safe and expeditious service for mail to our soldiers in the trenches. One frequent cause of delay a direct result of carelessness in illegible addresses on mail matter.

It has frequently been found that parcel written addresses become smudged and unreadable during course of transmission, with the result that it is very difficult for the Canadian Postal Corps to effect delivery. When ISH. is known there is less danger of the address fading or becoming obliterated, and persons sending letters and parcels to soldiers overseas can help enormously their own speedy delivery by always having care taken to see that the addressee is written in a clear and legible manner in ISH.

All mail matter must be fully prepaid and a return address given in the upper left-hand corner. Letters, parcels and newspaper for our troops overseas should be addressed in ink as follows:

Regimental No., Rank and Name.
Name and Detail of Unit (i.e. Company, Section, Squadron, Battery, Mudding Unit, etc.)
Name of Battalion, Brigade of Service, Canadian Army Overseas.

If the soldier is still in Canada, mail should be addressed to him giving these:

Regimental Number, Rank and Name. Name of Details of Unit (as above). Name of Regiment or Branch of Service. Name of the Place in Canada where the Unit is stationed.

Visual War Education

The value of works public demonstration and display of Canada's war effort in all its vast ramifications as a stimulus to further effort is only just beginning to be appreciated by the authorities in charge of the greatest single objective in our national history. It is a form of propaganda, which is needed to bring home to many people of the country the fact that while much is being done in the fight to preserve liberty much more can be done if only every man and woman can be brought to realize it and the necessity of it.

The most propaganda is used in its best and proper sense not with the idea of all-engaging to fool the people into believing something that is not so but with the intention of uncovering the facts presenting them in the most exact ascertainable form and in such a manner that the people themselves may readily appreciate the implications the facts may convey and draw their own conclusions therefrom. That is the only enduring and effective form of propaganda. That is the sane form of propaganda which will not disturb its own ends. It is unnecessary work.

Researching has already been done in this direction and what has been done is commendable but the fact remains that the immediate citizens of the country who are not yet fully conscious of the imperative nature of the demands for the greatest effort that there are still some who refuse to concede the necessity for great sacrifices but are not willing to put into practice what they preach, indicates the necessity of more elementary work along the lines indicated.

* * * *

Valuable Demonstration

The interest evinced by the present public in army life as shown by the larger number of people who flocked to the military camps during the past week-end, and the great publicity given to public inspections of the Army Day press on making of the value of this form of demonstration. It is manifestly to insure that from time to time similar occasions with be arranged by military authorities on the authority of the Department of National Defence.

Major-General B W Browne, D.S.O. M.C. Adjutant General who originated Army Day is quoted as saying "This first chance for the public to see army personnel on and off parade, to see the complicated war machine, and to commence to realize the tremendous sacrifices and the responsibilities of citizenship in a democracy and have freely volunteered to defend that democracy, has developed a keen interest which has been upon others and certainly Canada must rely if freedom is to prevail."

Major-General Browne would not have gone astray if he had added that the visible demonstration of army life and all that it implies must have had some effect in encouraging those young and able-bodied men who are in a position to offer their services and have not yet done so to face to their responsibilities and to realize more fully, with the example before them that they, too, have a duty to a country which has suffered these so many privileges.

* * * *

In Another Field

That the value of visible display as a stimulus to the war effort in taking shape in the effects mind was evidenced in another direction when the Commissioner of Patents and the Department of Munitions and Supply would stage an exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto, August 31 to September 5, in an effort to give visible form to the new conception of the gigantic scope of the Dominion's industrial war effort."

At the exhibit, it is stated, will be seen made-in-Canada heavy industry and cruiser tanks, land guns, anti-aircraft guns heavy machine guns, rifles, aeroplights, naval craft, Universal carriers, motor trucks, navy, bombers shells, munitions, ammunition, fuses and a host of other things which civilians rarely see Better still, action is to be brought into the picture, as Canadian men and women will be seen actually at work on machines which turn out these guns. Less indeed rifles, highly intricate fire control instruments and other essentials of modern warfare. Where demonstrations are impossible, large photographic enlargements will tell the story of the "battle of the factories."

When one remembers that the Canadian war effort is the greatest activity which is dominating or should dominate the public consciousness one can readily be convinced that this display will greatly entirely at others in popularity at the National Exhibition, that it will prove a real eye opener and drawing card at the fair and that it will have a deep impress on the minds of all who see it, an impress which should bear fruit in a greater zeal activity in all lines.

Unfortunately, the number of Western Canadians who will have the opportunity of seeing and, benefitting from this great display of what the nation is doing to preserve its great heritage of liberty will be very limited. If this exhibit is to achieve the maximum results of which it is capable it should be made a travelling display, so that it may be seen by as many as possible. It should convey only be learned by westerners in the next graphic form—through the by.

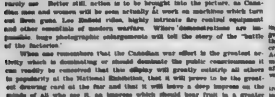
Let us have more similar demonstration of the Canadian war effort and let every citizen from the Atlantic to the Pacific have an opportunity of seeing it.

No Match For Beirut

Germany's Blue-Eyed Pilots Do Not See So Well At Night

Germany will lose the war because her people in the main, have blue eyes, according to Dr. Harold R. Simonsons, president of the New Jersey Optometric Association

His explanation is this: "It is a scientific fact that the more pigment in the eye the better the sight at night. Blue Hitler's opponents can match plane for plane and the various other weapons that now are used under the cover of darkness. The human element behind them, the unconquerable longing will become the deciding factor, and Hitler's inferior and highly pigmented will be no match for the sharp-shooting fist and other men deeply pigmented people."



All Have A Value

British Post Office Receiving Stamps Of Every Country In The World

The British Post Office is getting required hundreds of stamps made specially according to Dr. Harold R. Immerman, president of the New Jersey Optometric Association

His explanation is this: "It is a scientific fact that the more pigment in the eye the better the sight at night. Dean Hillier's opponents can match plane for plane and the various other weapons that now are used under the cover of darkness. The human element behind them, the unconquerable longing will become the deciding factor, and Hitler's inferior and highly pigmented will be no match for the sharp-shooting fist and other men deeply pigmented people."

The Canadian Was Lucky

English Girl Gave Him Enough Coupons For Dressing Gown

"One doesn't always expect returns for what one gives."

In that simple homely sentence a Brantham English girl standing on a busy street corner at Ashley epitomized the British people's philosophy of wartime sacrifices and their boundless generosity to Canadian overseas.

For now months as war correspondent with the Canadian forces I've pounded over an expression of a pleasure equivalent to neglect. This girl actually only to be told in it ten words the fine basic principle behind the entire business in a Southern England town.

I had tried to buy a pair of running shoes but couldn't get them without coupons. I knew I had to buy a clothing ration book. Under the new clothing ration purchase of a pair of shoes requires the surrender of many more coupons.

I left the shop and a block away a the girl caught up with me, out of breath with her run from the store. I thought she was shopping and was overcome the shopkeeper refuse me shoes.

"I don't let that worry you at all," she replied, and added almost apologetically, "I have a dressing gown I never wear. I thought you might expect a return for what one gives.

Then as I thanked her she offer more pleasantly she said. "I have an aunt in Canada you know in Toronto."

Then she turned and left me. I overhauled the shoe merchant the coupons and I got the shoes. Her name Miss Muriel Bennett. Her aunt is Miss Florence Bennett a friend of Miss Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London, and Mrs. Massey. Miss Bennett the offer more pleasantly she said. "I have an aunt in Canada you know in Toronto."

Then she turned and left me. I overhauled the shoe merchant the coupons and I got the shoes. Her name Miss Muriel Bennett. Her aunt is Miss Florence Bennett a friend of Miss Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London, and Mrs. Massey.

The Mosquito Pest

Suggested Ways Of Dealing With This Torture And Anoyance

Mosquitoes are the tormentors of the insect world with nightly opportunities of torture. They cause much suffering in summer and some species are highly dangerous because they transmit malaria, dengue and yellow fever. The bite makes water to stand in red patches, called papule, and the spotted fungi in stagnant pools. The female lays its eggs in it. It requires 14 days sunlight which I do not believe. Therefore the whole of the pool must be kept moving from the men they would as leaders.

Egypt is endeavoring to check that. If it fails it will do so because of the immense effort it was not severe enough or rise the mind of the world will relax and not be prepared to face the obligations I am forced to face the fulfillment of my perpetual duty. I am not afraid, but I know what I am saying when I say this.

Prophecy Was Correct

Chamberlain Said Agreement Would Unite Trouble Under A New Leader

The Germans and Czechoslovaks cannot be trusted They are always the same and always will be. They will always have someone at their throats while will send them acting. Then they turn on that in their turn. Seventeen ago it was the Kaiser, ten years from now it will be somebody else. None of is a race like any other. That is the whole tragedy. Let us not blame the Germans and the whole of them. Let us make increasing them from the men they would as leaders.

I am forced to fulfillment of my perpetual duty. I am not afraid, but I know what I am saying when I say this.

The spokesman added that the British authorities presumed that purchase of any material in a Nazi controlled area would help the Nazis economically.

British Peace

Trade Has Increased Since The Advent Of The Radio

A few years ago at the height of the aversion and hysterical entertainment boom double were expressed by some serious mentally that the radio would be a powerful realtime to be any inventive or desire among the younger generation to learn to play a musical instrument unless they were adopting it as a profession.

Such fears were but shared by the piano trade which had apparently attained a steady output though in Britain, like so many other industries it has had to face severe competition in overseas markets from Germany

Actually trade in musical instruments has increased since the war, since the advent of radio, and some British piano firms are now selling more instruments in the 12 months than they were before the war London Times.

Their Favorite Music

Australian And German Composers Are Favorites In Britain

Newsweek says the London Philharmonic orchestra recently compiled, at request of Britain's government, a listing one-night stands in motion pictures and vaudeville houses, and in the British music market. The list of 100 most frequently played in popular London music halls. The orchestra has found that the two favorite composers are the Germans, Beethoven and Brahms, and the third is the Austrian, Strauss.

Prefabricated Houses

Seven-Room Dwellings Can Be Built In Nine Hours

A seven-room dwelling built in nine hours and costing about $1,500 may be the first link in a country-wide chain of prefabricated houses designed to meet Canada's wartime shortage of living accommodation for industrial workers officials of the Dominion housing administration said.

Based on studies conducted by Housing Administrator F W Shields and engineers, the first dwelling was constructed at a lumber plant at Ottawa. It is made of standard building materials all procurable on the Canadian market, and can be dismantled. The kind is plumbing and lighting facilities go with the house.

The model house is a one-storey dwelling and has two bedrooms, dining room, living room, kitchen, bathroom and furnace room, making 600 square feet of floor space. Floor, ceiling and roof are fitted in 12 separate sections each and the walls in 24 parts.

A Charming Gift

With the gift the fund received 200. the record of 11 children, popping 16 years for the privilege of contributing their names on it.

British Airmen's Hard Luck

Broke His Leg In Simple Accident After Thrilling Escape

Flying over Germany a British airman escaped death when his machine was wrecked by shellfire but he managed to stagger it home to England. It started to come apart, and he baled out to the earth and floated to safety. Then he started to walk to the hospital—stepped over a cowpat hoop, and broke his leg.

That's How His Feet

A plane but very trouble old lady, who lived by herself, was put out when her neighbors complained a big parade and failed to invite her. On the morning of the parade the old lady's mother relented and asked the old lady to join them.

"It's too late," she snapped. "You already prayed for rain."

DAUGHTER OF DESTINY
—BY—
Eleanor Atterbury Calkins

CHAPTER XVI

Jane Marlow, waiting for Devens to the lobby smiled ecstatic approval "You are looking lovely tonight," he murmured his hand on her elbow

But it was "Devens" already she noticed. The "Miss Rochester" of the afternoon, replaced already "Thank you," she said, and smiled.

The El Mocinos lobby was crowded as the Hermestone's had been deserted Marcia, as he took her wrap, saw that all the people were Americans. Not a uniform in sight. Not a face that she knew by sight or name. Not a face that she knew by sight or name. Not a face that she knew by sight or name. Not a face that she knew by sight or name.

"Thank you," flashing in spite of herself "You are very kind."

"He," he raised an eyebrow at her as he led her toward a small table against two windows. Devens wouldn't mind," he said, but very lucky."

Devens wouldn't be bored Jane decided. Instead, she slipped into the chair Marcia held for her glanced quickly around the room. If Dale should see her now——

The room was not Dale, but hundreds of beautifully dressed women and their good-looking escorts. Every in evening dress, and in the background servants sports clothes. Some in business gray. All of them obviously ure-seeking. All just as obviously accustomed to paying well for their entertainment. Not a hot-spot Dale had called this. An expensive one, anyway. But a strange collection of people at that—a man who looked as if he might be an underworld baron. Gleaming with a pearl pendant. Could be a baby star.

The Marcia ordered was excellent. And, Devens smiled at her spell, she'd learned to appreciate good food. Jane, sipping a wine over the coffee and creme de menthe, she tried to believe that Dale was merely the suspicious of her smiling host. The conversation had been casual, almost impersonal.

Marcia smiled at her and asked "you—like it here?"

"Of course. It's fascinating." It was, too. Interesting-looking people, gay, luxurious, exotic. Jane caught a sort of well-behaved carnival spirit pervading it all. Who wouldn't find it fascinating?

An unwanted memory turned to suddenly impatient, and to please for a sweet kid like you." Dale had said once. Jane did be know, she thought bitterly. And little had she known then what would be in store for her. Or that she would be glad to like how—no longer a child, no longer to like anything except to get out of it.

"Good. I'm glad you like it. And as you think you will like staying the longer my business is finished." Marcia went on, nothing toward the three-piece orchestra that had appeared from table to table, pleasantly and stirring Spanish music from their collection of instruments. "Yes—I'll—love it!" she fibbed extravagantly.

"Good." He reached for her hand, pressed it gently.

"Perhaps we'll depose into impersonality, she let then lie cool and limp in his warm hand for a few seconds. Then, as if unaware that she did it, withdrew them, pretended to refasten a loosened curl.

"And now—would you like to sing for us?"

"How?" Stage fright struck her Oh I——

"The first song you sang for me this morning he smiled I think my patience will take it."

He announced her then and there was a sputtering of applause and a little murmur trailed her up to the platform She must do her best pieces for Marcia he hadn't been idle taken on giving her the job. He should be she was overlooking privately Sugarly she started the number now

Standing there alone and terribly frightened in the glaring sunshine of the white spotlight she could see Marcia's face, pale, the faltering unsure of the notes lost in the huge echoing room. Suddenly she was a stranger. Nervousness gone and her hands made her mouth dry. She could not sing. Not a note.

She sang two numbers. And that was all. Then her eyes that had looked squarely at her and pretended to speak of love Love! You only ask for that once that I know—for awful. She gasped weak trembling all her fear

He was. You were frightened that's all. You will get over that Good to see you, Jane," he said in Spanish soup; they will like you all right. You'll see.

Jane realized that alarm of an investigation Devens smiled You are very kind."

But of course Come I'll prove it Rising he led the way to that little platform and the piano and the metal lights and the people

The El Mocinos lobby was crowded as the Hermestone's had been deserted Marcia, as he took her wrap, saw that all the people were Americans. Not a uniform in sight. Not a face that she knew by sight or name. Not a face that she knew by sight or name. Not a face that she knew by sight or name.

A contract!" Devens echoed you said. But that won't be necessary with it. It means I'm so grateful for the opportunity.

Marcia unwavered the cap to his fountain pen. "Devens Devens Raeburne is too long! He thought Raeburn! We'll call you Carlotta."

Devens shrugged "I see how job. Perhaps even a new hair What difference did it make? It was all for Dale. And Devens Raeburne No one would ever hunt for Dana Carlotta!

"Yes, I'll sign," Jane said, she realized that her hours on the job were few. Dale would be coming over the bute which have clothing bedding and provisions. Devens would be waiting places for the honeymoon, and this complicated organization in sight of the Mexican border's favorite coast of defence

Inventor Anxiously Waited Across Bridge Since In Rubber Suit

The Short Rubber Suit For Walking Across a Body of Water lived up to it name in a test on the Detroit river had the inventor of the suit Arthur Scott, was pulled box miles downstream by the current before he made the crossing of less than a mile.

The crossing, from the foot of Mercuotte Drive to the bulkheaus on Belle Isle was made by Scott in two hours and five minutes

Besides the current Scott, who has learned for 27 years on his invention, encountered a sea of weeds in what he normal course, and the river of the Middleground, and for a brief distance was walking on the sandy bottom.

Literally Scott was not walking on top of the water but in the specially constructed rubber suit which he designed, he walked through the water submerged except for his head and arms.

The suit weighs 35 pounds and looks much like a diver's suit except for the amazing helmet. Inside the helmet are two tanks with 12 sealed containers These hold nothing more dangerous than air and provide the buoyancy which keeps Scott afloat.

At the bottom of each boot he has a small propeller driven by a spring motor. Each propelling ample power so that he can't tip over Steering is done by a rudder which, he says, can be seen for several miles.

Communication is provided by the contraptions fastened to each leg which carry telephone receivers inside the ears of a boat. In addition he uses his hands, which are encased in rubber gloves.

After the tedious crossing Scott, his wife, Mrs. Mildred Scott and friends at the Washington Hotel said that he was not fatigued by the experience. He said he encountered less in boats he had failed to provide him with a safety factor.

"The suit proved everything I used it would," he said. Most pleasingly of all a drop of water came in and I was just as comfortable as if I were walking."

As inventor decorator now, Scott has other ambitions than to walk. He is not something that could be worn to walk on water when he uses a car. He has designed a rubber suit for use of the crew bidded him because he couldn't swim.

This is the third suit he has made One he was wearing for a motion picture when it was destroyed by fire at Hollywood a year ago. The other is now in the possession of Scott and will be tried out on less hazardous waters.

RELIGION

What a man does, not what he says, affects his fellow men. Actions are the only sermons that all can understand.—Confucius.

By civil to all, sociable to many, familiar with few; friend to one; enemy to none.—Benjamin Franklin.

Never return evil for evil, and above all, do not fancy that you have been wronged when you have not been.—Mary Baker Eddy

Let us be true this in the highest sense of the word, that is, in the sense of sincerity and virtue, and of all moral authority.—Anne's Journal.

What is the greatest thing in the world? Surely it is that which makes a man humble, and what is honorable is being Christ.

Wicked Men Look

Queen Mary Goes Abroad A Lot Without Her Husband

When Queen Mary saw a young aircraftsman trudging along a country road, she stopped her car, turned it round and offered him a lift. Inviting him to sit beside her, she and the young man had their own private talk in time for Sunday dinner When they arrived 15 minutes later Major Hardyman, one of the car and noticed, and still acknowledged, the aircraftsman was invited to lunch with the Queen. Then he and the young man had their own private talk. "He did not recognize me," Queen Mary chuckled to me afterwards, "and I did not tell him who I was. I thought it would be more fun if he found out for himself."

Queen Mary is a great traveler. She goes to Sandringham, Norfolk, for the shooting season, to Balmoral, Scotland, for the autumn, and to Badminton, Gloucestershire, for the hunting season. She is a keen fisherwoman, and has been known to spend a whole day on the river bank. She is also a keen gardener, and has been known to spend a whole day on the river bank.

Sec. Treas. Village Council.

At the year's judge for the village streets and gardens I should like to congratulate the town as a whole on the very fine showing made this season in spite of the many unfavorable conditions. I am sure that detailed inspection of the various allotments surrounding us would be a revelation to many, as I confess they were to me, and I am confident that the offering of your annual award contribution spoke a little to the creditable appearance of the village.

After a lot of thought I submit the following:

Best kept street, Riddell street.
Best garden ... Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Jennings, with that of Mr. and Mrs. H.E. Mann receiving special mention.

Yours sincerely,
Mary Cammack

Down To Forty

Coupled with the plan for reduced consumption of gasoline for pleasure purposes, the recently imposed gasoline use restrictions are bound to have a beneficial effect in more directions than one. For various reasons which are readily demonstrable the restrictions bound be complied with and the accompanying request to cut down on pleasure driving will be complied with general approval and observed at least to the minimum 50 per cent. requirement.

While the exigencies of an all-out war effort afford ample reason for and, in fact is the sole reason given for the restrictions and clipped of the entitlement of the use of the automobile for purely recreational purposes the federal government conservation of gasoline will not only have the effect of preventing more ammunition for beating Hitler and his Nazi hordes but it should make more contribution to a reduction in the mounting toll of accidents on the highways of the country.

Figures just published reveal an appalling toll of death, injuries and property damage in highway accidents on the United States and Canada during 1940 and in both countries the situation was worse last year than in 1939, with indications that, in the United States at least, the toll of life, limb and property, attributable to traffic accidents in the present year, will be even greater than in 1940.

* * * *

An Accelerating Toll

Last year the Automotive Safety Foundation reported 34,600 traffic fatalities in the U.S.A. in 1940, an increase of 1,600 over the previous year. 1,380,000 traffic injuries and an economic loss of one billion dollars, "with elements in control of the situation apparently growing worse." The figures speak for themselves. They are an eloquent indictment of gross carelessness, and indicate that a very large percentage of drivers on the highways lose their senses of proportion when they slip behind the steering wheel of an automobile.

Insofar as the 1940 accident record is concerned the Canadian driver has little upon which to congratulate himself when a comparison is made with last year's record of his American cousin and after making due allowance for the much smaller population of this country and hence, the less congestion on Canadian highways, except perhaps in the vicinity of a few of the largest eastern centres.

Without going into details, the Canadian highway traffic accident record for the year shows more deaths, more injuries and more property loss than in 1939. The trend is in the wrong direction and there is no reason to suppose that the 1941 toll would not have exceeded that of 1940, had it not been for the recently imposed gasoline consumption restrictions and the plea for less pleasure driving. The degree in which these restrictions and this request were observed will undoubtedly be reflected in the chapter on 1941 losses which will be written into the record book year

In every province of the Dominion the highway accident toll was greater in 1940 than in 1939. It is true that in the prairie provinces the loss on a per capita basis was smaller than in most of the other provinces, but this is not a matter for self-congratulation on the part of the prairie driver. It was to be expected. When due allowance is made for the fact that traffic is spread far more thinly over the roads in the prairie provinces than in British Columbia and Ontario and Quebec, it would be astonishing if the per capita loss were not less on the prairies than in the more densely populated provinces.

Finance Before Responsible

It is a notorious fact that the motorist on pleasure-bent is responsible for the too great a proportion of highway accidents. The man who is out to make a living, who often leaves anxious and concerned wife and children as his companions, a spirit of abandon, sometimes amounting to a devil may care attitude. This fact is recognized by the Automotive Safety Foundation which attributes a percentage of the increase in accident toll to "exhilaration, recklessness, drink and hurry." If this is a true diagnosis, the remedy is obvious. Exhilaration should be combatted with calm and caution, in which event recklessness would disappear. Drink and driving should be considered divorced and the urge for speed should be eliminated.

Speed engendered by recklessness and a spirit of abandon is unquestionably responsible for very heavy losses of life, limb and property on the highways. The motorist, whether his mission be holiday or business, should adopt the slogan "Keep her down to forty". If a 60-mile limit were observed, reductions in highway accidents would be immediate and spectacular. the accident and the chances of avoiding accident over the 60 m.p.h speed maximum far beyond proportion of the increased speed. And if an accident does occur the death-hazard at 50 or 60 miles an hour is enormously out of proportion to that at the 60-mile speed. A driver can cover surprising distances at a steady 40, sufficient for ordinary requirements and certainly enough for a pleasure jaunt.

Moreover, for most cars, around 40 miles an hour is the most economical speed. The driver who is content to drive at forty will get the most for his accident toll within reasonable bounds. he will be money in pocket and will be making a valuable contribution to the war effort by conserving gasoline.

German Soldier In Hospital Died To Talk To Reader

In Copenhagen they tell of a story of a German soldier who sat on a park bench by a pond and talked to the ducks. The Danish passers-by regarded him with much bafflement. Finally one of them, returning from the speaking duck, and seeing him still there went up and asked him why he had such long converse with the speaking birds. "There is not one duck in Copenhagen who will talk to me," said the German.

Since The Germans Hi-Treated The Clergy In Czechoslovakia

German overlords of Bohemia and Moravia, once part of independent Czechoslovakia vented on Catholic and Protestant alike their hatred according to evidence presented in the official publication Two Years of German Oppression in Czechoslovakia.

The Nazis hoodled priests into overcrowded cattle cars, confiscated church property, banned pilgrimages to shrines and closed theological schools. So the Nazis have made it difficult for the young generation of Czechs to preach.

You and I have to stand for rationing, but they should cut out the hours, carrying only a few pounds, and cut down that foul stuff we have a daily train service, the last years out here." Motor Fuel Economy

Tests carried on at the Experimental Station at Swift Current show that the draft of one-way discs and moldboard plows increases very markedly with an increase of speed. An increase in speed of two miles per hour increased the draft of the one-way disc by 15 to 20 per cent. of the slow speed moldboard plow by 30 per cent. and of the high speed moldboard plow by over 35 per cent.

An increase in speed of one and one-half times the slower speed required twice as many horse-power to operate the machine, giving a net result that 25 per cent more horse-power hours per acre were required to till the land in the case of the plow and over 10 per cent in the case of the one-way This increase in power per acre is a definite increase in fuel per acre. Therefore, it is economically sound to pull larger units at slower rates of speed. Most important, however, is the fact that the better job of tilling resulted at the slower speeds. The soil was pulverized less and the trash [illegible] in the one-way discing at the lower speed

It was further noted that the high speed moldboard plow used could be operated one mile per hour faster than the slow speed plow, leaving a similar job of plowing with the same draft.

It is believed that high speed one-way discs may be designed with shallower concavity discs to operate satisfactorily at high speeds with a light draft.—Contributed by C. C. R. [illegible] Dominion Experimental Station Swift Current Sask.

RUSSELL'S SERVICE STATION

In Peace Or War

It is not the prevailing practice of the residents of Western Canada to bestow praise upon or express approval of the actions of Premier Hepburn and his government of Ontario, so there is at least one thing which the Ontario government is carrying out this year, for which its members should be accorded a measure of appreciation.

At the present time a number of contractors with a large force of men are engaged in building a stretch of highway 152 miles in length between Geraldton and Hearst in northwestern Ontario some distance north of the shores of Lake Superior

The announcement in itself may not seem at first glance to be of any particular importance or of interest to the west, but it gains considerable significance when it is added that the completion of this particular stretch of highway will make a dream come true, the dream of an unbroken highway across Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific, for this comparatively short stretch represents the only barrier to a completed highway from coast to coast with every inch of it on Canadian soil

At the turn of the year there were two gaps in the trans-Canada highway one on British Columbia through the Big Bend section of the mountainous land the other, the 152-mile stretch through muskeg and bush in Northern Ontario to which reference has just been made. The Big Bend section was completed this spring and officially opened by Premier Pattullo on June 29

Whether the Geraldton-Hearst section in Ontario will be completed by the stage that will permit traffic to use it before the snow flies this fall, so originally announced, appears somewhat doubtful in doubt, but a gravel surface highway in Ontario's present summer of highways was rather vague about it in a newspaper interview in which he was quoted as pointing out that pioneering work was being preparatory work and that about they had completed their work, as regards one of $2,000,000 for grading and gravelling would be involved, adding that just when heavy work on the projects would be resumed depended upon the war

I Remember When

The deputy minister's statements ought to contribute as an intimation that expenses of the war might necessitate delaying the highway project a week or two of this destination "Canadian Business," in the July issue, announced that contractors are at work on the last gap in the trans-Canada highway through the mountains. "Departing from the usual policy of making no capital expenditures for new roads, the Ontario department of highways will spend this last 152 mile gap in a hurry-up fashion."

In the light of recent developments in the war between the Axis powers and the democracies, and particularly the threatening attitude of Japan towards British and American interests in the east, the possible importance most of this country in war with Japan should not be dismissed lightly in such an economic war as the present. Japan must maintain a special relationship with the United States for the purchase of additional supplies would speedily become apparent country for movement of military supplies would speedily become apparent It would provide a third means of communication between east and west, southern Canada supplementing the two existing transcontinental railroads. It could quit conceivably become of as great importance as a defensive measure as the U.S.A.-Alaska highway now being built by the U.S. army as a military objective With the startling and rapid developments of war moves in ever-widening circles it would appear to be the part of wisdom to move more than ever, or even two strings to her bow.

However, whether or not the use of the trans-Canada highway becomes necessary in a defence measure, it is destined to be of very great and valuable services in the development of the country after the war, and perhaps even before that. In fact, it may have a secondary defence value, at least, even though not directly military. It will open up northern Ontario to a hitherto virgin tarry ory which may lead to the discovery of new stores of minerals of value to the war effort.

Then, too, the completed link between eastern and western Canada should furnish an additional lure to the American tourist whose pleasure dollars make such a valuable contribution to the war effort by increasing Canadian purchasing power in the United States for needed war materials To the author of the completed highway all credit more Americans will visit Canada it will assist in further cementing the ties between two countries which to-day have a common aim.

* * *

A Post-War Asset

Because of the necessity of conserving gasoline, it is probable that Canadians themselves will not be able to reap immediately the full commercial and social benefit that this link should provide. But when the necessity for restricting driving disappears, the completed highway will afford an opportunity for closer contact between eastern and western Canadians and will play an important role in creating a better understanding between one and west and in creating a united nation.

Whatever may have inspired the Ontario government's decision to complete the last gap in the trans-continental highway, the result can be nothing but benefit to both eastern and western Canada in wartime or in peace.

Pilots Who Ferry Bombers To Britain Answer Some Questions

Four of the men who ferry bombers to Great Britain are in the hangar control tower at a R.A.F. Eastern Command station, having warmed up in right to 12 hours' ice crew would be handing out American Expeditionary to R.A.F. posts in England

Captain D. who used to operate an air line in Western Canada, and Captain Jim Stanton, formerly with the Canadian Airlines pilot Captain X of Los Angeles a former oil company flier Captain Y of Hot Potatoes England for 15 years a pilot with Imperial Airways, and Captain Z. Toronto, a former flying instructor answered a few questions

They job for which they are paid $500 a trip with two trips a week is guaranteed in part a job From 65 to 70 per cent of the ferry pilots are Americans The rest come from Australia, New Zealand Rhodesia Holland Norway France Greece and Russia Their average age is 30 Although their work is still to some extent experimental, they are not called heroes," or daredevils

Do you ever see enemy planes?" they were asked

Ever see any Nazi submarines in the Atlantic?" A. No

What was the worst difficulty you experienced? A. Fog

What if an enemy plane appeared? A. There are a few big machine guns on board

Don't you almost freeze? A. I've gotten used to the cold temperature

How do you think about? A. Flying

How do you feel on arrival in England? A Hungry

Q. Like a meal and get tight? A. The organization is no place for drinking

Their job was so unglamorous the pilots were asked how about all the magazine writing it as heroic and the like The mostly bained Texan answered for the group "Nuts, Krist, A."

A moment later he clutched into a taxi and headed for some where in England."

Will Not Be Distracted

When British Start Anything They Always See It Through

Arthur Bryant in the Illustrated London News, has a good article thing about the English is their persistence For once they make up their minds to do a thing they are perhaps fortunate for the peace and comfort of the world, very stubborn in a very slow and not too frequent process nothing will the react their minds. A pioneer division in Africa is a battle and almost hibernish thing compared to the British people when their minds made up. Even if so genuinely happens they are not distracted from the ordeal of endurance for which they set themselves. They still go through with it to the very end and be found at it when everyone else is thoroughly fed up and has gone home. Only then will they stop, relax and start to think again. Similarly when they are heartened or unprovoked. At such moments they become more keen, because nothing has ever been learned. Nor are they ever more dangerous as an opponent than when they are unprovoked.

Sting Of Plant Pruned In New Zealand Is Painful

One visitor to the botanical gardens in Auckland, New Zealand, was surprised and intensely painful sting from a plant stung him Inadvertently he had touched the cauga cauga, or urtica dioica, with his fingers. The sting as described by T. L. Lawrence, secretary of the gardens, is in the nature of stinging plants in New Zealand. The stalks and leaves are covered with minute hairs, the tips of which break off and allow an organic acid to be injected into the skin.

Airgraph Service

Pilot Postal Service Of No Hindi 1 The World

In April Britain's Postmaster General inaugurate the Airgraph service between the fighting forces in the Middle East of England. It was the first postal service of its kind in the world. By mail zone more than 300 letters half been transmitted to Egypt in two days. The method of transmission was nine days only Letters are written on special forms taking from two to three words. They are photographed in miniature on negative and sent through the ordinary post

Before this service was introduced these letters from soldiers serving and sailors in the Middle East were taking three or four weeks to get home in a few weeks when the "sea of essential war history have been shipped and delivered in the Middle East mothers wives and sweethearts of the fighting forces will be soothed by frequent letters in their own hand writing to some extent easing anxiety

As surprising as this technical achievement is, perhaps the most surprising of a war on many fronts is the fact that the end of the service comprises thousands with ordinary postal charges

If you had to send a letter from one side of London to the other it costs only 3d to send a similar letter from the heart of the Arctic desert to Aberdeen

Mountain Memorial

Mount Edith Cavell Proposals An Inspiring Sight

There are many monuments to the memory of the brave men and women who gave their lives for the cause of freedom and democracy in this Great War but the majestic shrine named after Nurse Edith Cavell is perhaps the most inspiring of them all

Mount Edith Cavell in Jasper National Park is one of the most remarkable peaks in the Canadian Rockies It occupies an almost isolated position and is clearly visible from points 30 miles distant. The main mass is a height of over 11,000 feet and is perpetually hooded with a white mantle of snow appropriately for the ends of this magnificent mountain is long with a glistening white glacier which gives the impression of a great white angel with outstretched wings spread peaceful ly over the valley below

Mount Edith Cavell has many moods It can be quiet it one must see it at all hours of the day and under different conditions. On grey days its appearance may suggest a sorrowful mood but on a bright day it is snowy cap and sparkling ruinent gleams with ecstatic purity against the clear blue sky In the moonlight it is indescribably beautiful — Dominion Parks Branch

Snappier Uniforms

Women's Auxiliary Territorial Army Is Bettina Hue Blue Uniform

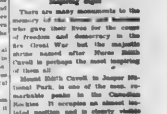
Miss, 23-year-old Mrs Jean Knox took over control of the Women's Auxiliary Territorial Army from Mrs Helen Gwynne-Vaughan who resigned the command of the army and promised its 50,000 women she would give them a snappier uniform.

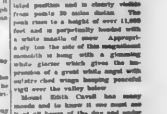
With the rank of major general—the highest rank to be held only by the army—she sits at a big desk at the War Office. The mother of a 16-year-old girl and wife of a former Air Force pi, moves among her in the Auxiliary Territorial Army and the only women general.

Miss Knox hopes the new four-pointed shirt and tailored jacket she designed for her troops to replace the old plain-cut khaki shirt and coat will coax more girls into the A.T.S. to give her army 100,000 by Christmas. Its jobs are cooking, secretarial, communications and other work similar to the jobs women can do to relieve men for fighting.

The A.T.S. ranks have been full of complaint about their dress on the ground that the Women's Auxiliary Air Force (the "blues") and the Women's Royal Naval Service, (the "wrens") with their smarter uniforms, have been getting all the dates.

Were one tiny particle of rubber scattered about by an aerial bomb, it would be dangerous to live in that location for many years.





DAUGHTER OF DESTINY

CHAPTER XVIII

Dvonna had congratulated herself in the month since she'd last seen Dale Brandon that her pride, her self-respect her common sense had at last won out over her heart She despised him, she told herself, for his domineering of times And she really believed it Then on a certain Monday evening Looking again straight into those deep blue eyes, she wasn't so sure

"Good evening, Dale Brandon," he said and something like a smile settled over his face "This is quite a surprise."

"Really?" Fighting trembling that spread treacherously over her in chilling tides, she slipped into the chair Merath held for her let him light her cigarette, order a cocktail

"Did you hear Dona sing just now?" Brandon asked, addressing quietly as his dark eyes travelled from one to the other, missing nothing.

Dale nodded his lips set primly "Yes, I had heard her sing before."

"Had I? Oh, I'd forgot Maries persisted

Dale's thin glance met hers across the little candle-lit table "No—not then I knew she had a lovely voice. I'm afraid I've become overwhelmingly ill."

Dvonna laughed "Why not? No one is interested in staging sentimental little ballads in one drawing Perm. The latest order

"No, I suppose not It's no doubt much more in vogue now," Dale glanced around the crowded room "to enjoy the centre of a spotlight."

Wrapped Dvonna cried to hear the sarcasm in his voice.

"She's learned plenty since she's been with me," Brandon went on complacently, obviously enjoying the situation.

"I can believe that." Dale's smile twisted coldly

Dvonna found a cushion "If we about time, wasn't it?"

"Sure," Brandon go for his a big sag" Maries waved his cigar at the remnant of pleasure nothing She's my biggest attraction also."

"Congratulations." Dale nodded her with a little bow "I'm sure Dona must be very proud."

Dale nonchalantly nodded, "Good-bye."

A moment later they were moving toward the entrance of the Lotus Club, Dvonna felt his arm around her waist. Dvonna felt his arm around her waist. The last time he'd held her close in his arms, she remembered with a sharp pang, he'd threatened that he loved her, wanted never to lose her. Now he was holding her possessively as if that wonderful world had day together, his cool courtesy betrayed none of it.

"Do you like your new—a—job?" he asked, obviously making polite small talk.

"Very much."

"Dale and Dona have, aren't they?" "I love them. It's so gay, so exciting, so—different from anything new friends—" She couldn't go on with the; cowld be.

"I am glad," he said, his voice deepening for a moment."

"Oh, sorry!"

"And plenty of wealthy patrons to make your contacts—worthwhile? His lip curled over to slightly "Dale and Dona have very proud of you, yet."

Then again Dvonna let her lip Maybe every new face was a challenge to Dale Brandon, but his loyalty to his friends was touching, she thought.

When the dance ended and they made their way back to the table, Brandon was waiting for them.

"I'll have a chip along first," Dale told him, pulling Dvonna in her chair. "Dvonna, you'll have a cocktail?"

"Thank you, no," Dvonna refused, "I've had enough."

"Nonsense," Brandon protested "don't be interested would prefer it kept secret I'm sure Meaning that you've kept it kept secret," Dvonna smiled "Thanks for the hint, Brandon, I'll remember."

What ever you wish my dear."

With that Dvonna felt the jaws of the trap closing in around her With every word that she defied Dale she put herself more completely in Marcus hands But there was no choice She couldn't let Dale see her afraid After all she'd shown him her heart

Watching Marcus now Dale seemed only vaguely amused at his attitude toward Dvonna. And Dvonna felt making that attitude plainer with every word.

The chief time—Dvonna I am sorry to say that All the most people are in town. I'm afraid you're going to help her get into big time Work and Thursday he said Dale and Dona will be here Now now I'm sure you'll excuse me."

Dvonna watched with tears, the watch ed that dear girl back toward Marcus' until they disappeared in the lobby Her self-respect was utterly when he saved—as it is was funny the way it always

Then she heard Maxmor's cigarette chords as he lighted Then he went again She joined the strolling throng, exchanged friendly nod of her eyes, not big her smile as was as if it were part of her uniform Impersonally she glanced at the men, wasn't much to be about like except as an escort.

When reluctantly they finished the last encore, she turned toward Marcus with a long breath.

"Smaller, kid," Maxmor at her "Don't be so eager to get back to the stage."

"Oh, I'm not eager," she denied, "but I'm all right."

"Well, you've been good it, then Get some sleep."

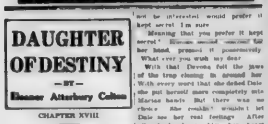
Pottery From Britain

Total Value Of Shipments Since End Of War Nearly $2,000,000

A Flag of Truce Trade Churchill's remarks and chocolate is a best seller in the United States Now pottery is the latest addition to the calendar of cities Arrow shipped nearly $2,000,000 worth pottery crowned and one of the many items making South Africa's trade with the United States, especially insensate stoneware, to take the place of metals needed for war. Before the war Germany and Japan had been the principal suppliers of pottery to the United States, but the demand for pottery is so great in the United States that the British potteries if they could get the materials, could more than supply the demand.

One shop typical of many, did a good business in 1939 delivering more than 1,000 pieces of pottery to the United States. The consignment report that the pottery was packed in straw and shipped in parts of British Columbia proved a failure, however, many pieces being broken in transit.



Valuable Paintings

Brought From Britain To Canada For Duration Of The War

Three distinguished "war guests" have arrived from England and will be at home to the Canadian public in the National Gallery of Canada.

They are three masterpieces which used to hang in the National Gallery in London and they will be kept in Canada for the duration

Manifest of the three is the well-known picture of "The Graham Children" painted by William Hogarth in 1743, and it is considered one of his finest works

Four children are seen at various stages The freshness of the skin tones, the bright eyes, and the shadow on the satin in their clothes is so vivid to-day as in the period in which the picture was painted Something of Hogarth's masterly touch is found in a delightful portrait out over the boy's chair

The second is John Chesterfield's "Sub Rev. Hampstead Heath," painted in 1833, which is a landscape of great beauty

The third painting by J. M. Turner's "Mercury and Argus" was painted about a month before the ceremony. For a small fee you may look at them

Admission is free. A special broadcast might include items like the Norfolk Hornpipe, Sailor's Hornpipe, coffee and punch 10 the other.

Plans Add Workers Make Days For Bombed-Out Children

At a first-aid post in Pimlico, London, a bombed-out mother nearly all making toys when there a no more nurses work to do. A mother who had lost her home appeal on behalf of bombed-out children, now busy making toys for them. Even the nursery, who have lost their playthings

The nurses were sticking toys "mother production" line of dolls' beds when I called at the depot They were the children's clothing lost or damaged had been, they told me.

Everything that could possibly be used for the bombed-out children is salvaged by the workers Breakages of paint are repaired, and dressmakers in the kitchen of Pimlico nursery depot are always considered a great feat

There would be no limit to the kind of toys these clever folk could make Stacked in the room were trains, boats, aeroplanes, fire engines and airplanes

They are even having a try at "mass production" now to speed up the work. Stock mass specimens at the depot are one single fish.—Correspondence Daily Mail.

Women Are Serving

But Actual Fighting In Russia Being Done By Men

Soviet Russia leaves the actual fighting to men but hundreds of women have gone to the war front; serving chiefly in the medical services Many women who are not doctors or nurses are serving in military headquarters as interpreters stenographers, cooks and amateur postmen

But the women's place is one has been demoted and favored by the Soviets as hoisted the host, replacing men who have gone to the front. Reports showed that 75 per cent have been fighting as troops in the month of the Red Army have been demoted to Measure as Germans propaganda or stemming from behind lines.

For instance there was the case of the Moscow Women's Battalion of Death, who dropped her hundred miles the Germans came granted a rifle company, which was sent to the front the attack There was another battalion of women which was equipped with troops in fighting on the Finnish front

But the general tendency has been to discourage any Amazonian ambitions Women's fighting units have been sent into other channels. Training courses have been provided in supply women for tasks in factories and on farms. The women's slogan has been "Work to help breath."

Total Value Of Shipments Since End Of War Nearly $2,000,000

A Flag of Truce Trade Churchill's remarks and chocolate is a best seller in the United States Now pottery is the latest addition to the calendar of cities Arrow shipped nearly $2,000,000 worth pottery crowned and one of the many items making South Africa's trade with the United States, especially insensate stoneware, to take the place of metals needed for war. Before the war Germany and Japan had been the principal suppliers of pottery to the United States, but the demand for pottery is so great in the United States that the British potteries if they could get the materials, could more than supply the demand.

One shop typical of many, did a good business in 1939 delivering more than 1,000 pieces of pottery to the United States. The consignment report that the pottery was packed in straw and shipped in parts of British Columbia proved a failure, however, many pieces being broken in transit.

Clothes Destroying In Britain Has Opposite Effect In Nazi Germany

The Liverpool Post says not only does repairers but also dry cleaners have been busy since the blitz began. Dry cleaning is a process which removes grease as a result of which clothes are left in a condition which would deteriorate if they were not cleaned. But it was necessary to clean them quickly.

Many of the "out-sizes" have been removed there during the blitz, so made by the Department of Natural Resources, which is hopeful that they will be ready for sale in the autumn. Similar work is being done in parts of British Columbia.

THE LITTLE PEOPLE OF ENGLAND

BY MRS. VALLANCE S. PAPHAMENT

"They carry no weapons, wage no banner-chant no stately measures of pomp these little people of England. Pale clerks, laborers with still, gnarled hands; old fishermen and young mechanics; housewives, mother-women, nursemaids and chars and tired children singing underground to break your heart

"They climb to heights of glory as if bare to sacrifice and heroism, scaling the peaks by humble paths and mean alleys which turn to pits of flame; or attaining the summit of valor through dark and cruel descent into the icy waters of the sea. Like soldiers they have borne the shock of fire and shell; like sailors they have gone down undaunted to their death in shattered ships, and like aviators they have given their strength to rise 'By Labor to the Stars.'

"No Abbey walls have space to record the deeds of these simple most, gone nobly or gaily to eternity. Their names shall not be graven on stone nor painted on glass; no Roll of Honor could set them forth. But the dust of England, the winds which whisper in her trees, the waves which beat upon her shores shall vibrate with the passion of their courage, the splendor of their sacrifice. Each dawn shall find how they rose in humble cheerfulness to fight their dirty mother of the earth with a candle of faith, each sunset shall be a flaming beacon to remind all men of their burning steadfastness."

LYMBERY MOTORS

"Don't you wish we could shorten the war?"

She: "Well, in a way we can, you know."

She: "But, George, we're not trained to do anything . . ."

She: "Training doesn't matter for what I'm thinking about. I was wondering whether we couldn't put money of our income into War Savings Certificates."

She: "And why not? We might have to go without one or two pet luxuries—but wouldn't it be worth it to bring back peace again?"

She: "And won't we be glad of the money—and the interest it will have earned—in a world without war materials?"

The help of every Canadian is needed for Victory. In these days of war the production which provides is a matter of life and death. It is the duty of everyone to save to relief necessities so as to free the resources for goods, to enable more and more Canadians to be employed in the production of war goods. The more often, indeed Canada says more, it means she will say: "Out of need of us."

You There Won't Be Any Skating Rink in Alix "UNLESS"

Unless We Do Something About It

As every one knows who has taken the trouble to investigate the situation it is going to take a lot of work and a lot of money to provide skating in Alix this season.

Whoever takes on the job will have to start from scratch, which is all the more reason why a satisfactory organization is necessary if a skating rink is to become a reality.

With this object in view the Alix Athletic Association have called a public meeting for Monday Sept. 29th. at the U. F. A. Hall and all citizens of Alix and district are urged to attend, a special invitation to the parents of the school children.

Come to this meeting and come prepared to make your most generous contribution.

A great many social activities afford different communities but, the greatest plague that ever hit a town is the demon of "Social Inertia". We are appalled at the suggestion that we co-operate in a community effort yet we think nothing of the money we spend for unnecessary individual diversions, whereas if we threw some of it into a community kitty Pot and realized something everyone could use the investment would pay large dividends in positive enjoyment.

The meeting is being called with the thought in mind that if the people of Alix and district are to be made to see the plight of our community in it's true perspective they will co-operate in an effort that will contribute a great deal to the moral and physical welfare of our youth.

Don't shirk your responsibility any longer attend this meeting.

It's a job nobody wants, but somebody must do it.

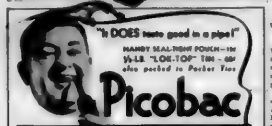
Send To Sanatoria" Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour. With fresh gags, hilarious situation and a corps of the brand new song numbers, some comic, some romantic and some of the ballad type, the picture moves at a fast pace throughout. Getting off to a hilarious start Bing and Bob are presented as a pair of carnival men travelling around Africa with their sets trying to raise enough money to go back home. Just as this has been accomplished they run into Dorothy Lamour and Una Merkel who are trying to scrape up enough money to get through the jungle, where Dorothy plans to marry a rich young man.

Mr. Wolfenstein is busy painting his building on main street.

Mr. Pete Russell of Stone district passed away on Saturday at the Lacombe Hospital. The interment was made at the Stone Cemetery on Monday afternoon at 2.30, Pherwalling and Son of Mirror were in charge of the funeral.

Mrs. R. Pike of Bittern Lake left for Calgary Tuesday to spend a few days with her sister before going to Oversfield where she will make her home.



Adults Or Children

"Either we must act like adults or we must expect to be treated like children — declared one of the younger prominent business men in one of the Western Canadian cities recently.

The 100 octane gas compared by the comparatively recent discoveries of Eric Zimmerman, co-controller to curtail the hours at which gasoline may be sold together with other restrictions designed to bring home to the people of the country the imperative need for conserving gasoline fuel oils and other derivatives of petroleum in order that more fuel may be released for driving aeroplane, tanks and other weapons in the fight against Nazism.

The statement of this young business man was not imparted alone by the compulsory motor-gas restrictions imposed by the oil controller but by apparent evidence on all sides of a tendency on the part of too many to fail to appreciate the very urgent need for conservation of gasoline and to disregard the general appeal to the public to reduce pleasure driving by at least 50 per cent, which accompanied the announcement of the imposition of the restrictions.

As this issue young man said, it would be a sad commentary on the practical appreciation of our democracy if we are not willing to make these few pleasures in order to preserve it, if, as has been suggested it should be necessary to impose a system of gasoline rationing in order to ensure conservation of this essential war material if in other words we have to be treated like children because we do not act on our own initiative like grown-ups are expected to act.

* * * *

Use Of Two Roads

If the appeal to curb our appetite for driving automobiles in pursuit of pleasure does not receive the general response which the cause requires it will only be for one of two reasons. Either the need for conservation of gasoline is not so fully appreciated as it should be or we are loath to forego a few non-essential pleasures as one of the contributions that can easily be made to the war effort. If the latter, can we consider ourselves deserving of the democracy.

There is a man who understands the situation who will not subscribe to Churchill's declaration that the ultimate os come of this war lies in the decision of the Battle of the Atlantic, the fight on the water between that continent and Great Britain. If Britain is defeated there will be the end of the Empire and of democracy is severed. Supplies of war material and food is the front on which we can most effectively help Britain to victory. The winning of the Battle of the Atlantic and subsequently to the winning of the war. Every Canadian who burns a gallon of gasoline unnecessarily in the light of these facts should ask himself the question "Am I doing all that when the gasoline I am using for personal enjoyment might be used to sink a ship carrying food to relieved comrades in Britain from being sunk to the bottom of the ocean, or prevent a boat carrying our gallant boys and their fighting equipment from being destroyed?"

* * *

Weeds No Injury

Figures have been made public showing that consumption of gasoline in Canada for enterprise production and this is also true of the balance between consumption and production in Western Canada, and what is more domestic consumption is increasing by leaps and bounds. It is true that a great deal of the gasoline and fuel oil consumed in Western Canada is required for agricultural and industrial purposes, but it is also true that a considerable percentage is used for the pursuit of pleasure and most of the latter perhaps all of it could be eliminated without doing anyone an injury. The present excess of consumption over production has to be imported either by ocean or lake tankers or by boat cars on the railways from the United States. The tankers are urgently needed to convey overseas to provide fuel for fighters and bombers and motor boats engaged in the Battle of the Atlantic and tank cars from the United States should be released for the use of gasoline required for the rapidly increasing defence measures on the other side of the international boundary. Moreover the fact should be overlooked that every Canadian who runs his car in the United States for the purchase of gasoline to be used in pleasure driving could be utilized to much greater advantage in the prosecution of the Canadian war effort.

We sing "There'll always be an England." Yes, we believe that, but we must also believe that it will be so, only if we help to make it so.

Pterydactyls Built On Clyde Resident Perish Waters Unescorted

The first Canadian ship to be built on the Clyde since the war began. One of the longest unescorted voyages of the war must have been made by one of the ferryboats built here, when it reached Prague, it was reported to have made the journey unescorted, though these vessels are not meant for long trips. Just in length, they travel at 14.000 miles an hour and are powered by two 40 horse power motors. Until the middle of the 19th century, earthquakes were believed to be caused by winds rushing from great subterranean caverns.

The United States has 350,000 miles of oil pipelines.

New Radio Alert Receiver

Would Replace Sirens In Air Raid Warnings

Maybe F H La Guardia of New York expressed belief that the ringing of a bell in the new radio alert receiver which responds automatically to an inaudible signal, would replace sirens on air raid warnings.

La Guardia national director of civilian defence signed off on the Atlantic conversation by radio with Maj F W Jackson Beef of the London fire brigade and W R Brett chief operational officer of the London civilian defence.

A test of the new device, which transmits listeners in their receivers even though the sets are not turned on, was made early David Sarnoff president of the Radio Corporation of America, took part in the demonstration. Sarnoff has been useful to radio for the British officials.

The London defence heads were assured by Sarnoff that the device would be permitted to be manufactured for the open type receiver.

Sarnoff said the receiver rang a bell to summon listeners and that it could be used for signals against gas flashed. It functioned 24 hours a day.

He said the device in the form of a portable radio could be at school to standard radio sets and manufactured in quantities. The receiver cost around $15 or perhaps less.

A Giant Flywheel

Made In Britain For Use In South Africa Mine

In two months the head of eight tons can be brought up from a mine 6,000 feet down by an electric winder now in course of erection at the mine of the City Deep mines in South Africa, it was the Johannesburg Star-Journal. Two similar equipments completed for South African carry 3,000 to 3,500 tons. Believed to be the biggest ever made for electric winding Forty tons of steel will go into the single piece flywheel in cast steel included in each motor generator set for controlling the drum purposes.

The same engineering shops have also turned out many gear wheels during the past year including large turbo-alternators for India, Canada and Australia. Also for the Admiralty machine gear additional rectifiers for the Southern Railway similar to those supplied a few years ago for the main line electrification scheme. Durban Airport

AGRICULTURE THE "POOR RELATION"

1. That the initial payment by the Wheat Board should be increased to $1 a bushel for One Cent wheat at the moment.

2. That the stocks of wheat represented by the carryover as at July 31st, 1941, should be taken off the market and held as a national emergency war reserve.

3. That, as from August 1st, 1941, all sales of wheat should be credited to the crop year 39-40.

4. That the crop year 1941-42 should be declared an emergency year under the terms of the Prairie Farm Assistance Act, irrespective of market prices prevailing

The above four requests were made by a delegation, representing the western Wheat Pools, which, on August 5th, interviewed the Wheat Committee of the Federal Government.

The delegation pointed out that principally because of the short crop, the farm revenue from wheat produced in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be approximately 300 million less than last year, and this in the face of continually rising farm costs.

The delegation compared the government's wartime wage policy with its agricultural policy. From the government's viewpoint wages rates are fair and reasonable if they are as high as the highest rates paid between 1926 and December 10th, 1939. If farmers were treated on the same basis, the prices of grains would be as follows:

Wheat, per bushel	$1.60
Oats, per bushel	60
Barley, per bushel	80
Rye, per bushel	1.35
Flax, per bushel	3.00

If Canadian unity is to be maintained, the Wheat Pool memorandum pointed out, and we are to reach our maximum effort in the successful prosecution of the war, the great disparity between agricultural and labor policy must be eliminated. "We would urge upon the government of Canada that the farm producers, who form such a large part of our population, should not be "regarded as the "poor relation" of the Canadian family, and that it is in the national interest that steps should be taken to place the living standard of those engaged in farming on a basis commensurate with the rest of the country.

"We realize fully the necessity of maintaining our war-industries at the highest possible pitch of efficiency, and that in order to reach this workers should enjoy fair and reasonable wage rates. We know of no foundation upon which the principal can be established that agriculture should continue to produce food supplies at prices below the cost of production in order that other groups of our population, which are already protected by cost of living bonus regulations, should enjoy a lower cost of living at the expense of agriculture.

"In this memorandum we have not tried to emphasize the unrest dissatisfaction and anxiety now prevailing in the western provinces, largely as a result of lack of adequate farm revenue to maintain reasonable living conditions. At the same time we would like to emphasize that, in spite of conditions at present prevailing, there are neither strikes nor lockouts in the agricultural industry."

Wheat producers of Alberta should clearly understand what is being done to help their cause. Their organizations can go so far. Further progress can be made only by the whole-hearted and energetic support of the whole body of farmers

LAST CALL
SEPT. 30
TO PAY YOUR 1941
INCOME TAX
on the Government Monthly Plan
You must start at once!

Next Monday will be the last opportunity to pay your 1941 Income Tax on the Government Monthly Plan. This gives you the privilege of paying income tax monthly installments without interest, instead of by lump sum in March, 1942.

Here is how to get the monthly payment privilege. Divide the total of your 1940 Income Tax by twelve. This is your first payment and should be sent to Receiver General on or before September 30, 1941. You will then pay the same amount before the end of each month for the balance of 1941. When you have estimated your 1941 income tax at the 1941 rate, you will deduct the four payments you will have already made and pay the remainder in eight equal monthly installments, starting January, 1942.

The Government offers the above plan as the most flexible and convenient method of meeting your income tax obligations. Ask your local Income Tax Collector for an Instalment Income Tax Remittance Form — and any further information you may require.

Thrift EQUIPS MEN

For the men of Canada's army, only the best will do. From the hats to service boots their equipment must be the finest Canada can produce.

Great equipment costs money . . . huge sums of money. And that money must be provided by the men and women of Canada out of earned income.

How? By borrowing pledges to invest in our savings certificates every month. By saving now, to pay war taxes when due. By saving now, to invest in Victory Loans and Victory bonds in coming months.

This means that every Canadian must learn to do without some of the things he normally would buy, and stop spending. Every duty demands that we have no Victory now.

WARNS AGAINST DAMP GRAIN

Farmers should exercise the greatest care in harvesting grain to cure and dry before cutting and threshing said Hon. D Bruce MacMillan provincial minister of agriculture He said that if grain is threshed before it is dry the grain will be heating in farm bins or grain elevators. "Farmers must handle treated grain on the farm with extreme care by low speed. The lack of elevator space makes it impossible to handle any large volume of damp grain at country elevators or terminals.

Experience has shown, the minister said that it pays to wait until the grain is in proper condition before threshing in

Wife: "Yes! Imagine! Until it became a patriotic duty we certainly never managed to put anything by each week."

Husband: "I think it's partly because these War Savings Certificates are so simple to buy."

Wife: "You mean the idea of getting the office to deduct a regular amount each week from your salary?"

Husband: "Yes! And how they're mounting up! Quite a nest-egg when you count the bonus they're earning."

Wife: "Well the more the merrier, I say! There are lots of things we'll need the money for, as the years roll by!"

The help of every Canadian is needed for Victory. In these days of war the thoughtless extra spender is a traitor to our war effort. A reduction in personal spending is now a vital necessity to relieve the pressure for goods, to enable more and more labour and materials to be diverted to winning the war. The utmost effort, which Canada must make, demands this self-denial of each of us.

Power In Wheat?

Dwelt on the heels of an editorial on the volcano ongoing that further research and experimentation into the economic possibility of conserving some of the Canadian wheat surplus onto power absolved as a substitute for gasoline comes an unofficial announcement from Ottawa that the federal government is considering that very thing and has held a preliminary conference with experts on this question.

The raison d'être for the suggestion stands, it is gratifying to note that not before one dead area, to ensure the necessity for putting to some useful purpose a commodity which is at present a glut on the market. If it can be used to be in the interest of all concerned with a desire to be relieved every possible avenue of providing new income for the farmers, who are not now reaping more than a bare living from their operations.

Since the days of steam, another development has taken place which should furnish an additional incentive to promptly a vigorous search for a new outlet for wheat. Reference is made to the urgent necessity for the conservation of gasoline for the war effort a necessity which suddenly became so apparent that the government, through the oil control board, placed restrictions on the use of motor fuel and appealed to the public to reduce pleasure driving by at least 50 per cent. The need for these measures to be followed pending the refinining of gasoline necessitates the importance of endeavoring to locate some other source of motor fuel.

o o o o

Save Double Purpose

If the conversion of wheat into power alcohol can be demonstrated to be economically feasible, the use of wheat for that purpose would serve a double purpose. It would assist in conserving gasoline and it would be at least a partial solution of the almost ever-pressing wheat problem.

Unfortunately the article appearing in the daily press to which reference has been made is not overly optimistic hence it appears that the purpose of some of the experts attending the conference to the effect that the cost of converting would be so high that the price that could be paid for wheat used for this purpose would be but little if any more than the present low grading and harvesting it or, in the alternative the government would have to subsidize the wheat grower.

The conference had before it a report of Dr W D McFarlane of Macdonald College in which he estimated that "the most of the fuel if wheat were to create a kilowatt hour would be 53.1 cents a gallon". A cost of production in a 25,000,000 plant located in Winnipeg. "Such a plant it is estimated would use at annual base of 21,168,000 bushels of wheat at the rate of 69.7 cents a bushel on the wheat consumed." This result is based on the operations of a commercial plant which would use 1,000,000 bushels of wheat a year to produce 10 000 gallons of power alcohol per day at the rate of 1.827 gallons from each bushel of wheat and producing by products at the value of $20 a ton.

But the committee also had before it a report of a Polish engineer, Dr Rotstein on a process, known as the Melle system, used in Europe which is claimed to produce 1.30 cents a bushel on the consumed wheat and would yield at 60 cents a bushel. That is to say, the factory could pay 52 cents a bushel for wheat for conversion into power alcohol if the European process were followed.

Need For Experimentation

The story of the conference indicates, however, that there was wide disagreement among the experts in session on the question and a considerable volume a further argument of the wisdom of conducting more research and further experimentation. It is not only to ascertain whether or not there is a method which would substantially increase the present low grading and harvesting it or, in the alternative the government would have to subsidize the wheat grower.

The conference had before it a report of a Polish engineer, Dr Rotstein on a process, known as the Melle system, used in Europe which is claimed to produce 1.30 cents a bushel on the consumed wheat and would yield at 60 cents a bushel. The story of the conference indicates, however, that there was wide disagreement among the experts in session on the question and a considerable volume a further argument of the wisdom of conducting more research and further experimentation. It is not only to ascertain whether or not there is a method which would substantially increase the present efficient and most economical methods of manufacture and processing. The could be done, as suggested as the conference, is to establish a pilot plant at an estimated cost of $250,000, and again, the figure, it is stated, is a subject of disputation among the experts.

When the magnitude of the wheat problem in Western Canada is taken into consideration, and even though a commercial plant might only take more of one or two million bushels of wheat a year it would seem desirable to spend $250,000 or even more, in a practical effort to solve the problem one way or another, if possible, or otherwise, of such an undertaking.

If only a few million bushels could be used annually for the production of power alcohol, a few million bushels for the production of plastics and several million bushels more in other outlets, the problem would be partially solved. There may solves be a few million bushels more in other outlets, the problem would be partially solved. There may solves be a few million bushels more and practical application of the results of experimentation and these things cannot be done without some expenditure.

Australian Inventor

Has Responsible For Doctor Used Old Method Diagnosis Illness

The Victoria Office Journal recorded: That an Australian mining engineer, Franklin G Barnes, developed the high engineering device which defeated the German magnetic mine measure to British shipping early in the war.

The Journal said Barnes was in England in November 1939, when the first magnetic mine was recovered. At that time many British ships were being sunk by that method. Six days later the Journal said, Barnes had specifications for a device whereby the mines could be neutralized by passing electric cables around ships.

Quality Shopping In London

British Develop Selective Ability Shown Clothes Were Buttoned

London is famous the world over for the workings of fashion under the rationing of clothing, the big system has worked that. The country over women in England ordinarily bought items amounting to one pound, ten shillings a year. The Government decided to cut the number of clothing coupons down to some 66 coupons' worth in a year.

What can a woman get for 66 coupons? A coat takes 14 of them, a woolen dress 11, a pair of shoes seven, a blouse or cardigan five. A short seven, shoes five a pair, stockings two, a pair of gloves three. A yard of woolen material bought to be made up three coupons. Sewing silk or garters and edgments to buy.

Limiting only the number of garments a woman may buy and not the expenditure per garment has already had its effect. Many women defer purchases as against a multiplicity of purchases at lower prices.

The coupon system already begins to make its mark on the designs of the London couturiers. Their classes have smooth surfaces and clean waves to stand some and stretch and to avoid any catching of surface threads. Difficult patterns are rejected. Trimmings must be standardized in joining and matching of seams. Small patterns cut into for less yard, ugh.

Chemical cuts are bought which look as good and wear as well as the cuts like which has been increasingly used during the past season in fine textures it again does not use too much fabric. Jackets will be slightly shorter in cut.

United Grain Growers Ltd.

Winnipeg, Sept 10 1941 R. W. Law President of United Grain Growers Limited today issued a statement on behalf of the Board of Directors of that company and of the local boards in western districts which handle farmers' co-operative elevator business. The statement says in part:

It is becoming more evident every day that western wheat farmers are inadequate for the satisfactory maintenance of agricultural production and western Canada's economic welfare for full government power at the earliest possible moment to bring about an adjustment. We realize farmers are suffering not only from reduced production caused by a drouth but their conditions and by their sympathies with the government's policy of wheat acreage reduction they are suffering from increased cost of living and operation due to the rise of prices in 1940. The fact that farmers' purchasing power is relatively greater than it was in the same months in which basic wheat prices were fixed by existing business in industry and in the retail trade, and a more adequate income is now farmers have to pay more for what they buy and sell, is also a matter of record.

We believe that the most possible method of making such relief effective and useful would be a considerable increase in the base of acreage payments for wheat by the Canadian Wheat Board. The Board of Directors of United Grain Growers Limited sets out such an increase as far back as August 1st. It now feels its necessity however, because of subsequent developments, to put forward a suggestion for an alternative basis. If an increase in the government basis of payment is found to make such relief effective. Also it is that owing to low basis which has existed in the past, many farmers in Wheat Board payments would only partially benefit from such increase. A graduated increase in payments is needed, it would be necessary to supplement it by direct relief with respect to a large volume of wheat which cannot be delivered delivered to the Canadian Wheat Board this year but which is farmed for purposes of otherwise, to secure the open market, by feeding to their own farms or by sale to neighbors for feeding purposes. To farmers so disposing of their wheat, or to those who have had low crop returns, the basis increase in Wheat Board payments on non-delivered wheat would not either be a return or an inadequate benefit.

Nevertheless, it is clear that it is not in the best interests that the Board needs to be asked to make any further or supplemental recommendations to Canada's basis of selling on the Board of Grain Commissioners. Such a request would be a direct encouragement to the Canadian Wheat Board to pay out but what

An Important Role

Crashing around in an attic or basement amid the dust and dirt to ferret out old garments which can be refashioned, content themselves and numerous articles of all sorts which can be patched and made to look like new for re-sale or storage of metal and wiring which may be turned inside to further try for reassurance into valuable materials may not be spectacular, but it will hasten the day when the armed forces of paganism will be overwhelmed and will certainly play an important role in winning the war.

It may not seem very heroic to turn over that junk pile in the farm yard to sort out scrap iron and metallic waste, to save bones and rags and waste yet men and women and even children who are doing these very things are performing a very real and patriotic service for their country. They are doing something that is vital and essential for the successful prosecution of the war. They are hastening the more spectacular work of the fighting forces in the field and of the men and women who are working in the mines and behind production lines in factory and workshop. They are providing some of the materials needed to manufacture bombs and ships and planes and many of the commodities they themselves and members of their families require to conserve materials which are difficult to obtain or of which there is an acute shortage.

So, the salvage campaign which is now being prosecuted throughout the length and breadth of the land is not spectacular but it is highly important and as the war progresses and the demands upon the nation's resources increase increasingly apparent. Hence, the necessity for more concentrated effort. Hence the necessity for conserving for use, many articles which are condemned effort. Hence the necessity for conserving for use, many articles which are condemned as useless and which in times of peace have been regarded as junk and waste material which in times of peace have been regarded as junk and waste material which in times of peace have been regarded as junk and waste material

A free people must INVEST in its own FREEDOM

A Message FROM THE WAR SAVINGS COMMITTEE, OTTAWA

The help of every Canadian is needed for Victory.

In these days of war the Government, which operates for a nation in one sense, is a business in another.

A reduction in personal spending is more than compensated for by the increase in demand for goods by outside buyers and money and materials left in the country to winning the war. The all-out effort, which Canada and many others, demands this self-denial of each of us.

Invest in War Savings Certificates the dollars you don't need to spend. After the war, they can be cashed in with interest. Spend less NOW so that you can save more LATER. Only in this way the materials will be available for the things you need. There is no price too high for freedom.

Three Simple Regular Methods of Saving

PAYROLL SAVINGS PLAN — Persons regularly employed purchase from membership cards on which are recorded the deductions of any amount from their classes of deferred pay, in an allotment, authorized by them a cash ticket in the largest possible multiple of $4 in favour of The Receiver General of Canada, for the purchase of War Savings Certificates, to be made good in your name and mailed you direct.

SUPPORT THE WAR WEAPONS DRIVE IN YOUR COMMUNITY

Money must not only in Canada will soon conduct a War Weapons Drive. You will be asked to put all you've got behind the campaign to raise money for munitions. Canada must equip its armed forces and those of its allies with the weapons they need to win the war. Canada must produce more planes, more guns, more tanks, more ships than ever before, if we are to put your victory before winning the Victory.

Campaigns And Control

During the past year Canadians have been treated to a lot of campaigns—all, or nearly all related to the war effort.

The people of the country have been asked to support campaigns for recruiting, for war charities, for the Red Cross Society for salvage of waste for conservation of certain food products, for required overtime, for funds to assist Air Raid Victims, for thrift, for saving in various forms, for investment in War Savings Certificates and War Loans and for other objectives.

In addition to all these campaigns, Canadians are experiencing the imposition of control measures and restrictions which, more and more are affecting the daily life, the customs and the habits of the people. In partial measure prices of some commodities are being controlled; certain articles have been rationed, the consumption of others restricted, and in other directions regulations are being imposed designed to prevent undue advances in prices and to direct various commodities and articles from the ordinary channels of personal commercial pursuits to those of the great task in hand that of waging Total War Against Hun.

Nor has the task been borne of these campaigns, these control measures, these restrictive regulations. Indeed as the war effort becomes more extended, as it must necessarily be before we may pause longly for the goal, the people of this country must expect more conservation campaigns, more control of prices, more restrictive measures. It can scarcely be otherwise if we are to win the campaigns which have been instituted during the past 12 months will be repeated continued and intensified, with possibly the addition of some new ones during the next 12 months. It can be anticipated that all the price controls now in effect will be continued with probably an extension into new fields during the next year. It is to be considered very likely that all restrictive measures now operating will be maintained and that new measures, hardly yet contemplated will supplement those now in effect.

* * *

Appreciation Is Necessary

In keeping with the fundamental doctrines of democratic rule, no few the government has largely placed the war effort on a voluntary basis. With some few individual exceptions, the people of this country of ours have approved the policy and have responded consequently to the extent that they have appreciated the necessity for sacrificing of their own free will in order that victory may be made to predominate the prerogatives of individual freedom and liberty.

Up to the present the powers which have been vested in the various control boards set up by the government have been used sparingly and with discretion and this is a wise policy in peace, as long as common and voluntary action can bring necessary results. And this voluntary action will continue to be secured so long as educational campaigns are conducted with sufficient effectiveness to ensure that the people of this country will be fully aware of and appreciate the necessity of military control in essential and appreciate the necessity of military control in essential and appreciate the necessity of military measures and be to be imposed it has been because of the selfishness of a few individuals or a group of one or two isolated concerns or industries.

Public opinion unquestionably is firmly behind continuance of the war effort, in all its phases on a voluntary basis, so long as it results in economical and efficient prosecution of the war. The people, however, will not be tolerant of individuals or organized groups who take advantage of war conditions to enact undue profits for themselves and thereby concentrate the difficulties under which the rank and file of the population are obtaining their burdens. In that event, more control and greater restrictions will not only be condoned but commended and supported by the people.

* * *

Serve Moral Purpose

These campaigns to give to this charity, to support that cause or to aid that other effort have considerably greater value than the immediate objective they are designed to serve. They serve a moral as well as a material purpose. They are bringing home to the Canadian a deeper consciousness of the fact that there really is a war. They serve to impress upon his or her mind that their is a serious business at stake.

The war is knocking at the Canadian's back door. It is knocking harder every day. It is knocking with accelerating insistence and persistence. The door must be opened wider and the stranger admitted. It must be done voluntarily, lest another and a more unwelcome stranger gain admittance and take possession, a stranger that might not be easily ejected.

Let us, therefore, gird up our loins, put on shield and buckler and go out to fight the good fight with all our might. Let us do it cheerfully, with all the power, the energy, the initiative and the will that freedom has conferred upon us.

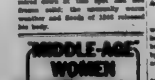
Had To Be Supreme

Head Master Of English School Knew What Was Necessary

King Charles II. was once paying a visit to Dr Busby head master of West Minster School, and the doctor introduced through the royal party his hat on his head. while His Majesty walked complacently behind him with his own hat under his arm. When the King was taking his leave at the door, the doctor, with great humility, thus addressed the King: "I hope Your Majesty will excuse my want of respect in your Majesty but if the boys were to imagine a greater man than the kingmen than myself, I should never be able to rule them."

Reduced By Death

In northern Siberia in 1926, a boy, born normally appeared on the surface of the Indigirka river. Some 30,000 years before, he had mixed down at that spot and had frozen solid; the unusually severe weather and floods of 1926 released him body.



Letters Of Celebrities

Price Per One Written By Churchill In Ten Bullets

For a letter written by Winston Churchill when he was a young candidate for election in 1902 the buyer must pay $146, according to the price catalogue published by Myers & Co. in London, giving the ruling quotations for autographs. A letter of Charles Dickens letter is listed at $29.65. An autograph signed by Richard VIII., now Duke of Windsor will bring $13.35. In the musical realm Wagner commands the highest price with a $70 letter, compared with $50 for Verdi, $40 for Rossini, $30 for Offenbach at $5. Nelson rates high at $60, for a letter about a pension, while Napoleon's Highlander's autograph is only $6.

Shows The Difference

Why Records Show Germans And Canadians Tramps Into Shoulder

Weeks of the Battle of Russia have thrown into clear relief the inherent difference between the German and Russian military education. German shock troops are drilled in isolated efficiency in enemy territory to their utmost. If the unit is broken, the individual soldier is trained to carry on the advance of their own infantry columns. The psychological basis of training varies with the Russian army.

The Red Army is quite different. One of its outstanding characteristics has been the training of soldiers and officers for guerrilla warfare, and the providing of territorial bases for this type of fighting. Stapledon has been in the building many units in dependent of the centre, through the development of initiative, even among the lowest-rank commanding officers. All its units are capable if cut off from the main body, of continuing the battle. When the army is forced to fall back on prepared positions or reached behind the enemy lines and bests the horned of future guerrilla units that ship in a question of their disguised specially made clothing. Even the Russian soldier even arbitrary can entirely new for turn in this type of fighting; but the Russian is not so well equipped bases to which they can retreat and where they had supplies stored in readiness.

Because of these preparations the German offensive has been able to close up the Pripet marshes in which units that ship in a question of guerrilla bases. The widespread forests of the Ukraine and White Russia are the strongholds of the "irregulars." In some where Red army divisions are now fighting have been encircled these large units divided up into pre-arranged small groups.

In such a guerrilla war ordinary methods of supply are necessarily de feat, and add conceptions of what part supply can play in modern war. Modern warfare the Atlantic state need large supplies of munitions. A Bit Of History

Free Press Recalls Some Prime Minister Churchill's Middle Names

Many still have observed that the Atlantic statement of the Prime Minister and the President was signed by Franklin D. Roosevelt and Winston S. Churchill. The D. is a familiar initial but that W. for the well known. It stands for Spencer and its origin is a bit of history.

Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill is the name of the late Rt. Hon. Lord Randolph Churchill, who was the third son of the ex-6th Duke of Marlborough. And since the marriage in 1689 of John the second daughter of the 1st Duke whose name was John Churchill to Charles Spencer 3rd Earl of Sunderland, the family name of the Duke of Marlborough has been Spencer-Churchill.

The Prime Minister who was born in Blenheim Palace, the estate of the famous Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill. The name Leonard comes from his mother's father Leonard Jerome, an Lowned Jerome, of New York. Lord Randolph married her in 1874 and she survived him by 21 years, having reached behind the enemy lines and bests the horned of future guerrilla units that ship in a question of their disguised specially made clothing. Even the Russian soldier even arbitrary can entirely new for turn in this type of fighting; but the Russian is not so well equipped bases to which they can retreat and where they had supplies stored in readiness.

Makeshift Clothes

Medalled Rising Fashioned Hour In Britain Is Not New

W L. Clark, in the Windsor Magazine London and milk sheets are not rationed in England as the citizens are having these to make dresses it is one way of boosting the conquest by clothing.

Another method is to order bits of stuff for a full mess dress and one-half yards of cloth. People order of pleas bills and get the cloth. They buy both the goods to a tailor who has had a suit made. The Government is to issue eight coupons, but 28 coupons are needed for a suit.

There is nothing new to making clothes from makeshift goods in England. We recall hung in England a half a years ago when there was no war and prosperity was supposed to be fairly good. We saw women in England wearing dresses made from flour sacks and children garbed in paper clothing. And no one was sweating very much about those days less people.

They themselves and all their worldly belongings in a baby carriages and the rest of their children would trudge along the highways seeking a living and never finding it.

The present population of the earth is estimated at about 2,000,000,000.

There's nothing strange about travelling around in baby carriages. They live away from home.

Work Is Appreciated

Women Of Saskatchewan Have Done Much For Red Cross

The county women of Saskatchewan who work for the Red Cross may well be proud of the following total 427 quilts, 1,000 comforters, 1,000 pairs of sheets, 1,000 pillow cases, 1,000 sweaters and 25,000 pairs of mitts for men in uniform. Many of these articles are of the same sweaters with sleeves, V-cut sweaters with sleeves, sleeveless sweaters, long stockings and pairs of gloves and helmets for the women in uniform in Great Britain, for the military transport 39 - 700 pairs of pyjamas, 32,447 bandages and 4,266 triangular bandages for civilians, 33,704 mats of pyjamas and sleepers. 21,288 nightgowns, 288 hospitals, 16,317 shirts, 13,687 quilts and 20,856 sundry garments.

Another generous gift for them in Britain, the Saskatchewan division has supplied since the outbreak of war 16,417 arches for military mits and six farms and military hospitals in the province. Not only the small field comforts and hospital supplies, but much articles to the general equipment was found necessary.

DAUGHTER OF DESTINY

— BY —

Eleanor Atterbury Cullen

In the week that followed Doreen deliberately kept herself too busy to think, too empty to wrestle with the problems that beset her Sometimes she felt that she must scream if she must do. But not so long as there was work in which to bury herself Bombed by bigots, the ache in her heart seemed gone. And might have remained gone but for a chance bit of conversation, forgotten almost as soon as it was spoken.

It was Tuesday morning—a week to the day since Lord Ian Angelo had left Canada. He had come to Ottawa on business in his grand standup of Vare, and had stayed a week at the Chateau Laurier, contributing much to the festival spirit.

He wasn't her own full grained, but none sounding strangely for all. Doreen was standing under a gaslight when Talbot Brasher and George Barnard separated from the cocktail lounge. So inattentively tired, she didn't trust her senses, she thought for a moment that she was dreaming it. But as they stood watching her obviously waiting for her to finish her number, to step down toward them from the platform she finally realized that no dream was this.

"Doreen Roebuck!" Talbot said under cover of the tumult of applause.

"Hello," she enlisted with relief that helped was a natural smile. "Good evening Mr. Barnard."

"What in the world are you doing here?" Talbot demanded abruptly

"Singing. And—" she shrugged at the little laugh got him. "She devil had nothing to do with it. Just necessity."

"But you're supposed to be in school, in San Francisco—studying music!" he protested. "Not—not that!" He glanced around the crowded, smoke-filled room. "Not in this."

Doreen stiffened defensibly. "And what's the matter with this?"

"Well—nothing, of course," he said hastily, "only for you. You don't belong—"

"What I do—"

"Look——" he scowled. "Isn't there some place we can go? I've got to talk to you."

She shook her head. "I can't have any. I'm working. I'm on at 11:30, and she led the way to her own small table hidden by the clusters of potted palms from the rest of the dining room patrons.

"How tell me. What happened?" Talbot demanded as soon as they were seated.

"Nothing that you could answer," Doreen said.

"Then you know what you're up to?"

She shook her head. "Him and she and Mrs. Angelo can tell her."

Barnards grin deepened the scowl on Talbot's face. "Don't be funny. I don't open my face. She has enough to worry about as it is."

"Sir!" she flashed. "Don't you dare tell anyone. You? Tell Mrs. Angelo!"

"There's nothing a man to tell," she shrugged. "I doubted that I didn't. Flung in Vare's life and that the answer I got out the letter it would be. Dismissed made it simpler—for all concerned, I think."

Barnard approved with a nod. "Smart girl. You were right, too."

"But. Vare thinks you are——"

"Pshaw," he's talk about you," she suggested when she could no longer by the sympathetic concern in Talbot's face. "About the play that was."

He face lighted for an instant, then the shadows fell again, as Barnard said, "We open at the Plaza Theatre next Saturday night."

"And probably close the following Monday," Talbot added grimly. "Say, why didn't you tell me you were going to sing? Why didn't you tell anyone?"

Doreen's face hobbled up again, insincerely for the first time in months. "Until the same investigation optimist aren't you, Tal' she teased stopping his hasty protest. "I'll tell you I've been some time! Before mention ago. It won't fail."

Barnard said gravely but Doreen wasn't too sure he really believed that himself.

Tal turned in her her excitement betraying the existence of a moment ago. "Doesn't you ever read it?"

She answered.

"I'll send you a copy. And will you come to the opening?" Drawing them, Barnard took a card from his pocket, he pressed two of them into Doreen's hand. "I want you to. I'd appreciate it, really. Will you promise?"

But she refused. "I'll try."

Then before the two men left Tal said his dark eyes hugs to his thin face. Please don't misunderstand anything I can do to help, Doreen. After all, I hate to see you—this."

She smiled. Who, some ago. And first God her that! Then, she smiled at his brother. "Tal, darling you've got to tell my brother that I'll try to hang 'round,' don't you know."

His hand on her arm tightened affectionately. "You do just that Doreen. Don't you dare not."

"And ." solemnly she glanced from one to the other. "you'll both keep my secret from Vare?"

"Sure will. You're a wise girl I don't see how you managed it so cleverly."

Resting her chin on one hand, Doreen watched them weave a trail through the crowd toward the foyer and the street. Then she sighed, a sad emotion in his grand standup of Vare, but a sigh of relief, too, that at least a school her own problems no matter how

Talbot Brasher sensitive, sensitive, high-strung—was really her friend. Barnard, too, was a friend. Vare, she told herself as gratitude welled up within her in these some of the cold around her heart, a real friend. Something she hadn't had since—well, since Vare left her.

And something she'd probably have great need of sooner or later, but Doreen refused to think of that. Mac'ino made his way toward her now.

"Who were your friends?" he demanded instantly, dropping into the chair Talbot had.

For an instant, Doreen was tempted to feign ignorance but, she decided against the suspicion in John's jealous eyes, and thought better of it

"Talbot Brasher, playwright, and George Barnard, manager-director," she said, and waited for the explosion.

"Why?"

"Running with our young D.A.'s brother now, are you?"

Smiling a little wearily, Doreen stood. She was tired. Not mad chumming with any one's brother And yet Vare left her

"I'm not so sure," his voice only half hid a threat. "I didn't like the looks of that fellow Brasher, and I'm sure Vare wouldn't, either, if he were here."

Master Dave tempter blazed quick and hot in his face, stoning it red, setting his thin lips into a hard line. With an effort at control, he drew a deep breath, changed the mood in a try at mate. "There, I'm sorry, I didn't mean to make you angry, Dean."

Doreen's face was flinty. "Then don't mean to make me angry, Dean."

Malcolm's face flushed, then paled. "Dean, girl, don't—you'd best not say. Doreen was more relieved that the girl brought a message that made me smile, for he saw Talbot and Barnard him gladly

Just what, she wondered as he sat down, was Malcolm's motive, would happen to her if once he let that slip? Like a madman's motive, unfathomable, hostile—Doreen shuddered. And anything, any one in his way, he'd simply interpose to make it less a fool to visit that. Next then, he'd bother nothing, nothing.

Her eyes followed him idly. Then, suddenly, her whole body stiffened. Malcolm was talking to Talbot Brasher either seemed strangely familiar. Talbot's dark head, Malcolm's almost Almond-shaped eyes, and something about the body spoke of kinship. Malcolm was talking to Talbot because he knew Doreen was watching him. Talbot, he knew Doreen was watching him. Talbot, he knew Doreen was watching him. Talbot,

Bridging The Gaps

Economist Horace Limond shows where business is dependent for its welfare on the prosperity of Western agriculture with which hasn't interest the development of the new resources recently devised by the federal government with the object of stiffening resistance to parasitic pests with the dual objective of furthering the war effort and of conserving the millions of the uninformed.

While it must be admitted at the outset that farmers as well as industrial workers and members of urban centres, are consumers and, therefore, to some extent, interested in meeting the cost of transportation which they have to purchase are kept down to a reasonable level and within reach of their purchasing power, yet the former are also vendors of commodities, and that particular type of goods which comprise wholesale necessities for the health and well-being of those consumers who are not directly dependent upon agriculture for their livelihood.

There would be no problem for the government in its efforts to prevent undue advances in the prices of commodities if purely material interests the prices the business received for the foodstuffs and other necessities these men stock in trade and the prices which all consumers, including the farmers have to pay for either necessitates common to all classes of consumers. Perhaps this statement should be modified by stating that the problem for the government, at least would not be so acute.

Unfortunately, for the governments, for the farmers and for all other classes of consumers the parity of prices does not exist. Not only is there too wide a spread between the price the farmer receives for many of his food commodities which he sells in the domestic markets and the price the consumer has to pay for at least some of these commodities, but there is also too great a change between the price the farmer receives for many of his articles which he is unable to produce and the price he receives for those which he does produce.

* * * *

A Dual Problem

This latter disparity in the prices of agricultural and industrial necessities which must be purchased by consumers of all classes is reflected in recently published figures which showed that the wholesale price index for July of this year stood at 91 while the living cost index was 120 as compared with the standard of 100 for prices in 1926.

While it is true that within the past year the wholesale farm rum munity price index has advanced from approximately 64 it will be observed that it is still 29 points below the general wholesale price index. In other words, the farmer is handicapped to the time of 29 points on the dollar of his purchasing power as compared with industry generally, if the 1926 standard is accepted as a reasonable indicator.

Apart altogether from the question of prices which the farmer should receive for those of his commodities which are being and to be exported to Great Britain to assist the Front line effort against the forces of aggression, the federal government is faced with a dual problem, therefore, in correcting economic conditions over domestically sold commodities. If the welfare of agriculture is to be accorded the merit it deserves, the margin between the sale and purchase prices of farm commodities in the domestic market must be narrowed and the margins between retail prices of agricultural and industrial necessities for the consumer must be reduced and, in both cases, with the object of improving the farmer's position and without impairing the interests of consumers generally.

* * * *

Voluntary Move Desirable

Something has already been done in the field of curtailment of the differential between farm and consumer prices of farm commodities by legislation designed to reduce costs of distribution. An illustration of this is the ban on closed bread and production of special deliveries of bread to consumers. So far, only the fringe of the field has been touched. In these directions much more could be done. To quote an instance, the price the consumer has been surveyed to death." A considerable contribution towards this problem could be effected by voluntary effort on the part of processors and retailers with the co-operation of the consumers. Savings which could thus be effected should be divided fairly between the producer and the consumer rather than narrowing the margin between farm and consumer prices by farm commodities. An educational campaign among consumers should bring home to consumers the fact that such a move is in their own interests. Unless the consumers and industry are prepared to make these concessions voluntarily, they may expect more control measures along these lines.

The problem of narrowing the margin between prices of farm commodities and other necessities for all consumers, is not a matter for the city, in more interests, but it is one which must be solved, not only in the interests of the farmer but of the country as a whole and particularly for the benefit of the western agricultural province. More important than dealing with this specific objective is view may be expected with the co-ordination of new commodity price controls vested in the Prices and Trade Board under the finance department and of the controls of essential war materials by the munitions and supply department.

Civilian Casualties

Bank Words To Ensselle Nazi Murders, Seem Partially Weak

One of the most ruthless features of this terrible time is the readiness with which hangman seems to be pushing to the destructive tide long down moral ramparts that it has taken long centuries to erect in the last year things were bad enough, but he seem to be here exhausted either by the census of the totalitarian tyrants or by the mass blood lettings of the past two months he now accept without protest descriptive terms that gloss over the bloodiest scenes.

A London despatch summing up the month slaughter in Britain says that "civilian casualties" from January 1 1940, to June 30 1941 totalled 41,980 killed and 53,978 wounded so severely that they had to be hospitalized.

And this is to them in Britain's homeland, how far away and long ago seem Hitler mass executions and concentration camps, the point of which has been to brutalize the minds of the people to the point of callousness.

What a contrast between what a single terrorized citizen and Nazis protests such cowardly slaughter. But in the 18th century the premeditated murder of defenceless women and children would have been called massacre at least True enough the Nazi terrorists have taught these amateurs to talk about, but when it did have but-bloodied bullets and bombs to work with. Americans, or the progress of Kultur? the words used to describe them very words that denoted crime not war.

When Heroda of the skies now hill Rotterdam and Coventry and Belgrade to a cold-blooded general staff order the destruction of Warsaw, they have lapped unbelievers from the tongue of every statesman and publicist in the civilized world during the generation ago

When 11,000 human beings done to death in 15 months on city streets and country lanes number four-fifths as many as the American losses in the whole of the first world war, when 3,000,000 Russian soldiers and civilians have been killed, and they died in combat on the field of honor with arms in their hands and not in cold blood after they had ceased be intimidated. They were slain by human monsters of their own. The "civilian casualties" find save the mark! were murdered in cold blood, and by the order of men who take the mask of Christ off the bloody murderers.—Chicago Daily News

Booklet For Army

Sets Out Principles To Be Followed By Officers

The British Army Council has authorized a booklet for officers call ed "The Soldier and Welfare" giving effects to both effort to assist lays down the following principles:

Welfare is concerned with the whole needs of men body mind and spirit.

There can be no good leadership without good welfare

Welfare does not mean pet treats and happy and contented men

Care of men is opposite to pampering and if properly understood, will foster self-reliance

Men will endure hardships cheerfully, but discontent will arise if they are not equally treated, and lack understanding or "red tape."

Every man is entitled to be treated with courtesy, tolerance ordeny and restrictions should be explained, and he should be told why he is commanded.

Men are easily upset by what they imagine to be unfair treatment and inequality of services.

Welfare is the sweet enemy of army morale.

All who have visited Lake Minnewanka in Rocky Mountains Park that Lake Minter has the greatest fascination at times to be found on the southwest shore of the lake. Here Mr. Minter has given his original name to the lake, a name which must have resulted in great numbers

Each year Jack Minter to make his annual visit to the lake to these rocks, and naturally has long regarded the lake as his own. But instead of summer playing his garden and selling these rocks he puts them to a better use. He has presented to his county who owns rather than of the lake. The result is that tens of thousands of his choice flowers are the means of starting other gar dens.

Jack Minter commenting on his gift to the park said: "I get a great deal of joy out of motoring through the country and seeing bank of irises in the spring. I thought that this means of their being started.

Jack Minter is entitled to be treated as a friend," says Jack Minter, "but that lasts only a few hours, whereas, a flower lasts for years, every year will be in bloom for the pleasure of future generations, long after I am dead and gone."

"What!" he shouted. "You have the impudence to try to make me a fire for my daughter's hand? I might as well tell you that you could have drowned yourself in the pump."

The suitor sighed wearily.

"Well that's all right," he said. "You see, I had another message to deliver in the same building."

Hitler May Have Forgotten That Medic Name Somerville Watson

It is taking some interest in the final moves of Lieutenant Somerville Watson, the Canadian medical officer who is to be executed by the Germans for alleged espionage. Watson is a graduate of Manitoba Medical College and has had previous experience with the Germans. The army was concentrated at the time by a brutal campaign against tuberculosis and Watson, a captain in the Canadian army medical corps, was one of the officers who assisted in the campaign. Hitler himself was said to have been present at the banquets of war making and Hitler who was then a corporal might well have looked up his history books

CHAPTER XXIII

Talbot sent the copy of his play the next day The Daily Packet was waiting for her when she went to work that afternoon. And Talbot himself appeared later that evening, all smiling for he had left little take behind the potted palms his fine face eager, his voice husky with excitement.

"Have you had time to read it yet Thelma?" he asked the moment she stepped into the chair opposite him.

She shook her head "Not yet I'm saving it until I get home. It's too large here."

"I hope you like it." His eyes pleaded shyly from behind his spectacles' forehead. "Though you probably won't understand what I'm driving at Perhaps some really

"I'm sure I will," and slipped her work-worn hand over his cold one as he patted it from the fear she knew hovered even him like a pall. Then, suddenly, she felt that she needed to talk about it, she asked, "How did the rehearsal go last night?"

"Not bad. There's magnificent. Some of the dialogue is pretty fine. Dale thinks he can round out the part better once we get it to New York."

Dale! The name like a banner unfurled in the face of time I've had mentioned him. Desperately, she checked the tremor that roused through her.

"How is Dale?" she tried to ask naturally.

"Oh, fine Working like a dog. I don't see much of him. Too busy, both of us to be civil, I guess We live on the same house and that's about all. Broke up after rehearsals usually and taken Vera home She depends on him a lot too. Good looking man, Dale Good level judgment Don't know what he'd do without his secretary Does everything to him."

Agnes Vare and Dale Fortunately, her imagination reshaped up the picture leaving roboticrats together. Dale's splendid head, Vera's dainty prettiness, the powerful coupe supper just for two somewhere

Drawing a deep breath, she steadied her voice "Dale's doing very well in his work, isn't he?"

"Yes, indeed." She's got something Dreams. And they're finding it out at last down in the Dale's office. They know it in other spots that don't count Dale's healthy for them, too," he added gravely "If they just don't bump him off That's what worries me He gives in the course of supply for his evidence and his witnesses, you know That's not exactly safe."

Thelma smiled "I'll take a stone-palpitating to Tid getting a close-up picture of Dale's life. And get the best to-date

Here is the interesting other Hollywood's wind, at the studio, and the staff is very much keen on the street for fear of any publicity. Dale's bachelor life and his manners, particularly his London his own

"I like!"

"Under our front door she might Grand Some time ago I beg I'm Lay off or else Me signature No envelope Not even hospitable Dale had it checked.

And Jo's Lay off I mean" Tid laughed "Dale" She turned around that very night and went back to the office Worked until

It was late and dancers were almost gone, when Thelma, turning from the floor for a last round of drinks It left Donna and Tid at most alone. Donna was sitting at a first step to the drumsy music

"Your new boy friend is the limit," Donna drawled at her once as they waited for an answer. "I always said I'd like him."

"You're so slouch, yourself," and when he was alone Tid saw the words of his arms realized that this was the first time she'd really enjoyed dancing with the night Dale and Vara had

Dale and Ireland Maine glowering at her from the door of his office Instantly her own fears intensified, sensing in fact that was part of her job dance-up with pal-ness. He reason for Maxine to look as if she'd—

But Tid had followed her glance to Dale's "Is the handsome guy with your pass?"

"Yes," Donna, you mean?" she said casually at least she hoped it sounded casual "Just the owner of this place, that's all."

The dance ended and Tid led her back to the table.

"Why are you afraid of him?" he asked abruptly.

"Afraid of Donna" stared at him. Was her expression that transparent? "I'm not afraid of him!"

"It's true isn't it? You're scared to death of him."

She forced a laugh. "Don't be ridiculous Why should I be?"

"I'm sure I don't know." The searched her face "But you are, and I still say this is no place for you."

Turning from him she began to watch Maxine. Tid went on calmly "I don't like the set up I think you've got you a job somewhere else Let me go tell that guy you're leaving with me."

"Oh, no. Please" A detaining hand on his arm. She forced him back into the chair from which he'd half-risen "Where else could I find work like this? I'm not afraid except the kind of danger you're not thinking of. Please, Tid, don't let me go. My sister—"

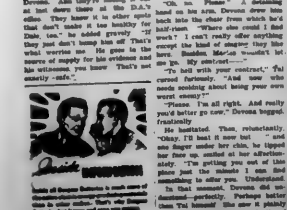
"To hell with your contract, Tid broke in roughly "Your sister needs nothing about being your own worst enemy."

"Please. I'm all right. And really you'd better go now." Donna begged frantically.

He hesitated. Then, reluctantly, "Okay. I'll do that I must but" He ran finger under her chin, he tipped her face up, smiled at her intently "I'll be back in a few minutes. Please just the minute I can find something to offer you. Understand?"

In that moment, Donna did understand—perfectly. Perhaps better than Tid himself. She saw it plainly in his eyes heard it in the depths of his voice. He was falling in love with her. Like the sheets from an electric charge, the knowledge smashed into her mind. And in the same blinding moment she realized that she loved him. Not liked!

"I'll be back" he was saying now



Iron Oil Fields

Industry Stated From The Very Hardest Days

Late of loam to the Axis powers is a serious blow to their colossal economy and the stemming of control by Great Britain and Russia of every coal and to them. For the industry from ache on a bother made and tanks to some extent it may be the same for Great Britain, but it is a more direct value by reason of its oil production.

Russia, with the record largest oil production in the world, 23,000,000 barrels in 1940 has ample supplies for herself Great Britain is largely responsible for the development of the iron oil industry through the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company which whose enormous cover most of the southwestern part of the country Th- oil is conveyed by pipe-line to Abadan, with six tanks by the British navy in the immediate of the enemy

Iran has had an oil industry from the very earliest days. Max Bak is his book "The Fascinating Oil Business." Abadan had a refinery with 150-ft stills as to its manner in which a vein oozing from sprang and how it was refined by separating its heavier and lighter constituents in towers perforated with holes. The towers gradually filled with oil and manifold, fed to Marcus' offices. Then the refinery was sold to the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, which has developed the industry almost fortunately into the oil's summand it must

"Let's get out of this hot" and pushed the hill white button The panel slid open as if moved by hands.

Instinctively Donna shuddered at the sight of the dark passage-way, sinister about that, too, she felt, but Tid was already and the button was holding a little power as they waited for the panel to slide back.

Still, for all the unusual groundfloor, really It was Joe with the big mouthpiece and the cigar in the office outside Donna breathed a sigh of relief as she sank back against the cushioned seat and Tid and eyes long agood a smile when Joe dolly Donna's cheek and kissed her lips brought the huge car to a step before the Brownstone's modest doorway

"Thanks so much, Joe," she began.

But he held a heavy hand on her knee "Not so fast, Donn. I want to talk to you for a minute."

Leaning forward he closed the glass panel between them and the chauffeur's chauffeurship and Tid looked at her profile against the window and the forests Despite all efforts of Parisian health authorities, the streets of the city were filthy.

Nazis Largely Imaginary

But People Do Not Take Time For Gems At Meals

The hop-about-nothing tempo of our life today is probably the prime cause of the growing neglect of gems, in the opinion of Dr. Frederick Pelle Review The taking of food has been raised to the rank of a fine art, and the present century convention has been displayed by speed Gems are not suited to the modern tempo which is all right if you happen to think of it and to have more interest in space than meat.

Actually the need for a rush at meals is largely imaginary and grows out of the acceleration in things generally There are few persons in the world who have time for grace, and these are days when it is considered smart to be late. The world is good for men's minds.

Good Enough To Repeat

London Paper Found Letter Was Printed Years Ago

History repeats itself, sometimes rather too literally. I printed recently says the London Spectator, a letter in picturesque English, which had reached me from Hong Kong. It appears that the same letter reached another London paper some 14 years ago, and one or two of my correspondents have remembered reading it. But it is good enough all the same, to stand on being once a decade.

A. A. Watson Wait is Man Who Developed Saskatchewan

Wheat is none of it. A Watson appointed to the New Year's Honors to honorary only a few persons have been had been made a Companion of the Bath. They were but really very much enlightened by the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool Studio Advisor on Telecommunications to the Ministry of Aircraft Production. "Radiolocation" had not been invented when Watson left school, of other waves unsuffered by fog, cloud, or darkness, which are consequently used not for beyond the limit of our chorus. Any solid object such as an aircraft or a ship that is in the path of these waves reflects back the signal, which announces to the operating station its presence in the air or on the water. The navy uses radiolocation to detect enemies in the same way as it is used by the Royal Air Force.

Nazi Propaganda Effort Failed To Get Results In Britain

The British Broadcasting Corporation told how a Nazi propaganda effort to Norway backfired

It seems Norwegians were encouraged to buy British goods, they advertised as showing "the great devastation German bombers have caused in London."

At first Norwegian audiences were horrified at the apparent callousness. Then it was recognized, from letters inadvertis appearing in the columns, that the stories showed little destruction in the German city of, below zero in Tuttenstone Park, on February 8, 1939.

"I have suffered considerably from a cough digestive system and have found Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and Honey the best relief that ever, thanks to using it, I am entirely free from my former trouble. I can highly recommend it to all who suffer from coughs, colds, bronchitis, etc." Mrs. Thomas Bellefeuille, Penetanguishene, Ont.

Above each pictured key is its music staff note, so that you can see at once what note to play to read music quickly.

Then you can speed up your learning of popular pieces this way. Instead of learning the notes of the treble and bass, sometimes difficult to do, you learn the chords in your right hand and harmonizing chords with your left.

What chords to play? You quickly learn these by number which corresponds to numbered keys on your piano chart. Use your treble "Hi-tone" chords with our chord chart. Then you have your chords (and a few more) throughout the piece.

Have the fun of playing the piano! Our 15-page instruction book, showing piano keyboard chart, shows you how to read music, play chords in every key. Also three pieces for practice.

"Going Back"—2.

Two weeks ago I tried to show that the belief in some sort of mysterious process which led to "going back" or "running out" of crop varieties was ill-founded. So far as wheat and barley are concerned, I believe that the necessity for renewal of seed is due to volunteering, mechanical mixing and occasional natural crossing. The proposal to discontinue sending all generations but the first of registered seed of self-fertilized crops is a recognition of this principle. So long as wheat and barley stocks will pass field and seed inspection, it is needless to worry about new seed.

Hybrid corn seed must be renewed each year because it loses its vigour in its immediate hybrid ancestry. If we were to produce hybrid seed of wheat, and we could do so at a cost of about $100 per bushel, it would be more vigorous and productive than the standard varieties, and it would "go back" in succeeding generations just as hybrid corn does. There is nothing mysterious about this.

Oats may be different. It seems likely that here wild oats may increase to the point where removal of seed is necessary. This might be called going back, running out, or anything you like.

These important imports in Scotland from Scotland are [illegible] whiskey and seed potatoes. The Scotsmen drift to the east coasts, whiskey down to Leamon, it is consumed, and [illegible] are brought in because Dudley produces "no Scots." This going back is not to the common [illegible] of certain manufacturing the importation of Scots does exist. But, after all, potato values are not easily

The Forgotten Route

There are some peculiar anomalies in connection with what is known as the Hudson Bay route, comprising the Hudson Bay Railway and the port of Churchill and its facilities and H. S. Potter President of the Canada-to-the-Bay Association, was rendering a public service to the people of Western Canada recently when he drew attention to some of them, and, inferentially, aroused a warning when he said "Many people in Canada, no doubt, have that it has passed the stage of linking Superior with the West should now take that as read for the case."

When Mr. H. S. Potter wrote the article in which the foregoing quotation appeared he had just returned from participation in the ninth annual Canadian National Railways excursion to Churchill. On that trip, he noted some peculiar things and made some observations on what he saw and heard which not only prove to be interesting but which are of sufficient importance to warrant some head being paid by those who have already actually affected the people of the west.

After the outbreak of the war when it was found that apparently the facilities of the Bay route were not to be used for commercial purposes or for more effective prosecution of the war, apprehension was felt, and expressed in many quarters that the readiest might be allowed to disintegrate and the steel rails to rust or be removed for other purposes and the whole system be permitted to run down at heels. Fortunately this is not the case for Mr. Potter records as a fact that "the roadbed is in good shape and the passing tracks are being maintained to a high degree of proficiency."

That and the fact that the 2,500,000 bushels of wheat which has been in storage in the Churchill terminal facilities for a couple of years is in a state of first class preservation, despite rumors to the contrary at present allay some satisfaction and are matters for congratulation.

* * * *

Annual Assurance

But what evidently disturbed Mr Potter and amazed the 150 Americans from 21 States of the Union who made the trip was the fact that those facilities which are evidently being maintained in first class condition are not being used and especially at a time when they might naturally be expected to be utilized to relieve congestion in other Canadian ports burdened by heavy war traffic.

When American visitors voiced their surprise that these splendid facilities are not being used, said Mr Potter "the only excuse we could find to offer was that officials in charge of ships and convoys would not sanction the use of the Bay."

Based on what he appeared in regard as conclusive evidence, Mr Potter is apparently of the opinion that there is no valid reason why heavy wheat should not be handled from one end of the Bay route and for the other for use in Great Britain could not be handled via the Bay route and for the greater part of the year. Incidentally in submitting his opinion, he explained the theory still held in the east and perhaps by some people in the west that navigation through Churchill is restricted the greater part of the year by climatic conditions.

"I was given to understand" said Mr Potter, "that at the present time Great Britain is using a very considerable amount of timber that is being hauled all the way across the continent and shipped from ports that are already highly congested. Officials at Churchill state positive assertions that such shipments could be handled through Churchill in almost any amount and that such shipments could be continued during the greater part of the winter months."

* * * *

Should Prove Claims

The interesting, not to say informative statement that shipments could be made during the greater part of the winter will, undoubtedly, come as a surprise even to many in the west who have been closely associated to the development of the $56,000,000 canal to follow its fortunes, or misfortunes, to date. Mr Potter gives chapter and verse for this assertion in the following words

"It appears that ice forms in the estuary of the Churchill River some time in the month of November but if a consignment of wheat in any amount of money was spent for a breakwater to deflect the ice from the dredged channel shape could come up to the dock without any difficulty at all.

"Even when shore ice would impede the movement of such ships, the assertion was made, that it would be a very simple matter to lay tracks on the ice whose lumber loading could be continued all winter and the cargo be navigated through the Bay and the Straits, which, apparently is twelve months in the year."

Perhaps as long as the war is in progress, little can be done, under the circumstances, to encourage use of this short route between Canada and Europe but the people of the West who fought for these facilities for 56 years and who have paid the bill, will be well advised not to forget its existence and whenever opportunity occurs to press its claims for proper consideration then it is now receiving so that, to quote Mr Potter, "some day the benefits of this route will accrue to the lasting benefit of the whole of the Dominion of Canada."

Color Pictures Help Fix Best Time For Picking Fruit

Color photography in California is helping determine just when and how to pack, store and ship fruit.

Several crates of plums or pears are picked at a given stage of ripeness and photographed. Loaded into refrigerator cars, some are put in the warmest place others in the coldest place available. Temperatures are recorded automatically all the way across the continent. On arrival in New York the fruit is photographed again giving a record of what happened to the color en route.

The experiment is expected to enable growers to select the proper degree of ripeness for picking and the best temperature for shipping.

Canadian Research

Taking Advantage Of Lessons Learned From The War

Through a vast army of scientific workers on the battle fronts of the world, Britain is taking advantage of immense machine tools, chemical equipment and other resources of Canada and Canadian experts visit Britain to see how the equipment they have designed stands up under actual war conditions. Similar progress of British experts come to Canada to see the designs and instruments produced here.

"In this way thousands of artificial aids have been found since the great army which spreads from Britain to Burmah and now was the United States," he continued.

"Production is being directly with Canada and it is the duty of Mr. Lawrence and the need for the co-ordination of every effort in this crisis reality that a mistake cannot be made even once.

"No matter how good a weapon or an instrument may be," he said "if we haven't time to produce enough of it, it is rather use one which you have rather than risk the victory or defeat the lives of millions of people on the issue."

That was the situation at the beginning of the war but it has changed to two years Canadian research and production are going ahead at fast and actual results of instruments and weapons which have been so great that "complete confidence" in the common workmanship has gradually grown up.

"Now Britain knows that if Canada says one of certain things it will be ready on a certain date she will be capable of a certain quality and quantity of production and it will be so," he said.

The change was greatly aided by the missions of technical and research experts both British and Canadian. British experts when they see the progress being made in Canada and the number and thousands of items which on paper may have appeared mediocre or unessential they are often amazed he said. "They go back to make recommendations which simply mean the difference between the constant readjustment and production."

Accurate Records

Made Possible By Cameras Of R.A.F.

Britain's R.A.F. coastal command, the world's biggest users of photographic materials, declare the secret of its camera every 60 seconds of the year. In the month of April the command took photographs at the rate of 360,000 a year using 100 broadcast night and day and the shots of bromide paper. All the material is sent at vast quantities for expert is supplied without difficulty by Britain's own manufacturers.

Not only does the command record every movement of the enemy coast in the narrow sea but it keeps the eagle eye of its cameras upon enemy ships looking for naval targets. The pilots are themselves highly trained in the observation of ships and when in doubt a photograph rushed to the naval authorities for identification is enough to ensure that all is quickly brought in for examination by the contraband control.

Speed Creates Problem

Stronger Material Must Be Found For Construction Of Aircraft

The faster modern aircraft fly, the sooner some new and stronger material must be found to replace the present aluminum alloy used in construction of all-metal planes, in the opinion of Dr John E. Younger, who now the year of aviation's coveted award, the Sperry of St. Louis gold medal. He has concluded that aluminum alloy will have to be replaced by a stronger material, possibly steel to withstand the terrific stress of higher-speed flying.

Quantity Shipments

For many decades, Queen Victoria would never eat fruit inside Portsmouth, because, according to her royal reception there early in her reign, her household received a bill for the carpet laid down for her entry into the city building.

A Good Idea

Using Hitler's Real Name In Propaganda Might Break His Power

The Overseas Daily Mail carries this suggestion by Sefton Delmer, Chanbrook Kirst

Hitler started life with the name of Schickelgruber. It was not until he was 40 that he took the name of Hitler! Why for the Germans is now a name invested with magical power. Why not restore to propaganda the name of Schickelgruber? A systematic use of it in our foreign broadcasts might do more to break the undoubted power of the other name abroad.

To Speed Up Workers

The British government has introduced "pep" methods in a campaign to speed up the slow workers. Factory managers broadcast talks to the workers and posters urging increased output have been locked up factory walls. A placard in a bomb-filling station read "You make the bombs we'll drop them."

The Helen Cure

Unique Method Adopted In Britain To Treat Nervous Troubles

The R.A.M.C. specialists in psychological medicine and a military hospital write on a topic of general interest to the British Medical Journal. They have been dealing with cases of neurotic breakdown caused or in part precipitated by the unusual and stress of bombing such as gunfire shells bursts exploding bombs in the palace and dive bombing."

Contrary to what many people may think in the first condition of suffering a cure does have been found that a repetition or imitation of war scenes may actually avert the patient back to a sense of composure and control and that treatment has been successfully applied first with a portable field gun and the bombing and stress and later with the help of the R.A.F. by the use of genuine plane records of actual warfare.

Patients are also cured by the method of much of what is an undoubted fact, that other people have grown used to such distressing experiences associated with them. Men moved and children in our badly bombed cities have developed a new sense of life. They are in better mental form than those of the first week. Plenty Of Energy Needed

When Postmen Carry Heavy Load Up Flights Of Stairs

According to a report of the medical branch of the British postoffice on stair climbing by postmen in big cities of Britain one of the London Daily Mail, a postman's maximum load is 36 pounds. He runs one and a half times more energy per minute going up and down stairs than on the level. One postman climbed 1 649 steps every morning—nearly the height of the Eiffel Tower. An average postman climbs at the rate of 80 stairs a minute 40 up, 40 down. He walks at the rate of three miles an hour—90 yards a minute. Four men, the oldest 58 and the youngest 20, were selected for the tests.

CHAPTER XXIV

In the dingy safety of her own room again Dvenna paced the floor nervously. Still frightened by the strange incident, the danger she knew hovered behind Maxine thinly veiled threats, she tried to sort out her thoughts. She'd have to decide right now exactly what to turn

Kloss trembling she sagged into a little heap on the bed. If she could play for just another 24 hours, maybe she could discover something Dale needed to know. Then at least her suspicions were just suspicions And no one was in on such a gamble. And tomorrow—if Maxine stepped listening at her door right now "I'll see you fluttering in the show"

"Look here I don't like this——" Dale began. "But it's all right. Dvenna has taken a dislike to you she came silly reason and it—it would be better if you—somebody else—don't come back for a while. It's okay, I know. But I promise to see you Saturday.

"Promise!"

"Yes, I promise."

"Until then——"

"Until Saturday. Trembling as if with a chill, Dvenna replaced the receiver, sat staring at the cold lump of metal thinking. Tonight meant only Saturday. What could happen before then? And why was she risking all that? Why set run now while she had the chance?

Then she knew and her, the man she loved was in danger. Serious danger! And this might be a way to help his life The man she loved—

Dropping onto the bed again she lay motionless, her mind numbed and—too distraught to find comfort in tears, too weary to fight her way out. Then she sat up with a start, fighting against her heart. Life was such a mess

Fay hovered just outside the window the next morning when she finished her breakfast coffee and came back to her problem. And by the time she'd dressed, swallowed another big black coffee in the dreary dismal room downstairs, she had a plan. It at least the beginning of one.

Manuel was surprised to see her arrive at the office so early.

"Well—how come you honor our rehearsal with the sunshine of your smile, sister?" he grinned as she

The help of every Canadian is needed for Victory. In these days of war the thoughtful selfish spender is a traitor to our war effort. A reduction in personal spending is now a vital necessity to relieve the pressure for goods, to enable more and more labour and materials to be diverted to winning the war. The Agriculturist's Outlook

Western Canadian farmers along with the other citizens of the Dominion have entered upon the third year of the present gigantic war against the forces of Nazi aggression and tyranny with reasonable prospects that their economic condition will show some improvement during the next 12 months.

The outlook for a definite improvement in prospects for Canadian farmers in the period following the harvesting of the 1940 crops was recently stressed by the federal minister of agriculture when he told the farmers that they could now go ahead "and produce all the hogs, butter or cheese and eggs they can with the assurance of selling them at better prices than have prevailed up to the present."

The prospect of better prices is based upon new agreements with Great Britain to take larger quantities of livestock products including bacon and eggs and at better prices than were provided for under previously existing arrangements and former conditions. Farmers of course have noted that the British government does not apply to wheat grown and marketed on a free-trade basis.

Mr. Gardiner's announcement however does appear to chart a course which Western farmers who in past years have almost entirely depended upon wheat can follow and that is as far as such action is concerned the federal conditions permit to increase production of those commodities which are urgently required in what almost amounts to our sole remaining export market and to reduce production of those commodities principally wheat which must necessarily remain frozen until the war is won. Even some of the wheat which is grown can be turned to good advantage by the livestock that it can be fed and converted into saleable foodstuffs to bring a better return to the grower than if sold for marketing as breed grain.

Two Important Factors

The degree to which the Western Canadian farmer will actually benefit from this greater demand and higher prices for livestock products here over actually depends primarily upon the things the ability to get them to ultimate market in Great Britain and the ratio between the price the farmer receives for them and the prices of the commodities which he has to buy. The former depends upon the ability of the British government to control of the ocean highways and the latter upon the efficiency and effectiveness of the Canadian government's efforts to prevent undue inflation.

The combined naval might of Great Britain and the United States can be depended upon to keep open the traffic lane across the Atlantic. With normal safety the trade which stood always to expand enormously on the high scale shown steady improvement and President Roosevelt's enormous donations to use the American navy to keep defensive waters "open will be a powerful factor in strengthening security for the transportation of foodstuffs and war materials from this hemisphere to Britain's shores.

As for the other factor required to enable the farmer to reap the benefits of improved prices for his commodities the prevention of inflation its efficacy will depend upon the co-operation and support which the people of the country are prepared to give the government in the efforts to achieve that objective through price control measures.

The cost of living has gone up since the war broke out. In some degree this was not only to be expected but was unavoidable However on the second year of the war due to rising prices there was a strong tendency towards a downward acceleration of price advances and some of it undoubtedly

Inflation Threatens

The evils of inflation and particularly its dire effect upon agriculture are seen in what experienced by the Dutch who after nearly 12 months under the Nazi yoke have been reduced from a very high standard of living to the brink of starvation," according to Professor P. E. Gerbrandy, President of the Netherlands Council of Ministers.

If there are any in this country who are prepared to condone inflation they should read of the experience of the people of the Netherlands, as reported by Prof. Gerbrandy. "Agriculture" he says "suffers from severe shortage of labour, fuel and fertilizers. Dairy farmers are therefore slaughtered to feed the occupying army, as reported to the Third Reich. The Germans descended upon the fertile Lowlands like a cloud of locusts and like locusts, stripped by the huge purchases made by German soldiers and officials thousands of agricultural produce have disappeared into the German maw.

As a result the national debt is increasing at a rate ten times greater than that reached in the Great War. The tendency is selling astronomical amounts of government paper and there is plenty of paper money in circulation though he huge semi-forced loans. But goods are scarce, prices are rising in spite of attempts at control, and the standard of living has rapidly declined. Almost everything is rationed, but the rations are so small that in some cases laborers feel too weak to continue work after four o'clock in the afternoon."

Sun thinks give exactly correct time only on April 15, June 16, September 1 and December 24.

To Ensure Victory

Address Of Canadian Army Minister Sent For Men Who

Stressing the gravity of the need for more and more men for the Canadian Army Major General H. H. Browne D.S.O. M.C. Adjutant General in a national broadcast on his return from the United Kingdom held up that when the time of battle comes and he added it may not be long our Canadian Corps will weigh with great strength in the scales for victory. His visit overseas he said impressed on him more deeply than ever the supreme importance of trained manpower. Addressing the men of Canada and the boys in their teens and men and women of the hosts of Canada General Browne said Our need is grave. There is only one power on earth that will beat Hitler ready now. Never let it be said that our men were of the best but our numbers too few.

Referring to the heart of the people of Britain he said It is a spirit which neither bombs or discomfort can conquer or the weight of odds against them can dampen or discourage. We have in Britain to be man endurance we must all do our share so that the breaking point is never reached."

The band of entertainers set up the stage a platform with curtains and the necessary stage properties and would then sound the horn out of the shelters for the children to watch. The company was gathered at sunrise and on half a crown a week in the court yard if half. Colleton Artist Has Portrayed Effect Of Axis New Order

Portraying the essential evils of the Axis New Order and prophesying its defeat a picture painted in oils—"Europe Awakens on Law and Liberty"—has been exhibited in London and is attracting much attention. It has been hung from the Nazis since it was painted in 1937 but has escaped just prior to Evans's collapse it was later conveyed to safety where the artist's London studio was bombed. The picture shows Hitler Mussolini and Stalin in the background of Europe and the others show their glee But on the wall a hand is writing the same words that appeared before Belshazzar just before the fall of Babylon. Hallowe'en pranks brought on another barrage of complaints of vandalism by youngsters in the town and with the complaints was hear' the appeal of less severity doesn't the council take steps to curb the pranksters? Persons who have been subject to loss to the destruction of private and civic property are loud as much resentable in the public eye unless they divulge the names of the parties doing the actual damage. This has been a worry to authorities as large sums and small hamlets citizens will complain but will not co-operate. Before you make complaints about property damage be ready to back it up with the names or names of the party or parties involved. Until this is done it is hard to support authorities to seek out the culprits.

An Industrial Agriculture

[illegible] of wheat as plastics may be the extremely sought answer to the whole problem a problem which is becoming more acute as the war progresses and as this at present unwanted product of Western agriculture piles up in tremendous quantities

It has been stated in that column before that efforts to solve the West ern Canadian wheat problem should not be confined to the search for markets for that cereal in a broad general way but that the possibilities of putting wheat to use as an industrial commodity should be explored from every angle and should be the subject of experimentation

A recent despatch sent out from Ottawa by the Canadian Press announced that plastics made from Canadian materials have become the great white hope of manufacturers in meeting ordinary business requirements at a time when metals are urgently needed for defence purposes and quoted research officials to that effect

The despatch further quoted an official, presumably a research official, as stating that new uses for plastics have been found and manufacturing methods have been improved Often, plastics are thought of only in connection with articles of use in civilian life they represent the best material for certain manufactures For instance with thin layers of wood and plastic cements it is possible to develop as strong as metal but lighter in weight so have used simple supplies of cost and other products which can be used in emergencies

In opening of other products which might be used as a base for the manufacture of plastics, the despatch might very well have made specific reference to wheat as a potential raw material for it was stated there more the office A. O Shave, a Regina Saskatchewan, man had spent a couple of months in the east investigating the commercial feasibility of converting wheat into plastics and other products needed in industry

* * * *

Sir Wm. Stavert

Assisted by the wheat pools in his mission, Sir Shov carried east with him samples of a durable, good looking plastic which he had made from wheat and while there interviewed manufacturers with a view to interesting governmental research workers. When he returned he prepared a brochure, Mr. Shave Stavert, in which he held forth on the wheat plastic and the possibility of converting wheat into plastics, but intimated that further research should be prosecuted in the direction of determining the commercial possibility of making use of the entire wheat kernel in industry

Mr Shave's chief line of inquiry was devoted to the feasibility of utilizing in industry the starch properties of wheat, this property existing in the manufacture of plastics and the starches, comprising 69 per cent to the production of commercial alcohol and a variety of other commodities including explosives

That power alcohol can be extracted from wheat starches was already known, and Mr Shave secured plenty of confirmation for his opinion that the plastics of varying qualities could be produced from wheat, and with this knowledge, his recommendations should not be lightly shoved They are

1 That a well equipped research laboratory be established in Western Canada upon a site assured of adequate supplies of electrical energy and suitable water for steam and

2 That research work be started at the earliest possible moment.

It is suggested that this research work should be undertaken by the farmers themselves, through their organizations, rather than that it should be left entirely to governmental agencies, now that the latter are devoting all their energies to war productions and war problems.

* * * *

Fir Cones Useful

This self-help proposal appears to be highly meritorious in view of the fact that the wheat problem is primarily the farmers problem and rids so much at stake, it can be taken for granted that they would tackle the problem with all the earnestness that self interest dictates and that they would co-ordinate research work that has already been done by other organizations and in diverse places

That such co-ordination of effort is essential is evident from the fact that it has been demonstrated that it is not an economic practicability to use wheat alcohol from wheat starch alone It is probable that plastics could not be manufactured from wheat on a commercial proposition, but if the two were combined and the possibility of making use of other wheat products in a single plant were investigated, the industrial outlook might well be very different

It is interesting to note that plastics and power alcohol are not the only industrial commodities that can be secured from wheat. Other products which could be and in some instances have been extracted from wheat, are sugars, crysps explosives and films to mention only a few

In view of the pressing nature of the problem and the necessity for a permanent solution of it, no stone should be left unturned to explore all avenues which might lead to the industrialization of Western Canadian agriculture.

Young Shah Has Turned Over Father's Fortune To Nation

Iran's new 21 year-old Shah decided to cede all the possessions of his father's estate to the nation, it was announced in whole wheat will make it easier, and less expensive aspect city for them who prefer whole wheat bread to keep an adequate supply of 91 to their systems. The regular use of the new bread will also likely improve the health of these who, with less strenuous living formerly from what is a deficiency ailment, may actually be at less than perfect health for a number of slight deficiency Since 91 is said to be a factor in counteracting the effects of over work and nerve strain, the wartime importance of the new milling process may be great.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

A large number of relatives and friends gathered in the Free Methodist Church in Alix last Sunday, the 26th at 3 p.m. to attend the Memorial Service for the late Mrs. M. E. Cason, who passed away at the home of her daughter in Edmonton, Saturday 20th. The service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Hunter of the local United Church. Mrs. McLean of Toronto gave the address and Mrs. Hunter of the choir sang "What a friend we have in Jesus" and "Abide with Me." Many beautiful floral tributes graced the platform. The departed sister and her children have been actively engaged in the Gospel work, a number of the favorite songs of the departed comrades were sung during the afternoon.

Mrs Cason[illegible] for over thirty years lived at her farm in the Macleod district, but during the past three years she has lived at Alix. For many long years she was a faithful Church worker and was ever willing to give a helping hand to any in need. She was buried in the Macleod cemetery in the family plot.

Alix Locals

Sgt. L. H. Siddons after a weeks visit renewing acquaintance with many old friends returned to Winnipeg Saturday. Most of his leave was spent with his daughter-in-law and grandson at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C.D. Rouse. Before leaving again he wished a few remarks to be known, anyone away from home likes to keep up to date with Alix and this through their local paper. Valuable enlistments as published in the Alix Free Press makes quiet an impressive record. The various organizations in their respective war duties have cause for congratulations. Our [illegible] Legion comrades I are now staying right with it, waiting for the boys when they return to carry on and see that justice is done in re-establishing our lads again in civilian life. Physical training and sports play a big part in a soldier's life which also applies to the children of today and I am sure the people of Alix will see that the new organization now fixing up for the winter, gets the support by becoming members. One dollar membership fee will keep the children fully occupied and do more good than some people give credit for. My duties in the army are today Physical Training, Boxing, Wrestling and Sports generally, all being interested in Sport especially for children. I go back to Winnipeg with a membership ticket knowing full well my dollar will not be wasted.

Mr. and Mrs. W.D. Clarke spent the week end at Hanna.

Mrs. Bowles spent a week in Calgary.

Mr. and Mrs. Wolfenstein spent a few days in Edmonton this week.

M. Tuan Wolfenstein was up for a week end from Vulcan where he is working.

STABILIZATION OF PRICES AND WAGES

Your Country asks your loyal support of this Wartime Measure

TWO NEW CONTROLS have now become essential in Canada's wartime economy for living. These are:

(1) Control of Prices

Commencing November 17, 1941, there may be no increase in the prices of goods and services generally unless absolutely necessary and authorized by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

(2) Control of Wages

No employer, with certain limited exceptions, may increase the basic wage rates paid to his employees unless authorized by a Board on which the Government, employers and employees are represented. But after February 15, 1942, every employer with the same exceptions, will be obliged to pay a cost of living bonus and to adjust this bonus every three months.

Action Necessary to Stop Inflation

This Government action has been taken to prevent the inflation we knew in the last war, and its subsequent depression, unemployment and suffering.

Every housewife knows that prices are rising, and rising prices, unless controlled, will make it more costly and difficult to finance the war. Rising prices, unchecked, will spread confusion in industry and trade; will hinder production and proper distribution of supplies; will make the cost of living rise more rapidly than wages and salaries; will lessen the value of savings; will result in hardship for almost everyone, and especially those with small incomes. And the result of uncontrolled inflation, after the war, when prices drop, will again be depression and unemployment. Prices cannot be controlled without control of wages. Excess profits are, and will continue to be, under rigid control.

Coverage of Wages Stabilization Order

The Order is applicable to the following employers:

1—Every employer normally subject to the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act.

2—Every employer engaged in the manufacture of munitions of war, or war supplies, or the construction of defence projects.

3—Every building trades employer with ten or more employees.

4—Every other private employer with fifty or more employees.

The Order does not apply to employers in agriculture or fishing, or in domestic, religious, charitable or educational establishments operated on a non-profit basis.

Wage Provisions

Except on written permission of the National War Labour Board, no employer may increase his basic wage rates. The permission can only be given in cases where the Board has found that the wage rates to be low. Wage rates which are unduly high will not have to be decreased, but in such cases the Board may order the employer to defer the cost of living bonus.

Cost of Living Bonus

Every employer covered by the Order must pay to all his employees except those above the rank of foreman a wartime cost of living bonus.

Effective November 15, each employer also is paying a bonus under PC 7440 of December 16, 1940, and sold to such bonus as amounted based on the rise in the cost of living index for October 1941, above the index number used to determine the current amount of the bonus.

Effective February 15, 1942, each employer who has not been paying a cost of living bonus will be obliged to pay a bonus based on the rise in the index between October, 1941, and January, 1942, unless ordered by the Board to have the bonus on the rise in the cost of living over a longer period.

The bonus is calculated on the following basis: For each rise of one point in the cost of living the amount of the bonus shall be 25 cents per week, subject to the following scale: 21 years of age and female workers, when 18 years of age, at least rates of less than $21.00 per week, shall receive a bonus of 1 percent of their basic wage rates.

These bonuses will be adjusted regularly every three months.

Administration

The Order will be administered by the regional Boards under the direction of a National War Labour Board. Labour and employers will be represented on each of these Boards. Watch for the announcement of the Boards to which inquiries concerning the application of the Order should be directed.

Whole-Hearted Support Required

Your Government knows that this policy, as it affects labour, industry, commerce, and agriculture, demands a degree of restriction to which Canadians are not accustomed, and is directly a wartime measure. It will demand self-discipline and self-control. It will need the whole-hearted support of everyone who has the well-being of his fellow citizens at heart. But by loyal co-operation, Canadians can have much more assurance that the fears, sense of insecurity, the suffering and profiteering which [illegible] brings, will neither interfere now in the winning of this war, nor in the recovery and reconstruction of Canada and the Canadian way of living after the war is over.

This Means You

Another Enemy

With King Winter on the threshold and the season of greatest fire hazards approaching now in the land I give serious thought to the evil consequences of carelessness at this turning of one of the most beautiful and at the same time one of the most dangerous of the elements essential to mankind.

If I give very little reflection to appreciate the handsome which fire has bestowed upon mankind and there is no necessity here to enumerate its advantages or to speculate upon what civilization would be without it. But there is good cause to reflect upon the evils which it can, and unfortunately too often does, bring in its train due to human frailty in the form of ignorance or negligence.

Every year millions of dollars go up in smoke to the great grafter, on this continent. Last year, property having an estimated value of $20,000,000 [illegible] was destroyed by fire in the United States. Proportionately the property loss in Canada from the same cause was comparable and Western Canada contributed her share to this unnecessary sacrifice.

It would be bad enough if only property were consumed on this altar. But it does not end here. Widespread [illegible] every year as accompanies with fire takes toll of human as well as material resources.

The term "unnecessary sacrifice" has been used in referring these losses. That the plumes is justifiable is readily demonstrated when one analyses the figures released by government agencies and takes note of the causes responsible for this terrible waste.

* * * *

The Big Five

Public enemy No. 1 in the prairie provinces in 1940 was carelessness in handling smoking materials—tobacco cigarettes and cigars and for a number of years the carelessness smoker has headed the list and the percentage of loss for heaviest fire loss in the Canadian west. Defective stoves and furnaces rank next in the black list, while playing with matches, overheated flues, lamps and pipes and careless handling of petroleum products follow in sequence of their evil import.

One has only to scan the list of the big five to discern that there is amply warranty for declaring that carelessness and ignorance are the real cause of the colossal waste and sacrifice that is annually recorded. Most practically all of it could have been avoided with the exercise of a little commonsense care and forethought.

While the previous weather is a menace the year round and possibly due to the reason that he heads the list, some of the other hazards listed as primary causes of unnecessary conflagration are completely under control for the reason just at hand and especially is this true of defective stoves and furnaces and accompanying smokestack and flues. Likewise the careless handling of petroleum products may be listed as an item which should be completely [illegible] and other fire hazards. Also, a sluggish fire in the kitchen stove is prodded into action by a dash of coal oil and even the still more dangerous gasoline.

Because of these increased dangers during the winter months more in the time for the occupants of every farm and every home in hamlet, village and town to check over furnaces, stoves and pipes, repair all defects and to make a solemn resolution to eschew the use of coal oil or gasoline to speed up a recalcitrant fire.

* * *

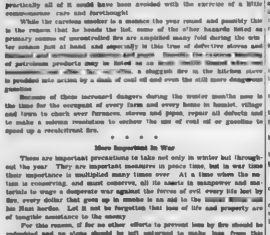
More Important in War

These are important precautions to take not only in winter but throughout the year. They are important measures in peace time, but in war time their importance is multiplied many times over. At a time when the nation is conserving, and most concerned, all its assets in manpower and materials to wage a desperate war against the forces of evil every inch lost by fire, every dollar that goes up in smoke is an aid to the cause Hitler and his Nazi hordes. Let it not be forgotten that loss of life and property are of tangible assistance to the enemy.

For this reason, if for no other efforts to prevent loss by fire should be redoubled and no items should be left unturned to make loss from this cause impossible. As already indicated, the risk is much greater during the next few months than on the summer and in greater while we are at war than in time of peace, even after discounting deliberate sabotage.

In the small towns and villages much of the fire fighting equipment is manned by volunteer firemen. Enlistments in the army and the air force have necessarily impaired the experienced personnel available to quench a conflagration. Hence, because of the war, danger from fire has been increased and it behooves those who have not served forth in uniform to take every precaution to prevent a fire breaking out and to be prepared to adequately cope with fire if someone is careless enough to let it break out.

Once a year integrity of coins! "You were always a fussi-dander," turned out at the Ottawa mint is groveled the wife shocked by three nasty counterfeits. "You don't," responded the husband, meekly, "I found you."



Plans For Post-War Emigration

Very Heavy Inflow From British To Canada Is Visioned

Officials of the British Empire Emigration Society announce that they are already laying plans for a great inflow of emigrants from Britain to Canada immediately after the war.

Founded some 60 years ago as a philanthropic organization the first movement of the British Dominions Emigration Society was to assist settlers in Canada to reunite with their families from whom they had been unavoidably and at no suspended since the outbreak of war. Ban On Swiss Trade

Britain Can No Longer Continue To Permit Passage Of Material

The British ministry of economic warfare announced Britain no longer could continue the limited facilities which heretofore have accorded passage of material for Switzerland's industry through the sea blockade and across enemy territory.

A statement said the action was taken because of the terms of a recent commercial agreement between Switzerland and Germany.

It said the British government appreciated the difficulties of the position of Switzerland, a land-locked neutral, and would continue to give facilities within limits for imports for foodstuffs and other goods for strictly domestic consumption.

The belief that varieties of wheat and other crops deteriorate, or "run out," is widespread. This belief is probably quite old, indeed, it may have been to Charles Darwin's contention that "nature abhors self-fertilization." Then in the early years of the present century we witnessed efforts to rejuvenate Red Fife and other varieties by the introduction of the same "Fife" blood from Hungary, Red Bobs and Ruby Sheaf. Yet there is no scientific evidence that the rejuvenated varieties were any more pure than the originals.

The "pure seed" idea may be strengthened by the knowledge that varieties of cereals even most resistant to rust and smut can, however, become contaminated with more susceptible varieties and so serve, in turn, as carriers of rust and smut. The only sure way to avoid such contamination is to grow only one variety. This is not practicable nor necessary. The best method is to purchase your seed from people to believe that no rust or smut is present

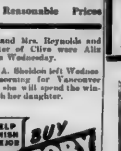
Mrs. A. Sheldon left Wednesday morning for Vancouver where she will spend the winter with her daughter.



Last year we installed in our laboratory one Boerner Sampler, each with a capacity of 200 samples to duplicate by test. We undertook to test samples of small grain seeds, including wheat, oats, barley, rye and flax. Nearly 5,000 samples of seed were sent in by line elevator grain buyers for their customers. The results were given to them in assisting farmers to assess the value of their own seed.

The germination tests are available, also the pure samples of wheat, oat, barley, rye, etc., that intended for seeding next spring should be brought in by farmers to the local line elevator agent as soon as possible. Forage crop and vegetable seeds are not be tested in our laboratory, but must be sent to the provincial laboratories at Calgary, Saskatoon or Winnipeg.

Some times cereal seeds exhibit what is known as "dormancy." That is, seeds which are really alive refuse to germinate, especially in the autumn. This means, of course, that the true viability of some samples may be underestimated. It is important that this dormancy, or delayed germination, be broken so that we may be able to secure a reliable germination. This, without pre-chilling, the true germinating capacity may be under-estimated.

We have now installed a frigidaire unit, specially built for our purpose which will enable us to germinate all samples sent in for test.

There is an unusually weakened grain in the country this year that the demand for tests will probably exceed the capacity of our laboratory. The samples are sent in, therefore, in the order Growers may guide themselves accordingly. Samples should be

Canada At War

It is hardly necessary to discuss Canada's war effort for our Canadian readers says the monthly letter of the Royal Bank of Canada for October; and continues. The information in this article is intended mainly for our readers in the United States where many features of our war effort have, through ignorance or modesty, been misrepresented. Since most of these have been originated with people who could have met the slightest difficulty in obtaining correct and reliable information, and who, in the mean are prominent in institutions if not pro-Germa activities, it seems advisable that even at the risk of being accused of violating our rule not to discuss matters with a controversial political tinge, the prevalent misrepresentation should be answered.

Official statements and all figures quoted in this article have been drawn from official sources. They show that more than 400,000 Canadian soldiers, sailors and airmen are now enrolled, of this total 160,000 soldiers and airmen are overseas. On the basis of comparative population, this is the equivalent of the enlistment of 3,200,000 men in the United States and the despatch of 1 160 000 for service abroad

Canada's Navy ten years ago comprised 1,700 of all ranks and fifteen vessels of all descriptions. To-day it includes more than 25,000 men and 160 vessels—destroyers, armed merchant cruisers, corvettes, minesweepers, patrol and anti-submarine craft. It went into action the moment it was declared and has performed valiant service.

Since September, 1939, the Canadian Army of 4,000 men has become one of 250,000 persons enlisted for service anywhere, scores of thousands of them men are on duty in England, in Newfoundland, in the West Indies and Gibraltar. In addition the non-permanent active militia, corresponding to the National Guard of the United States, has grown from 55,000 men to a Reserve Army of 170,000 on call for duty in Canada as need arises.

The Royal Canadian Air Force began with 4,000 men. Now it has 60,000. (the equivalent of an air personnel of 960,000 in the United States) with the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan operating 130 separate establishments in Canada. Already thousands of Canadians and others trained in these schools have done heroic work, many at the sacrifice of their lives. Men are now being graduated at twice the rate originally planned for this time as pilots, observers, gunners or radio-operators for duty in fighting and bombers crews established British or Hitler-controlled Europe or for Everyone knows that four dollar bills don't usually add up to five . . . But, the WAR SAVINGS certificates which costs you four dollars makes this kind of arithmetic come true.

Yes, and every four dollars you send to Ottawa actually gets behind a gun and shoots. It buys vital war equipment of some sort. It helps shorten the war.

After this war, you get FIVE DOLLARS, not four dollars. Thus right now, your savings are helping to win and their helping to building a nest-egg for yourself.

For Improved Highways

The delicate issues in connection with the annual convention of the Good Roads Association must have served to bring to the attention of those of its members the great importance of roads to our economic life. The result should be a pertinent interest in the residents of the three provinces as to their position relatively behind the rest of Canada in the construction of paved roads.

The wide spaces of the west together with the comparatively sparse population have been important factors in bringing about this condition. Also the economic structure as compared to some of the more densely populated districts in another reason why the west has been lagging behind.

Notwithstanding this much credit must be given to the highway administrators of the Western provinces for the manner in which they have carried on in the face of great difficulties during the years of depression. In the province of Saskatchewan, as an example there is a total of 212 miles of pavement, 3,766 miles being all weather roads 135 miles are of bituminous treated gravel, the remainder being earth roads.

The Trans-Canada

The construction of a paved highway from east to west across the three prairie provinces would naturally result in much greater tourist traffic. In addition to the immediate financial benefits from the use of it would also serve to bring about a better acquaintance with the other sections of our country as well as with our neighbors to the south of us. It would also serve to bring to the attention of southern some of the potentialities and great attractions of the west.

So far the Routes opening in the three prairie provinces offer many attractions for the tourist while further west in British Columbia the scenic grandeur of the Rockies are too well known to need comment. It has been pointed out that a paved trans-Canada highway would enable east and west to reach a better understanding. To study each other's problems, and thus help to develop the much desired end of a more completely united Canada.

National Assistance

While Canada is engaged in an all-out war effort there can be no thought of diverting funds to other than the vital necessities of war. We can, however, look to the post-war period when work for many will need to be provided after demobilization.

As a post-war policy the improvement of our roads could well receive attention. Road building to furnish employment for many of our service men and those who are at present engaged in war industries would seem to offer at least a partial solution. The tentative policy which has been outlined at various times appears to rule out any thought of the dole and in its place to substitute a program of public works as a better form of service to those who may be in need of assistance. If the plan was adopted the country at large would receive lasting benefits and there would be no economic struggle to show for any large expenditures of public moneys.

It has been pointed out that Canada will have strong competition from European countries in securing tourist traffic from the United States after the war. Only by providing better roads and better facilities may we hope to attract tourists in desired numbers. The tourist trade ranking as one of the most important sources of revenue in Canada it would then appear reasonable to expect that the Federal Government will be prepared to lend every assistance possible when the days of peace have arrived which we so ardently look forward may open up a brighter and happier era in this Canada of ours.

Remembered For Last Act

With Verdun Will Be Forgotten

Marshal Petain's tomb, according to his expressed wish, is eventually to be at Verdun, at Fort Douaumont where the French soldiers made good his words: "They shall not pass." The place of the Marshal's burial is of no real import; it seems although the time of it might have been. But at this stage of his story he would remind Marshal Petain that he will not be remembered because of Verdun, no matter how impressingly he may be buried. He will be remembered, alas because of Vichy 1941 has swallowed up 1916. —New York Post.

Will He It Again

It is said that the Canadian expedition to Spitsbergen upset Hitler plans to use the island's coal for synthetic oil and gasoline manufacture. The Germans had conducted extensive experiments along that line. That is only one instance in which Canadians will halt the Nazi program when they get the chance.

Many astronomers agree that the satisfaction of life are greater on the Canadian moons of Jupiter and Saturn than on Sahara than on any of the planets.

Eskimo Women Are Not Tattooed In These Modern Days

Visitors to Canada's northland were informed by National Museum officials to-day that a memory of long ago a hallowed Eskimo custom no more it will be their chance to record the remnants of an ancient tradition that died nearly when the white man came.

Facial tattooing, once used in all Eskimo women and men for whom her women a last act was Dr Diamond Jenness had throughout.

As recently as 1915 when he visited many months among the Eskimo studying their way of life every woman was tattooed and the practice prevailed everywhere in the north.

The young Eskimo woman be- fored she had to have tattoo mark- ings on her face to get a husband, Dr Jenness said.

To draw an ami or needle with a sat-covered stone attached to it under the skin was a painful process was done at night. When the Eskimo community realized while people had not any moral ob- lowing and professed to long for the effect it caused it was banned, gladly abandoned.

To-day while women still may be seen with the tattoo marks but the younger generation knows nothing of it."

Potentate Was A Lone 4 into Himself When He Attended Luncheon

The entry of British troops into the dominions of the Shah may have revealed to some old readers of the Mail the visits which one of His Majesty's predecessors in the Land of the Lion and the Sun paid to our city some 50 years ago.

On each occasion the potentate was a lone unto himself he did what he pleased regardless of the official programme. When he entered the Council House where an elaborate luncheon had been prepared, the Prime Minister announced that his Persian Majesty proposed to sleep for an hour. Then was a nice pull to the program!

When half an hour had elapsed and Majesty still slumbered, the Mayor suggested to the Prime Minister that the Shah should be awakened. "No," said the Prime Minister with horror "that is more as my life is worth" but the town clerk nothing loth, marched into the Shah's room and tickled the potentate out of his slumber.

The troubles with Royal Persons were not ended however, for on visiting the luncheon room the Shah caught sight of the most novel ornament on the table—a live minature standing on its head in a block of ice His Majesty would not sit down until it had been removed, for he thought an attempt was being made to bewitch him.—Birmingham Mail.

Camel, horse, buggy and motor-car are used in the transport of some of His Majesty's mails from Cape York peninsula, in Queensland.

Feeling Pinch Of War

Restrictions On Some Foods In Egypt Have Been Necessary

Egypt the fifth rank in the war is beginning to feel the pinch of food shortage. The situation is grave, it cannot be denied, but some restrictions have been put on sugar and other products and fashion.

The Ministry of Supply reports that there have been hoarders who sent the big British ships their cars for more than Egypt can handle. They who "Egypt can wait" are now having to wait. Egypt is getting below normal. As a result many more than Egypt can handle. They who "Egypt can wait" are now having to wait. Egypt is getting below normal. CHAPTER XXIX.

Wong Ming Devona realized she'd landed a step forward, stood staring at the Oriental's face gravely framing for an answer to this confusion. In the same instant she saw recognition flicker across that impassive face. Same for the space of a thought then she back into that impenetrable mask.

"Want to 'it, please?" They clipped accent!

Boldly, all right. And he knew who she was. And was pretending he didn't.

"Comprehensive nods, she forced a smile.

"Yes."

The Dona Carlotta from the El Mocambo. Mr Sherine asked me to call for a package," she replied automatically repeating the little speech she'd planned.

Obviously, wouldn't work now Nobody Wong's knowing who she really was—knowing, too, probably that she wasn't in Martha' confidence.

Amazingly enough, he nodded. The repellent, yellow-skinned face disappeared from the narrow opening, and a key turned gratingly in the lock. Then the door swung wide.

Wong stepped aside "Come in, please."

Devona thrust aside an impulse to laugh hysterically. By dawn these steps to Nothing had. But—and she bolstered her flagging courage—anything worth doing at all lasts a little while. No real harm could come to her After all she could still claim innocence, ignorance even, for having come this far——

Wong closed the door behind her, led the way down the hall at that same little dog-trot, to the last of the shut closed doors. Opening it, he motioned on a light, stood aside.

"Wait here, please."

"Thank you." She stepped past him into the tiny room.

Behind her, the door closed again with a rasp. Then she heard Wong's footsteps fade down the hall again. Somewhere a door opened, voices rose faintly then were cut off again as the door closed.

Devona, her knees threatening real mutiny now, sagged into a chair, and clutching her bag, strained to turn for any sound.

It worked for what seemed hours. By realization of her own foolhardiness grew alarmingly. She'd much hoped out to report her safety to the police or to Dale himself—somehow, she gasped now, it would have really legitimate business to offer. She'd have a hard time explaining her interference. And if it weren't how could she hope to attempt undercover professionals what Dale himself couldn't do it?

Don't, boss, need to come. A silly fantastic notion that she could play detective in Dale's serious drama. Probably only bungled

She flung the door again felt a scream rising to her lips, forced it clawing at her fist fleeing wit Then abruptly she stiffened forced herself to return to the richly chair sat down calmly

But it was hard to keep from crying out when footsteps sounded in the hall again drew nearer rapid ly. Then a key turned and the door opened. She had to bite her lips to keep back a treacherous little scream as Wong stepped into the room again.

Sorry to keep you waiting some he said as calmly as if this were his mother's Palm Springs hacienda and she had sent him on some trivial errand

She heard her own voice strangely cool Oh, that's all right.

"Here is the package." He handed her what looked like a white shoe box.

Tucking it under one arm she pulled on her gloves with deliberation that that amused even herself

Thank you."

"Was that all?"

Something flickered across his face Devona wasn't sure but that it was a bad smile. Then, even more than the locked door, told her she wasn't yet out of danger

"Yes Thank you. And now ——"

Boldly she stepped past him toward the shadowy hall If he moved to stop her she decided, she'd run.

Wong stepped past her now open ed the door with a flourish.

"Thank you," she murmured, forced herself to walk down the front steps calmly

Then, drawing a long breath of the salty air she suppressed a hysterical little giggle Here she was she congratulated herself and likely run down the walk to the car waiting at the curb. So far so good.

She resumed short.

The car waiting for her at the curbing was not—at last!

For a moment the sound at it, his advertisement emblazoned on the door. No uniformed driver in the seat. Instead, the man leaned the wheel of the long black coupe was—her semblance collapsed to cold, clammy fear—Jean Meader!

"Well," he said calmly, "fancy finding you here, Devona."

She couldn't speak, couldn't even breathe She only stood there, staring.

"Won't you get in?" he invited flung open the door. "I'll drive you wherever you're going."

"This—I—my taxi——"

"I took the liberty of dismissing him. Too bad you didn't tell me you wanted to come out here, Devona," he said blandly "I gave you every opportunity to ask me to bring you, remember?"

He smiled—sneeringly.

Devona felt her last prop crashing under her. So he'd known all along! He'd let her come down here—walk into this—trap!

Because, should she? Call to help her—she glanced up and down the deserted, deserted street. Who could there be here? If she resisted now, even the little game would be over. Her best chance was to pretend the showdown until the odds were a little more evenly divided.

"Thank you so much" — and she stepped into the car.

Meader climbed in beside her, started the coupe's powerful motor deftly, guided the long car down the narrow street.

For awhile, they skirted the lighted highways, kept to back streets that wound circuitously through dimly lighted suburbs, then emerged on a darkness. Shadow drove rapidly, but drastically, giving his close attention to their struggly devious route.

Finally they turned into a blazing thoroughfare Devona recognized a little sigh of relief At least there were crowds here people police. Here bystanders who might come to her rescue. If she resisted

Not that Meader would give her any opportunity to summon help He'd speeded up now They travel, led rapidly from one traffic signal to the next his pace timed to strike the green lights consistently And she glanced at the speedometer as a rate that would make it impossible to leap from the moving car!

Still holding the white shoe box in her lap her number of plans presented themselves to her fever-ishly marching mind. Throw it out the window toward the first man formed officer she saw? Try to get it open long enough to see, to take from it one of the smaller square boxes she was sure it contained? Unnerving evidence if she could get it Assuming, of course, the very improbable event of her being able to get the evidence out into hands where it would do any good

As if he'd followed her thinking Meader reached quietly for the white box "I'll relieve you of that, Dona Thanks a lot for bothering your pretty head."

Calmly, he tossed it onto the shelf behind their heads settled he here a moment before his attention went back to the street ahead.

There wasn't a chance that he'd believe any story she fabricated now, she realized, her hands clenched in her lap He'd realized that that phone call had been her ruse. He'd actually let her think she was getting away with something, trailed her down here in-sight deliberately, to that gran little house on Front St. Even Wong had been in on the little stunt. It was all state enough.

Just what the next move in this game was to be that was the harrowing terrifying part If only she'd had the good sense to tell some one —even Manfred —that everything was up.

But not a soul knew where she was No one would even miss her until to-morrow morning Tal would call her hotel then The desk clerk would report "No answer" Tal might not even then become alarmed, thinking she'd gone out for early breakfast or shopping—or something She might not call for hours after that!

They flashed by a neon-lighted coach house. One twenty-five. Tal wouldn't call until 8 in the morning at the earliest. Unless he discovered she hadn't been in her room all night, he probably wouldn't become anxious until noon. At the most that, was six hours and a half before she could hope for any help from Dale Meadows.

Grimly she set her lips. Six hours and a half Maybe longer And that would be too late! Much too late!

General McNaughton Reviews Its Work Engaged In By Troops

In a broadcast reference to Canadian expeditions along the coast of Europe Lt Gen A G L McNaughton, commander of the Canadian Corps, pr marily had in mind operations of the Royal Canadian Engineers at Gibraltar the Spitsbergen raid and the short move of a brigade through Brest towards Paris and back to England in June 1940 it was learned

Military Training Shows Many Youths Of Canada Physically Unfit

The statement by Major-General LaFleche that compulsory military training has revealed a "disquieting" state of health among Canada's youth draws special attention to a long-term condition in Canada to which not enough realistic attention has been paid It is proof of failure on the part of parents, school, authorities and medical authorities to take corrective action to a sufficient degree during the boyhood of these youths who are now found to be physically unfit A certain number are congenitally poorly equipped physically but in a large percentage of cases it is doubtless the fact that treatment and training would have made the difference between their present medical category and A1

The Associate Deputy Minister for National War Services urged that the situations be viewed as a new problem and also one for post-war attent on Life after the war would not be easy strong units were would be needed than ne ded day said General LaFleche This is indeed true The fact that there are "too many imperfect men" in Canada does no credit to the nation

Can Fill All Orders

British Columbian Home In London Great Boon For Soldiers

Two of the busiest Canadian women in London took a few minutes till to tell W L MacTavish of Vancouver and Fraser Gurrie of Edmonton members of the visiting Canadian editors' party about their work at British Columbia House

This building is a headache of comfort where troops from Pacific Coast of Canada can call for anything from a cigarette to a pretty brunette and find it.

Mrs Josephine Cadman of Edmonton B C who completed the [illegible] rooms, operates the information bureau and finds time to top that by running a dancing class for [illegible] soldiers told the visiting editors that she had been able to fill almost every request the soldiers made "even to providing a pretty brunette for a soldier who was seeking a companion to get out dancing."

"Another soldier wanted to visit St G Wells," she said, "and I was able to arrange that too, and he had a drink with Mr Wells as well as a pleasant chat."

Fight For Victory

War is no longer just a series of limited exercises between professional soldiers. It is nation against nation; support of home by the friends at front.

Either has joined the men and strength of the entire German people and all the slave labor and loot of a rich continent against the prodigious human material and spiritual of the democratic nations. By fights as we must fight with political weapons psychological weapons and economic weapons.

It is all-out fight for Victory the whole population is engaged Every John Citizen has some place to do whose effort be most match and purpose. Thus there is an Canada a factory front. There is a on-land front a financial front a farm front. Together they comprise the economic front equal in importance to the military front comprised of the fighting land forces, air squadrons and naval ships.

The modern infantry division costs eight times as much to equip as the division of 1914-1918. It has 90 times the horsepower in its transport and fighting vehicles. It has 5 to 10 times the fire power in its small arms and guns. A American gun costs $600. It takes tons of transportation to supply one troop. A tank costs $75,000. We are making hundreds. A bomber plane costs $100,000. A dozen can crash in a night.

Production of these sample items and you see why the Workers on the home front are needed to keep one constantly in the field. You see why the economic front is a front and not just a sector or subject on this war.

Must Be United

The story of the economic mobilization of Canada at the start of all entire nation moving itself to carry the greatest load it ever tried to carry. A load involving as great an effort as the very opening up of the country and the construction of the first canals, the first highways and the first trans-continental railway system.

Canada's goal is to double in the next 12 months war production in the factories alone equal in value to more than the total war output of Canada throughout the whole of the last war.

Now capital investments in factories, and government account alone not including private investment equal all the capital invested in the great pulp and paper industry of Canada, the world's largest producer of news print paper. And we're not at the peak yet. We measure our economic war potential only to find that we have to do even better than a measured maximum.

To-day the controllers of our war economy must try to make seemingly inadequate resources stretch over a vast area. There aren't enough men. There's not enough steel, oil, rubber, silk, copper or food, not enough factory space and machinery.

As the war proceeds more shortages will become apparent. Too many shortages of too many key products would be fatal. Our war effort would slow down and collapse more effective than it should be. Inflation would take hold and sow the seeds of post-war economic chaos.

* * * *

Have To Produce More

The only safeguard against either evil is the proper organization of every phase of the country's productive life for war. Something must be borrowed from the ruthless force and control of the totalitarian state. It must be drafted on to our democratic, individualistic economy to enable us to match the gigantic productivity of a state that has for years been nothing but a war machine. We have to produce more and use less of what we produce for civilian purposes. But people have to be not just asked to spend less they have to be given less to spend and less to spend it on.

Life must be directly restricted to increase the nation's fighting power Fiscal measures must be drastic and sure.

The limits of Canada's war efforts have been set entirely by the "physical capacity of the consumer system. As one observer put it, no man is me by the imagination and genius of Canada's leaders, her industrialists and her people For the theoretical limits of capacity can be and have been to no small measure expanded by effort and sacrifice.

The "insatiable demands of war" are calling forth a total economic effort exceeding anything in our previous history All our treasures all our manhood, all our resources are committed to an "all-out national effort." That is the simple policy of Canada at war

Women Accomplish Miracles

Thousands Of Articles of Clothing Made By Women Of Canada

By Gregory Clark

Seven hundred and fifty thousand articles of women's and children's clothing have been made by Canadian women and shipped to Britain, and hundreds of Fighter Pioneer Units beds and quilts Bandages surgical and first aid dressings by the millions of made by these same Canadian women who take clothes and the raw material and do nothing but turn out the goods of money out of it.

Each of the twelve home defence areas of Britain has a mobile unit been provided by the Canadian Red Cross and ready to leave at an instants notice for the scene of a bombing sending the food and protecting the loc as it goes. One hundred and fifty ambulances have been bought and paid for by Red Cross money and are in use to-day in the rescue of civilian bomb victims That number does not include 50 additional ambulances supplied by our Canadian troops overseas.

In May, the Canadian Red Cross organized a special unit to despatch the work amongst the bomb victims It is called the Red Cross British Bomb Victims Fund Every penny contributed to that fund goes to the purchase of materials that will be made up by the women of Canada into garments for women and children air raid shelter books are baby layette nursery garments for women, and equipment, first aid and medical supplies Every dollar given to that fund becomes two dollars worth of actual goods delivered to the victims Now if you think it is a waste of money to Britain it will go to goods made by the skilled hands of Canada's million Red Cross volunteer workers Regardless of what you think of it you make to the Canadian Red Cross Society for the said undertakings amongst our soldiers and sailors of in the Hong wash in Canada amongst pioneer settlements it is suggested that a gift to the Red Cross British Bomb Victims Fund will be a particularly timely donation to enable the women of Canada to rush every kind of aid now in Britain before another winter and its perils comes

By a wonderful series of miscarriages and accidentals, those who were successful in saving in Britain a vast store of goods even at the start of this blackest year in human history which was lost by October when the Battle of Britain began With the aid of the Red Cross British Bomb Victims Fund they will repeat that miracle to save Britain.

The registration of August 1939 showed 82,000 males and 62,000 females had never worked but officials said this total had been reduced since that time

For Longer Life

Medical Authority Thinks Man Can Be Made To Live 500 Or 600 Years

Dr Maurice Evans 60, one of the world's leading authorities on longevity said that he would establish after he was a laboratory where he can develop his theories that man can be made to live 500 or 600 years.

Many discoveries that point the way to personal rejuvenation without surgery already have been made he said, and in this respect, the human race might take a hint from the fish.

"One of the many causes of aging is that man produces too much internal heat" he said "Fish who have the same temperature as the water in which they live, never grow old in the sense that their flesh becomes tough

Although he did not suggest that humans next some way to live in water, he said:

"A cook sometimes complains that a fowl is tough, but whoever heard one complain of a tough fish."

Dr Ernest is a former newspaperman who covered London for numerous Austrian, Swedish and American papers at the turn of the century He also assisted the late Colonel Doyle in espionage during the German War, but gave up journalism to return to medical practice.

He founded the Centenarian Club in 1928 "to inspire men and women with the desire to live on an established, time-minded Matuson (Christian) and investigate the means by which this may be achieved."

Dr. Ernest said over 200 centenarians all over the world had been admitted to honorary membership "but unfortunately, they do not rejoin their membership long."

Many men and women tie up their dogs at night but there their cats run in to run around promiscuously.

Women were first admitted to the university in Canada about 1880.

So Sheridan paid down the money, the man's Then taking aim he fired into the middle of the flock, killing quite a number Joyfully he turned to the man "Now friend you made a fine bargain" he laughed "Oh, I don't know replied the other. DAUGHTER OF DESTINY

Eleanor Atterbury Colton

CHAPTER XXX

The tiny hands on Devona's own watch pointed at five minutes past 2 when Donald turned off the main boulevard into a quieter street, swung into a curving drive and braked to a stop. Devona recognized it instantly

Marcia did not speak as the velvet-lined elevator carried them up to his elaborate suite. Not until he'd closed the door, dismissed the houseboy, did he turn toward her, fix her with the slowly smiling cruelty of those dark eyes.

Calmly he tapped the white shoe box he carried under his arm. "I'll put this away first, Dona, my darling. Heap of stuff—florists. I don't think you'd like it."

White, she unlatched him cross the long drawing room to the blocky oil painting of the Monterey pines. Touching the heavy frame at the upper corner, he slid back the picture, revealing the silkcoat little wall safe.

Shuddering, she turned her back to the Monterey pines.

"Cold?" Marcia's voice taunted her. "I'll mix a drink."

"No, thanks."

"Come, sit down." He indicated one of the matching chairs flanking the huge fireplace. "We have lots to chat about, you and I."

Obediently, she stepped into the thick-cushioned chair, watched him take a cork coaster from a small drawer in the mahogany lamp table, set the sparkling high-ball glass on it meticulously.

Grimly, she watched her chin high, met his eyes steadily

"Now, my darling, suppose you tell me why you so thoughtfully went on that little errand for me?"

Alert, Devona played for time. "Dead—for fun."

"Pretty dangerous fun — isn't it?"

She shrugged. "Maybe."

"If you've it had nothing to do with young Brasher?" he said, smiling as he drained his glass.

"It would have—if I'd gotten away with it," admitted coolly, assumed that the terror inside didn't show in her voice.

He nodded. "Yes I thought so. You had you didn't get away with it, too. You're going to be a good lady."

Devona felt her cheeks blanch but she kept her voice steady "Really? They'll even think this done did the job. No witnesses. Motive—lovely. Make good headlines, anyway, won't we, Jose?"

Devona felt him stiffen, reach hastily for a cigarette.

"Well—" he began, calmly, but his eyes were not like the girl's face. "—go ahead. If you've made up your mind—"

He struck a match, touched the flickering flame to the cigarette, and then, as if by accident, flicked it directly toward the girl's face.

Only a moment's distraction, but enough. A moment later he had leaped to her side, wrenched the little pistol from her hand, flexed her, cursing, into a chair where he held her writhing.

"Damn you! Damn you! Give me that!" she cried hysterically, and her hand into hers.

I only wanted to be sure what your reaction is with the little deal. Marcia was saying "before I that we were help young Brasher to retire

It's a shocking every shred of circumstantial which she was trap after she didn't let a flicker of emotion show on her face Nothing Mr Brasher didn't even know I suspected

No Really now Dona He arched pencil himself another cigarette you don't expect me to believe that

"Why not? It happens to be the truth

He just looked at her over the rim of his glass You are a beautiful little liar Dona But he shrugged well things all that Now long since you have suspected that I managed this little entertainment?

"Oh—I don't remember

"I—" the laugh was gone now "how many people have you told?"

Nothing I wanted to figure out for myself

He looked skeptically You're a cool little customer Have you figured out what will happen now?"

A very little smile

Ohh I can leave that up to you. Marcia What exactly does Dale Brasher mean to you?"

Nothing and kept her fingers crossed

How would you like to play the game my way?"

She loved shy with the strap of her handbag and stalled. "Blackmail?"

"Meaning that you'll have a chance to make restitution Have you figured I could use a lovely woman very handy as a hostess in dazzling and brain and the right attitude

She smiled Thanks master for the compliment"

Besides deliberately he fill his glass again it wouldn't be healthy for you to go on meddling in matters you don't understand."

Maybe it was explained

Slowly he put down his glass and lowered her A smart girl to take you ought to be able to guess"

Marcia came to stand just behind her chair. She heard every breath ing the touch of his hands on her shoulders, felt their deadly brutality as he turned her toward him.

"Going to be sensible sweetheart and do as I say?" he asked his voice already more of her "I can make things pretty sweet for you — you'll just play along with me."

"Trying not to let her repulsion show in her voice, she nodded

"And—if I don't—"

His fingers tightened on her arms. "I'll put you in the place. You like nice things. You'll like it here better than the place — I'll have to send you. Just to keep you out of danger, of course"

Of course Devona's heart here moved like a piston. "I see"

"Wrong" Marcia's dear opened suddenly and arms she laughed—a shrill, hysterical sound that was not like him at all.

Startled, Marcia released Devona. They both turned to the door. A tall, tow-haired girl—and the muzzle of a grim little pistol.

It was the girl who'd come to the El Mexicano that evening. Devona recognized her from Fern Gordon of Marcia' confidé.

"Freda! How the hell did you get in here?" Marcia took one step toward her, but she waved him back.

"I've been here since six, darlin. I want to get a jump look at ya before I send you where you belong," she added coolly. "I'm can't pull this stuff. You—Marcia thinks I'm smart."

"Can't I? And why not? You need killing, you know."

"Maybe I do——" calmly enough. "But what good will that do you? The cops will catch up with you in the end——"

"Oh, no they won't, Cuckoo. Because I'm going right along with you—via the next bullet. Cops and the newspapers will have a lot of fun with the story." She smiled coyly at Devona. "Maybe they'll even think this done did the job. No witnesses. Motive—lovely. Make good headlines, anyway, won't we, Jose?"

Devona felt him stiffen, reach hastily for a cigarette.

"Well—" he began, calmly, but his eyes were not like the girl's face. "—go ahead. If you've made up your mind—"

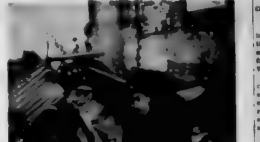
He struck a match, touched the flickering flame to the cigarette, and then, as if by accident, flicked it directly toward the girl's face.

Only a moment's distraction, but enough. A moment later he had leaped to her side, wrenched the little pistol from her hand, flexed her, cursing, into a chair where he held her writhing.

"Damn you! Damn you! Give me that!" she cried hysterically, and her hand into hers.

FEMALE PAIN

MEDALS FOR BRAVERY GIVEN WOMENS



Winnifred Muriel Cheney and "Molly" Maude Helen Tansley, above typify the courage of the girl volunteers of Britain. They are A.R.P. ambulance drivers and were awarded the B.E.M. for bravery in air raids

He whirled on her "Shut up. Unless you want to go along"

Trembled she put busied at him This couldn't be happening not really not here in plain sight

A discreet knock at the outside door two short taps, a pause, then three more

Marcia went in answer "There's Wong now."

He must have been waiting downstairs Devona realized. Perhaps at Marcia had thought it would be necessary to send her with Wong Instead, this girl who

But it wasn't Wong's repellent face she saw when Marcia cautiously opened the door Instead—several forces Most of them strange Men in uniform. The police!

And an instant later Devona bolted for the second time in the last half hour directly into the muzzle of a gun This time the gun, stony face behind the gun was Dale's!

"Hands up, please" he ordered, curtly "All of you!"

(To Be Continued)

Playing Sweet

Practical John Often Lead To Broken Engagements

You can never tell how a practical joke will end According to a despatch from St. Paul's, Minnesota, a fortnight ago a young man who had been calling at the home of a girl he loved has agree when a friend jokingly pulled the chair from under him. When he picked up a telephone, gave a number curtly.

"Hello! Speak to Wong."

A moment's silence. Then: "Wong? Got a job for you. Get here as quick as you can."

Replacing the receiver, he turned to the trembling girl on the sofa. "Now you see that you get out of town" he said, with an abrupt laugh. "And that you don't come back, either Maybe next time you'll obey orders."

Shortly horror pavered awful realization into Devona's numbed brain. He didn't—he couldn't—mean that

"Jose——"

"Jose" she sprang to her feet "You don't mean—you aren't going to——"

A German publication had just attended Hitler's funeral and returned home to tell his wife about the obsequies "It was fun . . . colorful" he enthused. "Such mountains of flowers! Delegations sent from all over the world for the Fuehrer! Such elegant uniforms from Herr Goering thru Herr Goebels and Herr von Ribbentrop, and such crowds of people After the speeches, they bore of the casket into the grave, then drew it up then lowered it again, then drew it up . . . "But why?" interrupted his frau. " Because," continued the enthusiastic delegate, "every time they lowered it, there was such applause they had to bring it up for an encore."—Financial Post.

Peculiar Superstition

Dogs Scots Will Not Eat Pork Chops

Reference to Scots eating haggis in spite of the theological indigestion which have spread throughout the world, is a reminder that pork is very Scots as we can justify the title of a curious discrimination by one section of Scots the fishermen of Buckie, on the Moray Firth They refused to eat pork chops.

"Why not?" interrupted the visitor to whom the statement was made.

"Weel, ye see, it's like this," explained the fisherman, "every time they lowered it, there was such applause they had to bring it up for an encore."—Financial Post.

"Woe unto any member of a fishing crew who attempts to eat pork chops to check the superstition of his mates by managing a game of pork rummy in the crew's portion of the boat. On the 19th centennel there is also held the story of a boat which, on two successive nights drew nets in which the rest of the fleet were hauling up in vain. On the second occasion a neatly roasted skipper found one of the crew with a few slices of pork secreted in his locker. These were overturned, and on the story goes the drifters of the fleet were the night nearly passed what had caused the phenomenal catch, and proceeded to eat pork chops for dinner.

A haggish can be kept eating it a color of clothed and for eating purposes.

We need by lots of keeping the fish in a cool place, and by keeping it in a cool place.

It is no good for him.

THE PRICE CEILING ORDER IS NOW LAW

A fine up to $5,000 and two years imprisonment is provided for offences against this law. What You Must Do to Comply With the Law

1. As a Consumer

You must not buy goods or services for more than the highest price charged for such goods or services during the basic period, September 15 to October 11. If in doubt, ask your storekeeper for proof the price he asks is a lawful price under the Price Ceiling order. Normal seasonal price changes in fresh fruits and vegetables and greenhouse products are exempt.

2. As a Retailer

You must not sell goods or services for more than the highest price at which you sold such goods or services in the basic period, September 15 to October 11.

You must not buy goods or services from manufacturers or wholesalers or any other sources for more than the highest price you paid to them in the basic period.

It is intended that excess of customs hardship should be adjusted by reducing the cost of merchandise to the retailer. Retailers whose cost of merchandise delivered to them after November 30 is too high in relation to the ceiling prices, should get in touch with their suppliers and try to arrange an adjustment fair to both parties.

The price of goods of a kind or quality not sold during the basic period must not be more than the highest price charged for substantially similar goods in the basic period.

3. As a Wholesaler

You must not sell goods or services at more than your highest price (less discounts then prevailing) for such goods or services during the basic period, September 15 to October 11. You must not buy goods or services for more than the highest prices paid during the basic period.

Wholesalers will be expected in some cases to reduce their prices below the ceiling in order that their retail accounts may carry on. Wholesalers in turn may have to ask their suppliers for price reductions.

The continued flow of goods through normal channels is of the utmost importance and the Board will intervene if supplies divert business abnormally from one customer to another.

4. As a Manufacturer

You must not sell at prices higher than your highest price (less discounts then prevailing) during the basic period, September 15 to October 11.

In some cases it will be necessary for manufacturers to reduce their prices below the ceiling so that wholesale and retail accounts may carry on.

Where maintenance of the retail ceiling requires manufacturers' prices to be substantially reduced, the Board will investigate and in proper cases will afford necessary relief.

Imports

Retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers are assured by the Board that any considerable increase in the costs of import of essential goods will be covered either by subsidies or by adjustment of taxes. Studies will be commenced shortly.

Services Also Come Under This Law

The Price Ceiling law also applies to rates and charges for electricity, gas, steam heat, water, telegraph, wireless, telephone, transportation, provision of dock, harbour and pier facilities, warehousing and storage; manufacturing processes performed on a commission basis; undertaking as a business; laundering, cleaning, tailoring and dressmaking; hairdressing, barbering and beauty parlour services; plumbing, heating, painting, decorating, cleaning and renovating, repairing of all kinds; supplying of meals, refreshments and beverages; exhibiting of motion pictures.

NO CHEATING OR EVASION OF THE PRICE CEILING LAW WILL BE TOLERATED

"How the Price Law Works", a pamphlet setting forth how each branch of business must apply the regulations to its own operation will shortly be available at Post Offices and Branch Banks.

The Board will soon open Regional Offices throughout Canada where problems may be discussed. These will co-operate with business in the administration of this policy.

The Price Ceiling law is vital to Canada's war effort.

Trade With South America

As one of the results of the British blockade of European countries, Latin America has been deprived of a considerable source of supplies of manufactured products, which she so sorely needs. Since the outbreak of war South America has been cut off from many of these, and before absorbed a large percentage of her products. In fact, well over half of the exports from many of the southern republics were purchased by continental Europe and Great Britain. It may be said that the United States has always enjoyed a large share of South American trade. Several of the countries bordering on the Caribbean Sea have carried on trade with the United States, where they have found a ready market for their exports. In turn, these same countries imported large quantities of goods from America. Thanks to the British fleet, export and import trade between the Mother Country and South America is still being carried on. The exigencies of war have had very little effect on trade between Britain and South America. Large consignments of manufactured goods, bearing the well-known label "Britain Delivers the Goods," have crossed the outlanes of sea home to South America, to pay for much needed commodities.

* * * *

To Develop Trade

Canada has on recent months entered the picture, by putting forth efforts to develop trade treaties and to establish legations in the countries of South America. Some success has already been attained in negotiating most favored nation trade agreements with several of the republics. Negotiations have been conducted with Argentina, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Uruguay. The successful outcome of any agreement most of necessity be conducted more or less on a reciprocal basis. One might question if South America would offer in any considerable degree, a market for our agricultural products, keeping in mind the wheat areas of Argentina. It is interesting to find that some of the South American republics have imported considerable quantities of wheat and flour in addition to lumber, paper and manufactured products. During the past year exports to some of these countries have greatly exceeded our imports. Increases have been shown in export trade with Chile, Uruguay, Brazil and Argentina. As many of the articles that Canada has to offer South Africa are rubber, cotton, coffee, cocoa, and we should not forget Brazil nuts.

* * * *

Strengthen Democracy

Most penetration of the Latin republics has been gaining momentum for some years. It has been on small part of the efforts of the United States and Canada in cultivating business relations with the Southern Hemisphere, to offset these fifth column activities. By bolstering trade, and thereby relieving much of the distress caused by loss of markets in Europe, the United States and Canada have been following a policy designed to have a protective and in so doing to strengthen the cause of democracy. Germany is said to have prepared a new map of South America, which obliterated all existing boundary lines, and divided the country into five vassal states, bringing Latin America under complete German domination. This map, which was referred to in a recent address of President Roosevelt, is quite revealing in that Hitler's ambitious plan for a new world order has no frustrations. Becoming aware of the danger to their midst, several of the republics have taken stern measures to rid themselves of the Nazi menace, carting the activities of the fifth columnists and deporting them from the country.

Invasion Preparations

Say German Forces Are Put Through An Intensive Training

Travellers from northern Poland reported that German forces there are being put through intensive training in rehearsal for an attempt to invade Britain.

The Germans have gathered great bodies powered with obsolete airplane motors all along the coast of the Baltic, on the Gulf of Danzig, the travellers said, and every day German soldiers practice debarking from them and, swimming in full equipment and protecting themselves from air and sea while on the beaches.

Many thousands of soldiers are engaged in such manoeuvres, according to the report, which said the drills were considered to be a part of invasion preparations.

Radio Mechanics

Men Urgently Needed For The Royal Canadian Air Force

Officials of the Ontario dominion-provincial youth training programme announced the Royal Canadian Air Force has an immediate need of men between the ages of 18 and 45 years to be trained as radio mechanics.

Applicants must be British subjects who have completed grade 10 of secondary school education and must be prepared to enlist in the R.C.A.F. for the completion of a 24 weeks' course. Applications are being received at the dominion-provincial war emergency training programme, east block, parliament buildings, Toronto.

Subsistence rates are being paid as follows: Allowance to unmarried boarding away from home; $7 weekly if boarding at home; $17 for married men.

Will Send Two Subs

Two old submarines considered useful chiefly for coastal patrol and short-range operations were said to be transferred to Britain by the United States, raising the total of warships thus far released to 73. Navy Secretary Frank Knox announced that the underseas craft would be turned over to Britain under provisions of the Lend-Lease act and would be manned by British officers and crews before leaving American waters.

British Timber Used

The fall issue of the Empire Forestry Review, the British Food Office Telegraph has declared in terms severer timber for their supply of imported timber both and Scottish fir being found suitable.

Forests Aid War Finance

Helped To Secure Foreign Exchange Needed In War Effort

The forests play an important part in supporting Canada's war finance, according to the Department of Mines and Resources. This contention is borne out by a study of the relation of external trade in commodities which, with the exception of exports of non-monetary gold, include such materials exported from and imported into this country.

Trade in all commodities amounting wood, wood products, and paper, showed an adverse balance of $22 million dollars in the calendar year 1940. Exports of non-monetary gold, valued at 203 million dollars, offset this deficit and provided a credit balance of 181 million dollars. Though in wood and paper increased the credit balance by $10 million dollars, Trade figures show that the favourable balance obtained from wood and paper in 1940 exceeded the value of non-monetary gold exported by 107 million dollars. This emphasizes the significant role the forests and forest industries assumed in securing foreign exchange necessary to pay for the vast quantities of war materials which Canada has to obtain from sources outside her own borders.

In addition Canada's forests have provided materials for the construction of thousands of wooden buildings required for war purposes. These also constitute the chief source of lumber supplies open to the United Kingdom, and millions of board feet of Canadian lumber are used annually in normal times necessary to the shipment of war materials.

HIRED 1,000 MILES

From now on Dave Dunlap, 19, of Sault Ste. The diving for deft business was the way he made his money, he said.

Managed Economy

As the war proceeds and the war effort develops Canada is steadily veering into a managed economy. That is inevitable, for in no other way can a maximum devotion of national resources to war be achieved. Without expert management the economy of the country would rapidly fall into a state of confusion with inflation, shortages of essentials, excessive profits and many other evils Saskatoon Star-Phoenix.

Damage Caused By The R.A.F. Caused No Resentment

One constantly hears it said that the steady British bombings of objectives inside and outside of Germany have aroused "ineffective" or no "mingling and resentment. Seeing big conclusions are sometimes drawn from these vexatious statements, the amount of aid that the British have given to Russia, and the inability of air bombing to affect the issue.

The truth is that we simply do not know precisely how effective the British bombings of Germany have been. We do know, of course, that they have not been in themselves decisive—otherwise the Nazis could not have advanced into Russia as far as they have. We mean that our bombings have not been important, or that they cannot prove the decisive factor in the end.

For we do not know what the situation would have been to-day if the British had had no substantial bombing force to use against Germany. If it had not been for the British bombing, not being, as the phrase goes, "mingled and resentment," the German factories making planes and destroying key factories, oil-storage tanks and railway yards, could be obtain from sources outside her own borders.

In addition Canada's bombs have prevented materials for the construction of thousands of wooden buildings required for war purposes. These also constitute the chief source of lumber supplies open to the United Kingdom, and millions of board feet of Canadian lumber are used annually in normal times necessary to the shipment of war materials.

British Bombings

No Plane Shortage

A Plane For Every Airman Then Arrives In Britain

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Secretary of State for Air, is considering a plan to send to the Dominions some of the Royal Air Force's new bomber and fighter planes who could be used in train and stimulate recruiting, it was learned unofficially in London.

This source said the output of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan was 60 per cent higher in the second quarter of this year than in the first quarter and 100 per cent. higher in the third quarter than in the first.

He added that there is a "plane for every crew that comes over" and stressed the necessity of hard work by workers in aircraft factories to produce machines for these crews.

Must Save Copper

In what one official called the "toughest" production period of the second, the United States government forbade the use of copper in non-defense building construction after November 1, except for electric wiring, and virtually prohibited its use next year in the manufacture of more than 100 common household articles. The order was issued by Donald M. Nelson, Director of Priorities.

Makes Notable Contribution

Man Who Was Responsible For Growth Of Millions of Trees In The Wood

The notable distinction of having been responsible for the growth of millions of trees in Canada may be claimed by Norman M. Ross, recently retired as superintendent, Dominion Forestry station, Indian Head, after more than 40 years' service.

Largely as a result of his work, the old phrase "the bald headed prairies" has been reduced to practically a meaningless term. To more than 65,000 farms in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, Mr. Ross has arranged, since 1901, for the distribution of 180,000,000 deciduous trees and 2,000,000 evergreens, which now form fine shelterbelts around farm homesteads and adjoining woodlots.

Red Cross Appeals For Blankets

Stocks For Air Raid Victims Are Exhausted Now

Stocks of blankets overseas and those quantities made from Red Cross stores in Canada are running very low. Air raids are more numerous than during the winter and demands for blankets will soon exceed the supply.

For these reasons the Red Cross lately inaugurated a new blanket drive. It commenced well and is not limited to any closing period. Over 100,000 have been handed in already this year. They should be donated from homes or purchased locally and sent to Red Cross Blanket War Work, Depot, 2026 Hamilton street, Regina.

For some who wish to help and cannot buy them locally, we will be glad to accept at 138 provincial office, 2231 Victoria Avenue, Regina, $2.00, or any supplies, be forwarded to our National Office in Toronto which has made an arrangement with eastern mills to supply the material needed at that price.

We are expecting a wide response, since in our 1940 blanket appeal, Saskatchewan donated 11,000 of the 70,000 blankets sent. Those which are almost all in houses of actual air-raid victims, suffering in the British Isles. The blankets are not for soldiers or army hospitals; them are already carefully provided for by the army.

Way To Stop Hitler

Airplane Raids And Purges Have A Cumulative Effect

A British airplane raid against Berlin on the night of August 8 is a blow against Nazi coal mines in Spitsbergen, a few more widely delivered bombers in very hundred American planes ferried across; these things are distant to Berlin feeling pictures against two hundred Nazi divisions with tens of thousands of planes and tanks driving into Russia. But every little grain of sand in the well-oiled enemy machine counts. The way to stop Hitler is to clear h'm up. He is a cumulative effect. CHAPTER XXXI.

For an instant, Devona didn't know whether to run, or stay for relief — glorious, unbelievable release from the terrible fear that had gripped her for the past hours, left her trembling and close to hysteria herself.

"Thank heaven, Dale," she said, as he came to her. "Thank heaven, gun still levelled, face still stony. "You were just in time."

"In time," he said curtly. "You are coming with me in my car so I'll dispense with the formality of handcuffs."

She stared at him. Over his right shoulder she saw the police officers busy fastening grimly efficient handcuffs on the wrists of the sobbing Freds. "What—do you mean?"

"I mean you're under arrest. This is one you didn't realize it, is a fact.

"Arrested!" But of course. Dale would naturally jump to the conclusion. "But Dale. You're mistaken. I wasn't—"

"Save it," he interrupted dryly. "Explain it in court."

"Dale—please. You can be ridiculous! I'm not—I don't know—anything except—"

It raised a skeptical eyebrow. "So, not anything except that a shipment had arrived for you, that was to be delivered at a new hideout. And you went to No. 47 Front St. just for the fun of it, Devona, you?"

"Please let me explain, Dale." She put a short rein on her rising temper. Losing her head now wouldn't help any.

"I'm sorry—not now. I haven't time. Though I'll admit I'm curious. Laughing my surprise to have you walk into the picture."

His bitterness frightened her now that the immediate danger of what had happened this wild, unbelievable night was past. Dale had been in love with her. But how. Marius would never tell the truth. Not now that he was dead. Neither would the girl or Wong, or any of the others. The jury wouldn't believe them, probably, even if they did.

And now—if you'll just tell me where Marius hid the stuff." Dale was saying calmly.

Devona hesitated. If she admitted she knew about the secret wall safe, Dale would be sure, she was "in on it." But if she denied it, and the shipment of opium, dubbed the tip of her finger along the faked signature, felt the rough outline of the knave under her touch.

"Very tricky." Dale murmured, then turned to one of the officers. "Harry, you count the boxes. Should be 24 in all."

"All here," Harry reported after a moment.

"Good. Let's go now."

"Stop doing there." One of the officers snapped as Macias, his dark eyes full of hatred and fear, backed to the door.

Dale nudged his former friend imperceptibly. "Do as you are told, Macias. We've got some of the others down in the wagon already. Wong and Joe have talked—and plenty. The small fish that did slip through the net, we'll catch in due time. Your little game is up right now."

A few moments later, down in front of the Louis Quatorze's imposing entrance, Macias and the Freds were herded into the patrol car.

Dale put Devona into the limousine beside himself.

"Where are we going?" she asked as he headed down town.

"To the City Jail."

"But—surely you aren't—don't—"

"But surely I am and you are," he interrupted quickly. "You are under arrest. Charged with dope running! Not pretty, is it?"

"You know I'm not a—what you said."

"Sh. I don't know it!" he contradicted flatly. "I know you've been employed by Jane Smith for a period of more than six months on the Cunard liner, Caronia, with full knowledge or permission of your parent and guardian. I know that you have been a frequent visitor to known to be the hideout of a gang of dope runners and that every night a shipment of heroin was to be received.

"I saw for myself that you retreated—apparently quite willingly—to the apartments of the gang's leader at an, shall we say, unconventional hour of the morning. And I have been given definite proof that you had in your possession at that time a box of the contraband drug.

"I also saw for myself that you were acquainted with the contents of that box. Circumstantial evidence, all of it. But good, isn't it?"

"Please, Dale. Listen." Devona begged as he turned to trying to help her. "I—quite by chance and good luck—stumbled onto clews that made me suspicious. And I'm glad I came back. I received the telephone message about which you asked, from the police, of address. Macias didn't know I had seen or heard anything. He didn't know I was going to that house to-night. Or at least, I thought he didn't."

"How come he tailed your taxi then, dismissed it, waited for you."

"What, Dale, you suspect—"

"How come he was so careful to bury his find so he left No. 47?"

"—I don't know. He—I thought—"

"Did you think that whatever Macias and his—associates were up to, you would make up for marrying a poor man?"

"Dale, existing now, unconditionally—I only—wanted to help you."

"Thanks, darling," he said dryly! I've just stag without that kind of help."

Dale turned the car into an alley now. Stopped it with a jerk. Well, are we there?"

The City Hall was cold and gloomy at that hour, and strangely deserted except for the glum trio of policemen, their prisoners and a few police men who were on night duty.

Horrified, Devona realized that, in the eyes of the law, it's circle of this intolerable night, she was to be held with the city jail until removed in the morning.

"You—that," she gasped as Dale turned her over to a tired-faced matron.

"Sorry," he shrugged. "My very unpleasant duty. I'll inform your lucky fiance," he added bitterly, "that you're safe and sound in jail in the morning."

Mechanically fighting furious tears, Devona lifted her chin, her eyes blazing. "I suppose you know—I mean you're sure—"

"Yes, I suppose you do. Sorry. It's a job."

"I'll tell never forgive you."

"I think he will—when he understands the circumstances that led you to the arrest."

"That will probably be something to look forward to." Devona flung after him, lips curling with scorn—as we say in reading.

Actually, they didn't put Devona into a cell. That was Dale's influence, the matron told her as she led the way to a dry closet in her own quarters, and spread a clean cot for Devona's slim, quivering body.

It was after 7 when the matron broke the dawn, to take you to breakfast with me," she said, not unkindly. "Better stick yourself up a little."

Devona didn't see Dale again, until he came court concerned. He said no attorney, as earnest young man called Dwyer, who talked with her a half an hour, questioning, commenting until he'd learned her every thought, every suspicion, could times her every move for the last 24 hours.

"Your situation is unfortunate," he said her finally. "But not hopeless. The weakest part of your story is that you determined to pursue the evidence to the next morning unassisted. I don't know that we can successfully use it in court. Otherwise it should be easy. If you could get give me some more definite reasons for your activity we could—" He searched her face anxiously.

But Devona shook her head. "I've told you because I wanted to make you—and Dale—understand. I will not send Dale on a wild-goose chase."

"But you must have known that if this were really a shipment of narcotics, you were in grave danger going alone!"

"I suppose I did. I really didn't think much about that."

The young attorney paced the floor of the cell-like room, thinking busily. "That's just it. A girl doesn't go deliberately into that part of town on an errand as dangerous as that without a compelling" reason. I still feel—"

That's the only reason. To help Dale. Devona's lips formed the words, but she could not utter them. I suspected him. I wanted to see him alone, and a very good reason for it. Regardless hospital where I was taken with malaria and pneumonia."

"For 16 weeks in Mogadiscio we had two cups of tea a day and a piece of bread and it was nothing to feel the food full of living things."

Then suddenly the British advance and the Italians "lost all their swank and became very unlikeable."

At last, Hardy said, South African tanks and armored cars arrived from the town and the Italians fled.

"The retreat was a sight for sore eyes of cigs and about half a dozen of them became of their private property overnight. Grabbed their rations."

A British cruiser took the retreated Duke Abomzman to recuperate and Hardy later joined the crew of a vessel bound for Britain.

War Prisoners

Tell Of Brutal Treatment By Germans and Italians

Privations and brutalities during many months' captivity in enemy hands were so terrible that when rescue finally came six of them blind their reason, one of the victims reported in a statement at London headquarters.

The six, all soldiers of other subjects nationals run short we anticipate that the Christmas mail will be good service in the last war, will be used again, a medical authority said.

In the first Great War splasgnum moss was gathered within bandage cloth and employed to replace absorbent cotton. It was found to be a most valuable because of its antiseptic qualities.

A cyder-in-council added splasgnum moss to the list of remedies which cannot be sent to Britain without a permit.

This means that the moss will be available for the use of Canadian soldiers overseas.

Dead bugs and splasgnum are expected to have little commercial value.

Research directed at widening the use of North Dakota's large lignite coal deposits is being conducted by a chemical engineering staff established at the University of North Dakota by H. O. Yutter, instructor in chemical engineering.

A carbonizing unit is under construction at the university, which will remove lignite constituents as are coal tar, ammonia and water, and the clear obtained in the process will be used to produce activated carbon.

Montana board authorities that the Montana deposits are "ideally beneficial" material because of its use in gas masks.

TO THE WOMEN OF CANADA

Here is One Big War Job which You Alone Can Do

"Ceiling Prices" Must Be Maintained

This is an appeal to the women of Canada. There is one vital part of our war effort which depends on you.

Your government has placed a "ceiling" on retail prices. You are the buyers of four out of every five dollars worth of all the goods sold in this country. Your whole-hearted help is needed in this price control plan. If every woman does her part, it cannot fail.

Its success will be a big step on the road to victory. Its failure would be a serious blow to our war effort. You can tip the balance towards success.

Will you, then, undertake to make the new rapid control of commodity prices an established fact? We know you will. And we know that when you undertake this task it is as good as done.

This is the work you are asked to do

1. Make a list of commodities to buy.
We want you to sit down today and make a list of the things you buy from week to week and from month to month. Write down food and clothing items in particular, because these account for the biggest share of your expenditures. But we want you to list those articles you buy at the drug store, hardware store, and other stores, too.

2. Make notes about quality.
Now go over your list again and mark down the necessary details about quality, type, grade and size. Then when making future purchases you will be able to compare values as well as prices.

3. Write down prices.
After each item we want you to write down, if you can, the highest price charged at your store during the period September 15 to October 11, 1941. If you cannot remember the prices charged during that period, fill in your list with today's prices. Our survey shows that retailers, with few exceptions, are keeping prices well within the "ceiling" levels. As competition is being discovered they are being quickly brought into line.

4. Keep this list — use it when you buy!
Make up this price list neatly and accurately. You will not be able to get it back from the store. Keep adding to your list from day to day. Make it your permanent check list—your personal safeguard against any further rise in prices.

Prices May be Different in Different Stores

There has always been a difference in prices in different stores—even stores in the same locality. This may depend on the kind of service the store gives, or the way it operates. Some stores, for instance, have delivery services, give credit, or provide other extra services.

Under the new Price Ceiling Order these will still be differences in prices at different stores. The new price regulations will not do away with competition. The highest prices in any particular store must not be higher than the highest prices in force at that store during the period September 15 to October 11. They may be a little lower or a little higher than the prices in other stores.

The prices you will mark down will be the highest prices charged at the store where you shop.

A Few Points to Remember

1. The ceiling price is not necessarily the price you paid. It is the highest price at which the store sold the particular item between September 15 and Oct. 11.

2. A merchant may reduce his prices for [illegible] reasons—he may also raise them provided they do not go above the ceiling prices.

3. Variations in seasonal prices on fresh fruits and vegetables are permitted. Ratings on seasonal markets will be announced from time to time by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board in newspapers and over the radio.

4. Fill out your price list without bothering about purchase. In most cases it is a matter of a few minutes to add under the price ceiling. The war has left him short-staffed and the Christmas rush is on.

Items most frequently bought

This is one intended as a complete list. It is simply offered as a guide. Add to it the other items you buy or expect to buy.

Item	Description (Size, Quality, etc.)	Store	Price	Item	Description (Size, Quality, etc.)	Store	Price
FOOD				LAUNDRY, Other's, Women's, Children's

Why you must do your part

To ensure the success of this price control plan, every woman in Canada should make a list. Retailers are showing a splendid spirit of co-operation. The great majority of them are determined to play fair with you. But they do not control the whole price situation. A few might start to take the keep your list handy. Check the prices you pay against it.

If a price seems higher than the ceiling, ask your merchant about it. If further information is necessary, report the full details in writing. Address your letter to the Prices and Supply Commissioner, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, at one of the following: Vancouver, Edmonton, Regina, Winnipeg, Hamilton, Kingston, Toronto, Sackville, Montreal, Quebec City, Saint John, Halifax, Charlottetown.

SEED SUPPLIES

It may seem a trifle early to begin thinking about seed, but it may soon be too late to secure good seed of coarse grains and forage crops. The farmer who waits until the end of March to discover that he needs 50 or 100 bushels of seed barley will probably find it necessary to use third-rate stuff.

The demand for seed grain this winter in western Canada, combined with the shortage of elevator storage space, is resulting in a rapid turnover. Threshing, harvesting conditions were so bad in many districts, resulting in large quantities of damp and sprouted grain, that local seed shortages will be numerous.

The Agricultural Department of The North-West Line Elevators Association does not hesitate to advise a germination test for all oats and barley seed this year. Samples of wheat, oats, barley, flax or rye need only be delivered to a grain buyer or any line elevator company associated with this Department in order to obtain a reliable test.

Any farmer who knows now that he will require seed oats or barley next spring, should take immediate steps to secure the required amount.

The situation respecting supplies of grass and clover seed may be similar, and delay in ordering may lead to disappointment in the spring.

Of course, many farmers will be unable to decide upon the question of coarse grain and forage crop seed requirements until the Dominion Government announces a wheat policy for 1942.
